PRESIDIO CEREMONY

End Of A Long Career

By PAT ANGLE

When Command Sgt. Maj. Frank A. Carson first tried to enlist in the Army in 1933, he was informed there were no openings at that time and that his name would have to be put on a waiting list.

The personable Fairfax man laughingly recalls that things were a bit different in those predraft days. "The Army was very small, about 100,000 men, and there weren't always vacancies," he said. "For example, I had to wait 14 months before there was a vacancy and I could join."

Yesterday, in a ceremony at the Presidio of San Francisco, the 56-year-old Carson retired from the military after a career that spanned nearly four decades. His brass gleaming and four rows of medals decorating his uniform, Carson rode into the Presidio ceremony astride a horse, and bowed out of the Army with a newly awarded Legion of Merit as numerous high-ranking enlisted men watched. Only one officer took part in the ceremony.

The other day, Carson relaxed in the living room of his attractive home and looked back fondly on the Army. He said he has absolutely no regrets about the decision he made 37 years ago in an Oakland recruiting office.

Carson finds it almost impossible to describe adequately "the personal satisfaction that comes from serving your country."

"You can do a lot of things in life," he said. "You can work for a big corporation or something like that, but serving your country means you really accomplish something in life. It's the greatest feeling in life."

The Army has changed — and for the better — since Frank Carson enlisted at Fort McDowell on Angel Island in 1934 at the age of 19.

The pay these days is definitely better, he said, and so are the uniforms. When Carson joined, his base pay was $17.85 a month, he remembers, and the uniforms offered the ultimate in noncomfort, including standup collars, coarse wool material and elastic britches.

Most important, according to Carson, the Army of 1971 offers more constructive training and a greater variety of programs than the Army of 1934.

"The Army today is a good career for a young man or woman, particularly for the person who doesn't have an opportunity to go to college," he said. "It offers the world's best vocational training and greater opportunities to learn a trade or profession than you can find anywhere else."

Carson, who retired as senior enlisted man of the 13th Artillery Group (Air Defense) at Fort Scott in San Francisco, has been assigned to antiaircraft and air defense units throughout his career. In 1937 as a buck sergeant in Hawaii, he was a gun commander of the first type of antiaircraft artillery weapon used by the Army, a three-inch model 1971.

During World War II, he fought in the Solomon Islands and at Luzon with the 37th Division. He saw action in three campaigns during the Korean War with the 2nd Infantry Division.

Except for two tours in Korea and a year's hitch in Thule, Greenland ("like living on a different planet"), Carson has spent most of his recent years of service in the San Francisco area stationed at Forts Barry, Baker, Cronkhite and Scott.

He is happy to be with his family, which has called Marin home for the past 19 years, and said he found the separations from his wife, two daughters and son the hardest thing about military life.

In the past 30 years, initially as a first sergeant and then as a sergeant major, Carson has had responsibility for about 21,000 men. Now he would like to try something different.

Carson, whose warmth and genial personality belie the stereotyped image of a first sergeant, admitted his secret desire is to work as a chauffeur.

"Driving is very relaxing for me and, besides, as a chauffeur I won't be responsible for any groups of men," he explained with a laugh.

Until he finds the job he seeks, Carson will have plenty to keep him busy. His home at 15 Woodlane Drive is a microcosmic orchard, complete with 72 fruit trees, vegetables and flowers.

He has almost every kind of fruit that will grow in this area, from pomegranates to loquats, and berries of every description, including thornless blackberries.

Not only does Carson graft, plant, prune, spray and cultivate the trees, he also takes charge of their fruits. "I'm the jam maker in this house and I can up a storm when fruit season arrives," he said with a smile.

LAST MEDAL — The Legion of Merit is pinned to the uniform of Command Sgt. Maj. Frank A. Carson of Fairfax, who retired in ceremonies at the Presidio of San Francisco yesterday after a long military career. Brig. Gen. R. W. Fye awards the medal.

Orr To Demand Hearing

Fairfax Police Chief James R. Orr will demand an open hearing on the charges which led to his firing Thursday by City Administrator Robert E. Crowe, Orr's attorney revealed today.

Meanwhile, Mayor Cornelis Van Vliet has called a special meeting of the city council for 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club, apparently to formalize Crowe's action — which was the upshot of three closed council sessions.

The official notice of the special meeting said only that it will be to discuss "personnel." But Crowe said yesterday, "I'm sure everybody knows what it will be about ... to confirm what already has been done."

Crowe predicted the council would convene in open session, go into executive session to discuss developments, and return to open session to take formal action.

The separate hearing, for which no date has been set, will be conducted by the city's five-man board of review, according to Leonard Shaw, Orr's attorney. Board members are Frank L. Lawrence, Freeman Blake, Hugh Gallagher, William T. Benson and Alfred F. Daubenfield.

Meanwhile, Shaw challenged whether the firing was even legal. The city code, he said, provides that dismissal must be by "the appointing authority" — in Orr's case, the council. Shaw reported that the notice of dismissal was signed only by Crowe, and gave no indication of any orders by the council — which reportedly had split 3-2 on whether to dismiss the chief, who had headed the department for nine years.

Shaw, former Marin deputy district attorney, added that on Monday, Chief Orr would exercise his right of response to the charges attached to the notice of dismissal. "Some of them are pretty vague and hard to answer properly," Shaw said.

Shaw said that after Orr's answer is prepared, both it and the city's charges will be made public. He said the list of allegations included all the matters reported previously in the Independent-Journal except the charge that Orr had failed to tell Crowe how to reach him during the chief's recent vaca-

Reagan Hits Court On Welfare 'Bungle'

Charge Of Holding Up Checks To Thousands

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has accused the state Supreme Court of "bungling interference" with California's infant welfare reform law and delaying aid checks to thousands of recipients.

Employing some of the angriest words he has spoken publicly against the judiciary, the governor yesterday denounced state and federal court welfare decisions this week as "hasty and uninformed."

Top administration officials called a news conference to announce that because of the confusion resulting from the rulings, seven counties withheld mailing welfare checks to recipients in the massive Aid to Families with Dependent Children program (AFDC).

State attorneys were dispatched to the Supreme Court to appeal for a clarification to overcome the delay in mailing the checks. The court did not act but indicated it may consider the issue Monday, welfare administrators said.

The administration identified the counties which withheld sending checks as Amador, Colusa, Kings, Plumas, Stanislaus, Yolo and parts of populous Los Angeles.

But in a move aimed at getting checks in the mail, state Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson late last night adopted an "emergency regulation" designed to give local directors the authority to issue AFDC payments.

The regulation, rushed to the secretary of state's office shortly before midnight, basically would allow the counties to make adjustments in a recipient's Oct. 15 check for any overpayment or underpayment in his Oct. 1 check.

Assistant Secretary of State H.P. Sullivan was summoned at his home and arrangements were made so the secretary of state's capitol office could be unlocked and the emergency document officially recorded. Telegrams were dispatched to county welfare directors informing them of the action.

"Further bungling interference by the courts regardless of intentions, or honest errors, regardless of how soon they are corrected, will simply prolong the discomfort of those they purport to be protecting and will add unnecessary costs to the program," Reagan declared.

The governor's bitter statement was distributed by his office in the wake of a state Supreme Court action Thursday intended to clarify an earlier decision which blocked implementation of a key provision of the new 1971 Welfare Reform Act.

The act, approved after inten-

FESTIVAL EXHIBIT — Casey Miller, 12, was among the first visitors today to the Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival as he looks at a glass work by Jim Keever of Larkspur. The two-day festival, in Old Mill Park, was to be open until 7 o'clock tonight, and again from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. tomorrow.

'SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE'

Mill Valley Art Festival Opens Annual Two-Day Run

The Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival opened its annual show today in Old Mill Park with "something for everyone," Independent-Journal art critic Ada Garfinkle reported.

The exhibit of fine arts painting and sculpture, photographs, and craft works will be open until 7 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. tomorrow.

Art-in-action displays for children as well as adults were scattered among the trees, along with the works of artists and craftsmen from places as far away as Santa Barbara.

The festival committee's prescreening of exhibitors' entry applications, though not their works, brought out "talents from very good to mediocre — and even some atrocious," Mrs. Garfinkle reported.

She noted as "remarkably good" the white-on-white high key photography by Santa Barbara Art Museum cameraman Wayne McCall, the close-up portraits by Mill Valley photographer Jonathan Perry of Mill Valley, the colored prints of wildflowers and mushrooms by Dolores Osterlund of San Francisco and the leather goods of Dan Martin and the bead-and-brass jewelry of Dorn Meisner.

Numerous husband and wife teams submitted entries, including the driftwood and ceramic hangings of Daniel O'Connor, accompanied by his wife Sandra's stoneware bird

Grand Juror Resigns In Protest Over Indictments In Breakout

By C.P. McCARTHY

A 27-year-old member of the Marin County Grand Jury resigned yesterday after he and two other jurors protested indictments returned in connection with the Aug. 21 breakout attempt at San Quentin Prison.

The juror, Gerald A. Hawes of San Rafael, said in letters of resignation to Samuel W. Gardiner, presiding judge of Marin Superior Court, and Milen C. Dempster, panel foreman:

"The incidents of the last few days have reinforced me in my decision to offer my resignation. Especially is that process of indictment vulnerable when the members of a jury who are ultimately responsible for the indictment are willing to surrender their independence to the public prosecutor."

Earlier yesterday the jury returned seven indictments sought by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales in connection with the violence at San Quentin which left three guards and three inmates dead.

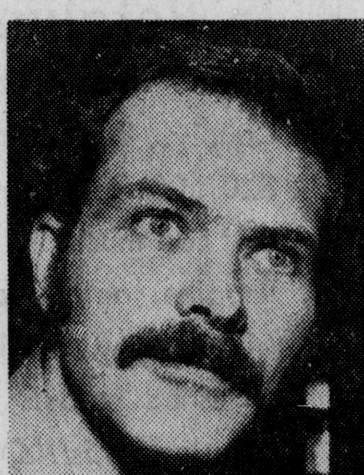
Hawes was one of three jurors who left the grand jury session in disgust following the jury's vote on the indictments. (It was incorrectly reported yesterday that Jurors Richard W. Beban of San Rafael, James D. Kilty of San Anselmo and Harold K. Graves Jr. of Mill Valley had left the session. Beban and Kilty did, but it was Hawes who accompanied them, not Graves.)

Hawes, a research analyst with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco, added in his letters of resignation that he had "serious doubts about the grand jury" and questioned "inequities and injustices perpetrated through the secret indicting process."

He charged that "the unwillingness of this jury to seek impartial legal advice during indicting sessions makes impossible a fair and just procedure which can mete out genuine justice."

Continued participation, he said, would be "tantamount to approval of the grand jury system and the judgments of this particular jury, some judgments and decisions which I consider to be not only fallacious but immoral."

Meanwhile, Beban said today he also was considering resigning. "Resignation is one of many tactics in the battle we're fighting," he said.



GERALD HAWES
Jurors 'surrender'

Beban said he was "very sorry" to hear of Hawes's action. "I think Mr. Hawes has a definite, deep commitment to justice and came to his decision as a matter of conscience," he said.

Jury foreman Dempster also expressed regret at the news. "My own personal comment is that if this is true, I regret it very deeply and feel that all of the members of the jury will regret it," he said.

"I consider Mr. Hawes a dedicated and intelligent man," Dempster said.

Judge Gardiner rejected Hawes's criticisms of the grand jury, saying "this whole treatment of the grand jury process is being overemphasized."

"The grand jury doesn't try anyone. It charges them ... some people seem to assume this is a trial, but it is not.

Bales, the district attorney, could not be reached for comment.

Indicted yesterday on murder and conspiracy charges were attorney Stephen Bingham, missing since Aug. 21, and six inmates.

Bingham is accused of smuggling a gun to Soledad Brother George Jackson, launching the escape attempt. Jackson was among those killed, prison officials saying he was shot from a prison tower as he ran toward a wall.

Newton Attends Peking Reception

HONG KONG (UPI) — Huey Newton, a cofounder of the Black Panther Party, attended a national day reception in Peking yesterday, according to a New China News Agency (NCNA) report today.

Newton

Premier Chou En-lai also attended the reception, given by the cultural group under the state council and the People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries.

Newton was accompanied by two other Black Panther members, Miss Elaine Brown, Panther information officer, and Robert Bay, Newton's bodyguard.

The trio slipped quietly into China early this week after a stop in Hong Kong.

Newton is scheduled to go on trial Oct. 12 in Oakland, Calif., in connection with the slaying of an Oakland policeman. He is charged with voluntary manslaughter.

Stabbed To Death

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An administration official was stabbed to death yesterday in the new Executive Office Building near the White House. Police reported no suspects yet.

The victim, identified as Ritchie H. Reed, 30, of suburban Cheverly, Md., was found about 4 p.m. on the floor of a washroom in the building where he worked as director of economic resources for the Commission on Population Growth and the American Future.

Harassment

MOSCOW (UPI) — Britons in Moscow today reported incidents of harassment by the Soviets, including one in which a police officer prevented women from entering a nursery school to take their children home.

At the same time, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda published an article accusing Britain of carrying out extensive espionage activities against Soviet Union.

Closes Station

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI)—The United States officially ended its military presence in Trinidad and Tobago yesterday by turning over its 932-acre missile tracking station to the local government.

Attending the ceremonies at the Chaguarmas station were Prime Minister Dr. Eric Williams and U. S. Ambassador J. Fife Symington. The major portion of the 12,000 acres which once comprised a U.S. naval base was handed over to Trinidad and Tobago in 1967.

Showdown Monday

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan and Democratic legislators, still deeply split over reform of taxation, plan to return to the bargaining table Monday for what shapes up as a showdown conference.

"Both sides have positions that are unacceptable to the other," Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti reported. "I suspect that Monday we'll know one way or the other if we're going to have tax reform."

No Show Capp

LONDON (UPI) — Cartoonist Al Capp said today he failed to appear in a Boston Municipal Court for a rendition hearing on morals charges because his lawyers told him it was "completely all right" to be absent.

Capp told United Press International he was in London for three days "because I have some business here." He said he did not know a warrant for his arrest had been issued Friday in Boston for his failure to appear.

"Oh good God," he said, "I conferred with all my lawyers and they said it was completely all right ... completely all right for me to leave."

Paintings Recovered

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Police announced today they had recovered intact the nine paintings worth more than $1 million stolen from a church on Wednesday.

A police spokesman said the paintings were found in a car during a routine search in connection with another crime. The driver of the car was arrested along with a second man.

The nine paintings stolen from St. Johns Church at Mechlin included a "Christ on the Cross" by Flemish Master Peter Paul Rubens.

Dumps Counter

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Senate has given up on an electronic vote-counting scoreboard which has cost roughly $168,000 since it was installed in 1967. It seldom has been used.

Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges said Friday the large board which hangs on the Senate wall will be removed by the company which leases it to the state.

The machine was installed before the 1967 legislative session at a cost of $118,000 and has cost $10,000 in maintenance each legislative session since.

'Flour' Sentence

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—U.S. District Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin Friday sentenced to four years in prison a man who arranged for a federal narcotics agent to buy 12 ounces of flour for $9,000. The undercover agent thought he had bought heroin.

Medicare Hospital Costs Up

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Starting Jan. 1, 20.5 million Medicare patients will have to pay a larger share of their hospital bills.

Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of the department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), ordered the step yesterday. He blamed rising hospital costs, which he said climbed 13 per cent in the Medicare program in 1970.

Starting next year, Medicare patients will have to pay the first $68 of their hospital bills — an increase of $8.

The increase was denounced by William R. Hutton, executive director of the 3 million member National Council of Senior Citizens, who described it as a "cruel blow to poor elderly people living on Social Security and welfare."

FREEZE ASKED

"If the President was really a compassionate man and he cared about old people, he would freeze the Medicare (hospital) deductibles and introduce legislation to remove them altogether," Hutton said.

Richardson said his order emphasized "the urgency of action to put a brake on hospital costs escalation."

The secretary said steps to curb rising hospital costs would be part of Phase II of President Nixon's economic stabilization program, which will follow the current 90-day wage-price freeze.

Richardson noted that about one-fifth of the more than 20 million persons enrolled in the Medicare program were hospitalized during the past year, at a cost of $800 for an average 12 days of treatment.

Patients in the program pay the average cost of the first day of hospital care —now $60.

UNTIL 61ST DAY

The rest is paid by the government until the 61st day. At that point, Medicare patients begin paying $15 a day, and this continues through the 90th day. The $15 fee will be increased to $17 Jan. 1.

Richardson said post-hospital treatment in nursing homes will increase $1 a day next year from the 21st through the 100th day, rising from $7.50 to $8.50 a day.

The law requires HEW to set Medicare hospital rates based on annual changes in hospital costs.

A spokesman said the Cost of Living Council, which administers the current wage-price freeze, was informed of the new Medicare charges but "not for their approval."

The Medicare program also provides optional doctor bill insurance for 19.7 million persons. The doctor bill premium required rose in July from $5.30 to $5.60 a month.

Hirohito Arrives In Paris From Brussels

PARIS (UPI)—Emperor Hirohito of Japan arrived today on what an aide called "a sentimental journey" to revisit the Paris that impressed him on his first trip to Europe half a century ago.

The special Japan Airlines DC8 jet carrying the monarch, 70, his Empress Nagako, 68, and their party arrived from Brussels.

McCarthyism Charge At Nader

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., accused Ralph Nader today of using the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's tactics in seeking establishment of a consumer protection "tyrant" within government.

Holifield, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, responded in an interview, to Nader's charges that a consumer protection bill approved by the committee under Holifield's sponsorship was gutted of its most important provisions.

The California Democrat accused Nader aides of prompting a picket line around Holifield's Pico Rivera, Calif., office. He said Nader, guided by "amateurish idealism," lobbied him and other committee members endlessly, then seized headlines by criticizing any who disagreed with his proposals to strengthen the bill.

Holifield said a lobbying bill recently approved by the House Ethics Committee, on which Holifield serves, would require Nader and his aides to register as lobbyists. They now are exempt because they are not paid to lobby.

While the committee considered the bill in closed session Monday, Holifield said, an aide to Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., a Nader ally, shuttled in and out, keeping Nader posted and carrying the consumer advocate's instructions in to Rosenthal.

"I was personally lobbied by this man —both through phone calls at home and office visits —more than I've been lobbied by anyone on anything for 10 years," Holifield said.

"Nader's method of opposition is to continuously make derogatory charges against any person of prominance that comes within his rifle sights," Holifield said. "A new charge every day gives him a new headline.

"This is a time proven method of obtaining publicity, practiced at one time by Sen. Joe McCarthy ... Mr. Nader's cry of 'wolf, wolf' against anyone who disagrees with him will soon cease to cause alarm or attention."

Holifield defended his bill, which would create an independent federal agency to represent consumer interests in proceedings before other government agencies such as the Food and Drug Administration and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Amendments backed by Nader and Rosenthal would have empowered the agency to subpoena material and to participate in informal as well as formal proceedings of other government departments. The amendments narrowly were defeated by the committee and will be offered on the House floor.

"It's a good bill," Holifield said of the committee's version. "... It was not written by Mr. Nader or any other special interest advocate.

"Nader and Rosenthal wanted a super agency which could interfere with the procedures of other agencies and dominate them. They wanted a tyrant."

Asked to comment on Holifield's charges, Nader said "all of Proctor & Gamble's detergents wouldn't wash Chairman Holifield's mouth out."

"He can deal it out but he can't take it," Nader said. "He's been playing the White House's game, betraying his own party and running to Republicans on the committee for instructions from the White House.

"As a supposed big labor advocate, why does he worry about a picket line that tells the public what he's doing behind closed doors?"

Nader said his "lobbying" Holifield consisted of two visits to the congressman's office and one telephone call to his home.

"On lobbying, why doesn't Chairman Holifield tell the American people how much General Electric and Westinghouse have wined and dined him to curry his favor on atomic energy projects?" Nader said. Holifield formerly was chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee, and still is a member.

Deception Charge In Angela Fund

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A local church group invesitgating a $10,000 gift by a committee of the United Presbyterian Church to the Angela Davis Defense Fund asserts there was a deception in the way the proposal was presented for approval.

An official committee of the Presbytery of San Francisco has been investigating the controversial grant for the last three months and it took issue with the way the grant was reported by the Council on Church and Race.

The committee said yesterday the Council told the 103rd General Assembly the gift was to the "Marin County Black Defense Fund" when it was actually to the Angela Davis Defense Fund.

"We can only conclude that the Council on Church and Race was derelict in its duty in improperly and incorrectly reporting the $10,000 grant in such a way as to create the impression of apparent deception," the committee said.

The report was issued and the matter is now considered closed said the Rev. O'Linn Maguire.

After the grant to the jailed Miss Davis received publicity, thousands of church members protested and many quit the church. Later a group of black Presbyterian ministers reimbursed the church for the sum sent the Davis fund.

Push For Married Priests Is Gaining

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Roman Catholic Church hierarchy today appeared ready to accept a limited number of married priests, but only under terms already suggested by Pope Paul VI.

A key signal came yesterday when Cardinal John F. Dearden of Detroit said American bishops agreed the question was worth consideration.

Archbishop Maxim Hermaniuk of the Ukrainian rite in Winnipeg, Canada, said both celibate and married priests were authentic priests. An African cardinal warned that celibacy is more of an issue in African countries than anyone suspects.

But Cardinal Joseph Hoffner of Cologne, West Germany, who made the keynote speech yesterday, said no further examination of the celibacy issue was necessary for the time being.

Debate continues today.

The subject of celibacy emerged during full-scale dialogue on the priesthood yesterday with a dozen speakers at the third and largest Synod of Bishops alluding to it or mentioning it outright.

Thieu In Call For Vote Of Confidence

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu called on South Vietnamese voters today for an overwhelming vote of confidence in tomorrow's election in which he is the only candidate, to show the Communists "they will fail if they persist in their aggressions."

Thieu, in a 15-minute speech today delivered as head of state and not a candidate, said:

"Once again I am appealing to you as compatriots to go to the polls calmly Sunday and do your duty as citizens in a free and democratic way.

"We must make our national prestige bright to the world. We must make the Communists and the destructors fail by making the election of the nation successful. If we don't show that we are able to make the Communists fail in the aggressions, then we won't be able to win."

Thieu said, in the remarks taped earlier in the day, that the Communists had intensified their activities in efforts to curb voter turnout "but you have shown yourselves very courageous and deserving."

Actually, the Vietnamese military reported about 15 Communist-initiated incidents directly related to the election, about the normal level and considerably fewer than the 51 reported the day before the Aug. 29 National Assembly elections.

Thieu spent about an hour at the television station taping his speech.

He emerged from the station, smiling confidently and waving at newsmen. "See you tomorrow," he called as he left in his limousine.

In Saigon, three American Roman Catholic priests and a Jewish sociologist from Ohio chained themselves to the U. S. embassy gate to protest the war.

The election campaign ended officially at noon (midnight yesterday EDT) but demonstrations were reported in Hue and Da Nang where 30 high school students tried to barricade the main north-south highway through the city.

They carried red and blue banners that said "Against the Oct. 3 Election."

A dozen college students and a professor were arrested in Hue and six students were beaten during three separate demonstrations in the northern city.

In Saigon, security was tight with many restaurants and bars shut down. GIs were kept out of the capital.

In the war zone, U.S. and South Vietnamese army helicopters today airlifted 700 South Vietnamese paratroopers to the Cambodian border in a new allied counter-offensive to crush the eight-day-old North Vietnamese campaign northeast of Saigon.

South of Saigon, military sources said 18 South Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 64 more wounded when Communist guerrillas attacked an army outpost in the Mekong Delta before dawn today. They said 16 guerrillas were reported slain in the fighting near Kien Thien, 110 miles southwest of Saigon. The defenders called in U.S. and South Vietnamese air and artillery support during the clash.

In Long Khanh province, 40 miles east of Saigon,, elements of the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division and the South Vietnamese 18th Infantry Division reported boxing in a guerrilla force of undetermined size. The Americans reported killing two guerrillas while losing one of their own. The South Vietnamese claimed they killed nine of the Communists while suffering "light" casualties.

No Break In Strike At Ports

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

For the first time in American history, most of the docks on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts have been closed at the same time by striking longshoremen.

Coal miners from seven states were also off the job today bringing the total of striking miners and longshoremen to more than 140,000.

The strike yesterday by the 45,000 East Coast dockworkers represented by the International Longshoremen's Association appeared to be less serious than the three-month walkout by 15,000 Pacific Coast longshoremen.

A spokesman for the Southern Pacific Railroad said an embargo had been placed effective Friday on West Coast railroads carrying freight to East and Gulf Coast ports. A similar embargo may be extended nationwide, the Association of American Railroade said in Washington.

The U.S. Postal Service already has clamped an embargo on international bulk shipments.

President Nixon watched dock strike developments from the Key Biscayne, Fla., but gave no indication that he would invoke the Taft-Hartley act which could force the dockmen back on the job for another 80 days.

"We do not feel there is a national emergency in existence," White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said. "We do not intend to take action to interfere with negotiations at the present time."

The Pacific strike has left about 190 ships backed up along the West Coast.

Gulf Coast dockworkers — who voted earlier in the week to stay on the job —closed major ports in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., with their walkout. Workers in the Beaumont-Port Arthur, Tex., area also voted Friday to strike, but stayed on the job. Dockworkers also remained on the job at Houston, Galveson and Corpus Christi, Tex.

Bargaining continued between West Coast longshoremen and management, but East Coast shippers and dockworkers recessed their talks until Monday.

Among Marin County works in the show, Mrs. Garfinkle noted wood sculptures by Rick Knoll of San Rafael, unusual musical instruments and chess sets by Mark Hanchett of Mill Valley, and embossed stoneware by Geanne Ellner of Mill Valley.

The festival jury spent the opening hours of the show selecting the one piece that will be honored with the annual purchase award. The winner will be displayed in the Genesis Gallery in Mill Valley.

sive negotiations between Reagan and the legislature last summer, took effect Friday, but the court stayed a section which would raise grants to about 300,000 AFDC families and reduce grants for another 150,000.

Reagan asserted, "Due to hasty and uninformed court decisions in the last few days (including a feeble eleventh hour attempt by the state Supreme Court to correct its own error), the courts have succeeded in delaying welfare payments to thousands of needy recipients, preventing payments of deserved increases to thousands of others, and thoroughly confusing those responsible for administering the system at the state and county level as well as the public in general."

Acting on an action filed by the militant California Welfare Rights Organization, the state court stayed the important provision until it could study the issue further. The CWRO argued the section violated federal law.

The court on Thursday amended the action after questions arose over whether the ruling cast a doubt on the state's authority to make any welfare payments. The court ordered that temporarily at least AFDC families would receive the same level of support they had been receiving before yesterday.

ORR

tion. Crowe also said this was not among the complaints.

There are "lots of vague charges" about departmental operations and record keeping, Shaw said.

Although the specific charges against Orr have not been made public, they are known to include a claim that the chief failed to report alcohol purchase by juveniles from a Fairfax store to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and that Orr pulled a gun on a police cadet in the office two years ago.

City Atty. Wallace S. Myers, who will represent the city at any hearings, declined comment on the case.

Leap From Span Is Investigated

Sketchy reports that a man leaped off the Golden Gate Bridge shortly before dawn today were being investigated by the California Highway Patrol.

The patrol said a motorist told bridge toll-takers that he had seen a man leave a car on the span and leap over the railing. The witness's identity was not obtained by the toll attendant.

A car found on the bridge was found to have license plates that did not match its registration, the patrol said.

More Violence

BELFAST, Northern reland (UPI)—British troops wounded a sniper in battles with gunmen in Belfast during the night. The fighting capped a day of violence in the city which cost the life of another British soldier.

12 Safety Tips For Bike Riders

With increased bicycle traffic accompanying the opening of the fall semester in local schools, the Independent-Journal offers this set of rules for safe riding:

1. Observe all traffic regulations — red and green lights, one-way streets, stop signs.
2. Keep to the right side and ride in a straight line. Always ride in single file.
3. Have white light on front and danger signal on rear for night riding.
4. Have satisfactory signaling device to warn of approach.
5. Give pedestrians the right of way. Avoid sidewalks — otherwise use extra care.
6. Look out for cars pulling out into traffic. Keep sharp lookout for sudden opening of auto doors.
7. Never hitch onto other vehicles, stunt or race in traffic.
8. Never carry other riders — carry no packages that obstruct vision or prevent proper control of cycle.
9. Be sure brakes are operating efficiently and keep the bicycle in perfect running condition.
10. Slow down at all street intersections and look to right and left before crossing.
11. Always use proper hand signals for turning and stopping.
12. Don't weave in or out of traffic or swerve from side to side.

Business Is Brisk On Passports

The San Rafael Post Office has been doing a brisk business in passports since it began providing the service late in May.

About 1,500 passport applications have been processed through the office, according to Angelo Bon.

Bon and Donald Howe have been designated by the Postmaster General to perform the passport service in Marin. In May, Congress passed legislation extending passport availability through the postal system. Before then, applicants had to file through county clerks' offices, federal courts, or State Department offices.

Bon said the San Rafael office also has processed many applications for passport amendments, such as changes in married name or addition of spouse or children to an individual's passport.

Most applicants receive their completed passports from the State Department within 5 to 10 days of applying at the Post Office, Bon said. Failure to bring proof of citizenship such as a birth certificate delays processing of some applications, he explained.

Similar passport service is available at the Santa Rosa Post Office, Bon said.

Ross Council Sets A Special Meeting

The Ross Town Council will meet in special session Monday at 8 p.m. at town hall to consider appropriating funds for replacement of a drainage line from the Ross Common to Corte Madera Creek.

About $3,500 is needed to replace the old line, which apparently has collapsed.

Vanishing Trolley

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—The last of Copenhagen's trolley lines, No. 5 going through the inner city, will give way to a bus line by the autumn of 1972.

MARINITE DEFEATED FOR DEMO POST

I-J Special Report

ONTARIO — Blanche Goldstein of Sacramento has been elected state women's chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, defeating Kathleen Hill of Mill Valley in a 69-28 vote by the executive committee.

Mrs. Goldstein succeeds Eleanor Fowle of Los Altos Hills, sister of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. She resigned last month for personal reasons.

Mrs. Goldstein was Northern California women's chairman for Cranston's 1968 campaign and last year's campaign by Sen. John V. Tunney.

Design For Bridge Back To Architect

An architect's design for a new Lagunitas Road bridge over Corte Madera Creek in Ross has been sent back to the drawing board by the Ross Town Council Flood Control Advisory board.

According to Town Engineer Roy Hoffman, the advisory board, meeting Thursday night, requested alternate designs to that submitted by architect Andrew J. Ring III of San Rafael.

Two "schools of thought" emerged Thursday night, he said, with some advisory board members urging that the bridge be designed to block the view of the future concrete creek channel and others supporting a more open design.

Ring's plan features viewing platforms on the sides and extensive landscaping.

The $100,000 bridge, financed by the State Department of Water Resources, will be constructed next year when flood control channel continues upstream.

While construction of the bridge will get outside financing, any amenities to it such as landscaping will be financed by local funds and are subject to local review.

The advisory board adjourned to Oct. 11 at 8 p.m. at town hall when it again will consider bridge design.

Planners Refuse Fairfax City Hall Remodeling Plan

The Fairfax Planning Commission has declined to endorse plans for city hall remodeling, saying details were incomplete.

Commission secretary Ernestine Healy said the group objected that the plans showed only the proposed addition to city hall, and not what would happen to the present firehouse, parking facilities and to the park area in the rear.

The commission, meeting Thursday night, said it would consider the plans when a complete development proposal is submitted, Mrs. Healy said.

The city council has budgeted $35,000 for the renovation work, which will include an 800-square-foot addition spanning a creek in the rear of the present structure.

Go-Ahead Given In LSD Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—California's Court of Appeal ruled Thursday that Alameda County can proceed with narcotics cases against three persons, including Augustus Owsley Stanley III, onetime LSD "king."

The court rejected the contention by Stanley's attorney that there was no probable cause for action.

Stanley, who narcotics agents say made $1 million manufacturing and selling LSD when that was still legal, was arrested with two others in 1970 and charged with possessing marijuana and other drugs.

Saigon Elections Have Distinct Flavor That Is All Vietnamese

SAIGON (UPI) — Like so many other developments in Vietnam over the past 10 years, nationwide elections in the midst of civil war are an American idea.

As with so many other American ideas, the Vietnamese have accepted it, and then gone ahead and done it their own way. They are doing it their own way tomorrow; when President Nguyen Van Thieu is running for a second four-year term as the only candidate.

South Vietnam also held presidential elections during the days of the late President Ngo Dinh Diem, killed in a coup in 1963. Those were perfunctory, rubber-stamp affairs.

In 1966, U.S. President Lyndon Baines Johnson met Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, then the Premier of South Vietnam, in Honolulu and urged him to call nationwide elections.

Ky somewhat bemusedly agreed, and the wheels began to roll. South Vietnam elected a constituent assembly in 1966, and the assembly drew up a presidential-style constitution, which went into effect April 1, 1967.

Local elections were held April 2 and June 12, presidential and senatorial elections Sept. 3, and lower house elections in October.

The two most active men in the current election campaign—Thieu, who is running a one-man race, and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, who is vigorously denouncing him for dting so — were then on the same ticket.

Even then, however, there was no love lost between them. At the time the party slates were drawn up, Ky, having run the country for the past two years as chief of the military junta, confidently expected to be nominated for president.

The junta generals, mindful of Ky's growing power, and perhaps hoping to secure a more pliant front man, insisted on Thieu for president and Ky for vice president, on the military ticket.

But no matter. Ky was far more colorful and dynamic than Thieu, and during the preceding two years he had put his friends in positions of power around the country.

After the election, Thieu would be the front man, but Ky would continue to run the country. Or so the theory went, and a good many foreign political analysts agreed with it.

It did not turn out that way. Within a year, Thieu had maneuvered most of Ky's allies out of office. Eventually the two men split publicly.

Then, as now, the third man in the presidential equation, Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, was squeezed out. Minh had led the coup that overthrew Diem and was perhaps the most popular politician in the country.

In this year's election, both Minh and Jy bowed out, accusing Thieu of rigging the result in advance. In 1967, the junta arranged for Minh who was in exiled in Thailand anyway, to be ruled off the ballot on grounds that his running mate had once been a French citizen.

In 1967 the Viet Cong broadcast orders to the citizenry to have nothing to do with the elections, but at that time allied officials conceded that five million of South Vietnam's 17 million people were under Communist control and would be unable to vote at all.

Of the six million eligible voters in areas considered outside Communist control, fully 83 per cent ignored Viet Cong orders and cast ballots.

They did so at some cost. In a series of grenade and machine-gun attacks on election officials and polling places, 190 people were killed in the final week of the election.

This year only about 100,000 South Vietnamese are still considered as living in Communist-controlled villages, but the Communists have given no specific voting instructions. And so far in the election period only eight deaths have been directly attributable to campaign and polling activities.

However, there is still a war on. In 1967 American battle deaths were running at 180 a week; the South Vietnamese figure was well over that. Today, U.S. combat deaths are only a tenth the 1967 rate but close to 300 south Vietnamese a week are being killed in action.

In 1967 there was more election activity. That year, there were no fewer than 11 candidates for president.

This year, three men entered the lists. Ky was ruled off the ballot on a technicality, Minh quit in disgust, Ky was allowed back on the ballot but refused to go along, and then there was one: President Thieu.

Four years ago, with the civilian vote split 10 ways, the Thieu-Ky ticket was expected to win and so it did, gaining not quite 35 per cent of the vote.

This was twice as much as the second-place candidate. Even so, the fact that he is a minority president always has bothered Thieu and may well be a factor in his decision to go ahead with a one-man race this time.

Then, as now, the opposition accused the incumbents of fraud. During the 1967 campaign the Vietnamese government was obliged to furnish the candidates with transportation. They got it. They said government helicopters were setting them down at remote landing pads far from any voters.

After the election, six of the 10 defeated candidates organized a "front for the struggle for democracy" to get the results nullified.

They put together enough evidence to recommend canceling the results. But the committee's findings were overruled by the full assembly.

How State's Washington Contingent Voted Recently

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — Detention camps were abolished, the military draft law was extended, and federal power to move against job discrimination was strengthened as a result of key showdown votes in the House and Senate in recent weeks.

Following are descriptions of these and other major votes, the final results and breakdowns by party, and how Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, and Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, and California's two Democratic Senators, Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney, voted:

Detention Camps — HR234, Sept. 14, an amendment in the House to prohibit detention of persons on the basis of race but not to restrict the President's wartime powers of detention. This amendment was an attempt to forestall total repeal of the 1950 Emergency Detention Act. Defeated 124-272. Democrats 62-171, Republicans 62-101. Mailliard — no; Clausen — yes. (Mailliard and Clausen then voted for repeal on final passage, which was approved 356-49.)

Equal Employment — HR 1746, Sept. 16, an amendment in the House to authorize the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to go to court on behalf of aggrieved persons who believe they were victims of job discrimination. This amendment replaced a proposal for tougher enforcement powers that would have permitted the EEOC to issue "cease and desist" orders against employers and unions. Those voting "no" favored tougher powers. Passed 200-194. Democrats 69-164, Republicans 131-30. Mailliard — yes; Clausen — yes. (Both then voted for the EEOC bill on final passage.)

Legal Services — S 2007, Sept. 9, a substitute amendment to the bill in the Senate extending OEO programs for two more years. The amendment attempted to weaken the bill by stipulating that the proposed legal services corporation could not take criminal cases and all directors would be appointed by the President. Defeated 28-34. Democrats 12-26, Republicans 16-8. Cranston — no; Tunney — no.

Environment — HR 8687 (military procurement), Sept. 13, an amendment in the Senate to bar expenditure of funds authorized for three aircraft production programs until final studies are completed on the impact of the programs on the environment. Defeated 21-55. Democrats 16-23, Republicans 5-32. Cranston — yes; Tunney — absent but announced in favor.

Draft Extension — HR 6531, Sept. 17, a motion in the Senate to table the House-Senate conference report which would extend the draft two years and raise military pay, and which contained a watered-down version of Mansfield's Vietnam withdrawal amendment. Tabling would have delayed final action on the draft extension law several more months. Defeated 36-47. Democrats 25-18. Republicans 11-29. Cranston — yes; Tunney — yes.

Draft Extension — HR 6531, Sept. 21, a cloture vote in the Senate to end the filibuster delaying a vote on passage of the draft bill. Cloture was agreed to by a vote of 61-30. Democrats 23-26, Republicans 38-4. Cranston — no; Tunney — no. (Both Senators then voted against passage of the conference report, which passed 55-30. Democrats 23-23, Republicans 32-7.)

Cart Lifts Used To Haul The Booty

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)— Thieves who broke into a warehouse stacked with goods because of the West coast dock strike stole an estimated $75,000 to $100,000 worth of merchandise using two of the company's for lifts to cart the booty out of the building.

The thieves took Christmas toys, radios and objects as large as motorcycles.

OUT OF the bush comes the safari suit, from Dimitri of Italy, a New York custom tailor. Dimitri turned the suit into a superbly tailored outfit for casual wear in town and country, by men or women. It's beige wool gabardine with saddlebag pockets and a signature belted waist. Designer Piero Dimitri is considered a fashion leader in New York for his handmade "ready-to-wear" styles.

BACK TO CLASSICS

A Bit Of 1946 In Dimitri Styles

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dimitri of Italy, the only New York custom tailor to follow the Italian tradition of putting on his own big fashion show each year, returned to classic shapes and fabrics for his big extravaganza at the Plaza Hotel this year.

They happen to be the classic shapes and fabrics of 1946 and may remind you of a Ralph Bellamy movie but Piero Dimitri sets fashions and you may be sure that soon enough everyone else will follow his lead. Oddly, though advanced, they are not too far away from current fashions.

Dimitri has estimated these shows cost him as much as $30,000 to produce and says he puts them on simply because "I love fashion." This time he used the show to introduce his Fall-into-Spring collection of what he calls ready-to-wear clothing.

They aren't exactly what other people call ready-to-wear since his are made by hand in his New York workrooms and a suit, for example, will run from $285 to $325. Topcoats are also mildly expensive, running $285 to $300. The custom stuff is considerably more.

DIMITRI IS the master of shape and the waists of his suits and coats have a nipped in look. Other features of the suits are roped shoulders, cuffs on the pants which are slightly pleated, and extremely wide lapels.

Topcoats and overcoats run two inches below the knee and are fitted. There are lots of wraps around belts. Dimitri also has brought back the raglan sleeve and has given such coats shape for the first time by using a high armhole and a fitted body.

Since he is a custom tailor and makes lots of suits for women, many of the things in his show were shown for both men and women. One of these was a classic safari suit with two big patch pockets on the jacket, and pants which tuck into calfhigh military boots. One was in tan gabardine with a wide leather belt and a big rectangular buckle.

"And this is going to be fantastic," he said, showing a wool satin jacket and jeans in the style made famous years ago by Levi Strauss. They are to wear to cocktail parties by couples who do not want to wear denim. The jacket is short, like an Eisenhower jacket, or like a denim cowboy jacket if you prefer.

Dimitri shows fur for the first time this year and like the cloth garments the coats were fitted. One was in a beige nutria with a half belt in the back and a long center vent. Coats with similar shape came in soft black leather and heavy sueded cowhide.

SOME OF the outstanding things made for the show included:

—A country suit in a caramel and grape houndstooth pattern with a big grape color windowpane overplaid, two button, single breasted and, of course, shaped. The pants hung straight and were made with a wide waistband.

—Blazers were made with pleated backs, an appliqued half belt in the back and shown with pleated, cuffless trousers. The blazers in leather and suede were tailored like the cloth coats. One in antelope was soft as a kidskin glove and came in navy blue with gold buttons.

—A suit for the beach or the country was shown in a combination of fiocco and cotton in a soft gray-blue basket weave with tiny flecks of white like snowflakes. It was made with a wrap around belt and no buttons and can be worn with or without a shirt. The same design was in Irish linen for the summer.

—Raincoats had a military look. One was in cotton, like a heavy denim, made with two bellow pockets, a huge military collar, epaulets and a wrap around belt. Another was in wool denim, new this year. A coat in black nappa leather was very shaped in his "graphic" design which features two vertical welded seams fore and aft to emphasize the slimness.

—A spring coat was in Irish tweed woven in a tiny herringbone pattern in pale gray with huge windowpane overchecks — white horizontal stripes and vertical black stripes. This was a four button double breasted with a wraparound belt.

—Colors were spectacular and ran from grape through plum, raspberry and purple. A grape colored coat was in his graphic design with a zippered front. Another bright color combination was a three piece suit in a soft combination of navy, dusty rose and gray but with cardinal red horizontal stripes and electric blue vertical stripes forming a big overplaid.

Woman's Career Is Looking Up

STUTTGART, Ark. (UPI) — Sharon Boswell, 24, decided one way to move upward in her job was to start climbing for real. So, now she shinnies up telephone poles doing line repairs.

Miss Roswell is the first female lineman with General Telephone Co. of the Southwest and her employers think also may be the first one to fill this job category in any telephone company.

Miss Roswell, who'd worked as an operator and clerk for General Telephone for three years, said she had decided "that eventually I'd like to specialize in repairing switchboards and installing telephones for businesses."

"THE LINEMAN'S job, which pays more than my clerical one, looked like it would take me a big step toward my goal," she said.

As a member of the line crew of the Stuttgart area, Miss Roswell does the rugged work of climbing poles, lifting heavy objects, and operatin construction equipment in all kinds of weather.

She spends a substantial portion of her time on the telephone poles, about 20 feet up, stringing lines and repairing.

Like others in the crew, Miss Roswell wears the lineman's traditional "badge" of the job —the steel-spurred "climbers" which she plunges into the wooden poles to step skyward. The climbers, or "hook", are belted to her heavy work boots.

Other essential accessories include sturdy trousers, long sleeved shirt or jacket, work gloves with wide cuffs, a wide "body belt" for carrying tools, a strong nylon safety strap which she loops around the pole, and a safety helmet which covers her short blonde hair. Quite a lot of trappings for a girl who's five feet, eight inches and 122 pounds.

Before joining the regular crew, she attended the company's three-week training school for linemen in Texarkana, Tex.

"I didn't realize that being a female lineman was so unusual until I went to the training school in Texarkana," she said. "On the first day, our instructor kissed me on the cheek and told the class: 'This is the first time I've ever kissed a lineman.'"

Drugs Promise Relief For Symptoms Of Menopause

There is help for American women to overcome symptoms of the menopause, says David M. Rorik in a special issue of McCall's magazine titled, "The Underated Joys of Being Over Thirty."

Hormonal-replacement therapy, the first phase of a two-pronged attack which doctors believe can virtually dispel the symptoms attached to menopause, is working personal miracles for many women, says Rorvik. It eases the vascular disorders (hot flashes), prevents loss of tissue elasticity, wrinkling and osteoporosis, often the cause of backaches, brittle bones and "shrinking" common to many women after menopause.

There is general agreement among medical experts that the therapy is beneficial, though difference of opinion exists about how and when to use the drugs, which must be administered under strict medical supervision.

Dr. Maxwell Roland, of French Polyclinic and Medical School, New York, one of the leading researchers in the field says, "It is my prediction that we are approaching the day when the average woman of 45 will get oral cyclic replacement therapy for the rest of her life . . . in many cases this medication will maintain (her) in a premenopausal condition for the rest of her life."

On the question of hormone therapy and its cancer inducing potential Dr. Roland says, "In 35 years of study there has never been a reported case of cancer linked to the ingestion of estrogen."

According to the article, the other half of a successful battle against menopause symptoms must deal with a change in society's attitude towards a woman past her child-bearing years, permitting her to separate her biology from her psychology.

"A woman's reproductive status is still symbolic to her. It's loss causes her to devaluate herself as a person . . . particularly if she's had no other role than wife and mother," says Dr. Roland.

THE GENERATION RAP

Empathy And Discussion Needed To Cure Those Common Scolds

DEAR SUE AND HELEN:

My best friend and I don't smoke, drink or take drugs. Contrary to some beliefs, the farthest we would ever go with a guy is necking.

Yet we're getting the reputation of "tramps" because of our nosy neighbors, who live between our two houses, and down the street.

Like I was baby-sitting. A boy came by, and I ran out to tell him "get lost" as I couldn't have company, and I happened to kiss him goodbye. By the time the story went from the kids to their friends to the friends' parents who are our nosy neighbors, it went like this: I talked and necked out front for an hour while the "poor little kids" were scared and crying in the house all alone!

Another time my friend met a kooky guy with a car that sounded like an airplane engine. He fell for her hard, and would roar up our street at 2 a.m., I guess just to let her know he was thinking about her. One night he did this about 12 times, so Anne really told him off next day, but she got grounded because the neighbors complained. (She understood and accepted it, but the gossips never stopped talking.)

All these things add up to us being the big topic of conversation on the block. We're getting known as "those wild kids," just because boys like us. And this is affecting our parents who used to be very understanding. They're beginning not to trust us, just because of gossip. What can we do? — ME AND ANNE

DEAR ME AND ANNE:

Nosy neighbors are like the common cold: there's no sure cure for them but if you try several medicines and take good care of yourselves, they eventually stop bothering you. — SUE

HELEN'S ADDITIONS
DEAR M. AND A.:

The medicines should include:

1. A good dose of discussion, with your parents and perhaps your nosy neighbors, to lower temperatures all around.

2. Several capsules of empathy. Let them know you understand why gossip makes parents edgy — for it can hurt not only your reputations, but theirs as well.

3. A shot of appreciation: for putting up with you.

From there on, Sue's last suggestion: "take good care of yourselves" should complete the cure. If it doesn't then those neighbors are "common scolds" and deserve to be ignored. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm excited about my first year of high school, but I'm also the only teenage girl in the whole world with such stubborn parents. I've even begged on my knees, but they won't let me wear pants to school. Our dress code has been revised so even teachers can wear pants suits, but my folks won't listen.

The kids mock me for always wearing dresses, especially since I'm kind of bowlegged and look dumb in them. — Help! — L.D.

DEAR L.:

If begging on bended knee hasn't swayed your folks, I may not have much luck either, but here goes:

DEAR PARENTS OF L.D.:

Teenagers need to feel "with it" and pants are definitely "it" at school these days. What's more, they're comfortable, warmer, usually less expensive (they save on nylons too), and, in case this is an issue, not nearly so sexy as short skirts. Please relent! — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE:

Couldn't have said it better myself, Mom. I'll only add: "C'mon, Parents of L.D., give a little. You'll get a lot of good vibes in return. — SUE

Avoid Carts If Doctor Orders Some Exercise

If the doctor has told you to get some exercise out on the golf course, you had better not be caught climbing into an electric cart, says Dr. Albert H. Domm, head of the medical department of an insurance company.

"Don't use a cart unless your doctor has specifically told you to," he says. "If you are playing golf for exercise, take a whack at the ball and then go hiking after it," Dr. Domm recommends.

"This business of hopping into a golf cart and riding out after the ball doesn't do a thing for your physical condition."

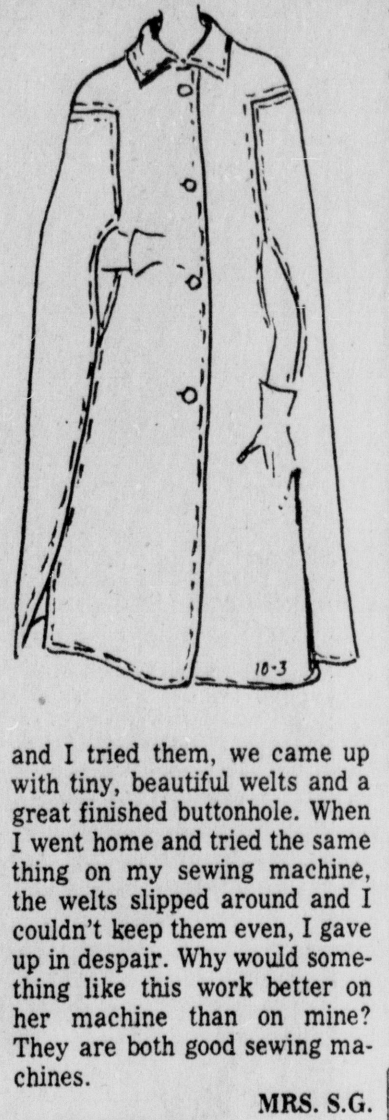
New Cape Pattern Is Perfect For Use With Double Knit Wool

By EUNICE FARMER



DEAR EUNICE,

I have finally found one of those wonderful double knits that weigh about 20 ounces that you spoke about in your column and would very much like to make a cape with it. The knit capes I have seen don't hang nice and straight. They are so full and uncomfortable to wear because they never stay in place. It there a cape pattern that would be suitable for this fabric as well as close fitting for comfort?

MRS. M.H.B.

DEAR MRS. M.H.B.:

This year's patterns have turned up one of the most beautiful capes I have seen in many years. It has all the new lines, yet fits close to the body and would be perfect for the knit you describe.

Since your cape will be unlined because of the weight of the fabric, the top stitching of all seams, including the collar and front edges, will keep all seams flat, reducing the bulk as well as adding an attractive detail to your garment. Notice the new dropped shoulder, beautifully executed with its cut and fit.

I feel the armhole slits are positioned perfectly. However, should you need more freedom for your arms, you may always keep the slit open a little higher. If you do this, be sure to remember to cut the extension for the armhole facing a little higher also.

If this is your first attempt with a cape, I can't recommend this one highly enough. The lines are so simple that this will become a classic instead of a fad.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Victor Wiltrock, Halbur, Iowa, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"When you are stitching a sash or belt, or tie that must be turned after it has been stitched, sew about 3 inches with the right sides together. Stop, clip the corners of excess fabric and start pulling the right side out as far as you have stitched. As you continue stitching, stop occasionally and continue to pull out the part that has been stitched. When you are finished, the tie will be already turned and ready to press."

DEAR EUNICE,

I love to make bound buttonholes your way. But I must admit that when my neighbor and I tried them, we came up with tiny, beautiful welts and a great finished buttonhole. When I went home and tried the same thing on my sewing machine, the welts slipped around and I couldn't keep them even, I gave up in despair. Why would something like this work better on her machine than on mine? They are both good sewing machines.

MRS. S.G.

DEAR MRS. S.G.:

With no more information than you sent me, I can only guess the reason. Are you by any chance using the presser foot for the zig-zag stitch? If so, the spacing in the center of the foot is too wide, there is too much play in the fabric and not enough pressure at the point of stitching to hold the tiny strips in place.

It's surprising to me that many of the new sewing machines only come with one presser foot. You must try to obtain one that has unequal widths on each side of the center. One side is wider to keep the fabric in place because it extends clear up to the needle. Then there is just a narrow space removed for the needle, and the other edge again stabalizes the fabric. See if you can't obtain the original type of foot for your machine. The type that was used before anyone ever heard of a zig-zag stitching sewing machine.

DEAR EUNICE,

What is a single knit fabric? All I have heard of in the past are double knits.

MRS. T.B.

DEAR MRS. T.B.:

Single knits are much lighter weight and have returned because of the softness of the new designs in clothing. One of the most cmmmon is the wool jersey which many of you will remember from years ago.

You will find the single knits in the matte jerseys, and they can appear in wool, polyester, silk, or any other combination of fibers. They are usually made in an unconstructed manner and look best when there is a shirt type sleeve, blouson waistline, soft, and full skirts.

With these garments, it is best to wear a slip. If you want to line them, use a separate tube type lining that is only attached at the waistline, armhole, or neckline depending on the design.

Set-in sleeves take perhaps more skill than any other operation in dressmaking. Eunice Farmer's booklet "All About Sleeves" gives detailed instructions on how to make professional looking sleeves. To obtain your booklet send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Russian Noblewoman Looks Back On Life

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

LOS ANGELES (UI) —Born a Russian aristocrat, Kyra Petrovskaya has been a concert singer, an actress, a soldier in the Red Army, a war nurse, a farm wife, a lecturer, and an author, as well as twice widowed and twice divorced.

Now the wife of psychiatrist George J. Wayne and the mother of a premed student, she sat in her rambling Bel-Air mansion here and mused about what her life would be like if she had not come to this country as an American war bride.

"If I had stayed in Russia," she said, "I probably would have had a few more husbands, a couple more decorations, and by now instead of playing Juliet, I'd be playing Juliet's mother."

Mrs. Wayne was a well-known performer when World War II interrupted her stage career and she became a military officer and field nurse during the siege of Leningrad.

She was shocked and hurt when she was unable to resume her acting career in America after the war.

"I WOULD GO to read for parts and they were so cold to me," she said. "They said I didn't look the part or my accent was wrong.

"In Russia, the theater is permanent employment for actors and actresses. It is almost like going to an office everyday. You begin by playing Juliet, then as you grow older you play her mother, and finally you play her nurse. If you start in the theater, you died in the theater.

"I was brought up to think of the theater as a temple, and to venerate actresses. "I thought it was terrible that actors here were out of work and had to jerk sodas.

"I wondered how could it be that they didn't need me, when I had talent that had been proven. It was a great shock to me and for the first five years Iwas very miserable."

Although she played some roles on "Playhouse 90" and did some guest appearances on television shows, Mrs. Wayne decided she would find a new career.

She took to the lecture circuit to support her small son, traveling for several weeks at a time and speaking about life in the Soviet Union

After an appearance on the "Groucho Marx" show she was contacted by a publisher who thought she should write a book about her experiences.

"I told him I happened to have 14 chapters already written," she said with a laugh.

Her autobiographical "Kyra" was a bestseller. Since then she has written "Kyra's Secrets of Russian Cooking," and 'The Quest for the Golden Fleece," about mythology.

Her new book, "Shurik," which tells how Mrs. Wayne temporarily adopted an oprhaned boy during the siege of Leningrad, has been selected by Saturday Review as one of the season's top 15 books for young people.

The author never has returned to the U.S.S.R.

"My husband and son have been there, and my husband thinks it's silly for me to be afraid to go back there. But according to Soviet law, I am still a Soviet citizen. He says they have no reason to detain me, but I know them better than he does. They do not recognize my American citizenship, so why take chances?"

She admits to nostalgia when she sees Russian ballet.

"And some time ago UCLA (where her husband is on the faculty) asked me to give a party for a group of visiting Russian theater people," she said.

"They knew their hostess was to be someone named Petrovskaya, and they wondered, could it be our Kyra from our theater? When they got here, they thought I was my own daughter.

"In the United States we take such good care of ourselves, with good diet and good make-up, that we look much younger than we should," she said.

December Wedding Is Planned

Linda Nichols is alternately thoughtful and animated as she describes her tour in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

'JESUS CHRIST SUPERSTAR'

Marinite Says Tour Lot Of Hard Work

By GEORGE NEVIN

Singing the female lead in the road show version of a hit rock musical has elements of glamor and excitement, but it's mostly a case of long hours of traveling and boredom and a lot of work—hard work.

After thee months criss-crossing the country with the cast of "Jesus Christ Superstar," playing one-and-two-night stands from Boston to Miami to San Jose, Linda Nichols paused at her parents' house in Marinwood yesterday and reflected on the often grueling tour.

"It's mostly a case of travel, get there, do a show and travel again," said the 21-year-old Miss Nichols. "There's something about traveling that takes a lot out of us all."

She will be singing the role of Mary Magdelene in the concert version of the rock opera tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Oakland Coliseum. Then it's off to Portland, Seattle, Hawaii and back across the U.S. to Chicago.

Despite the routine of singing the same set of songs night after night in town after town, Miss Nichols never gets tired of performing. "Each night is different, and even though I know every note in every song no two performances are ever the same."

A good audience can lift the huge cast (which includes a 32-piece orchestra, a six-member rock band, 18 chorus members and the four principal singers) out of the doldrums and "really turn us on," the brown-haired, brown-eyed Miss Nichols said with animation.

The whirlwind tour, which Miss Nichols sees continuing for another two years ("As long as we can get bookings") ,has been her first real taste of a performer's life, although when she was a music major at Eastern New Mexico University three years ago, she and a group of fellow students went on a six-week tour of Iceland, Greenland, Newfoundland and Labrador with a USO troupe.

"That was nothing, though, compared to this," said Miss Nichols with a laugh. "It was so much easier."

Up until four months ago the singer was living in Los Angeles with her husband, David Nichols, whom she met and married while in college.

"A friend called me one day and told me she'd just auditioned for 'Jesus Christ Superstar,' " she recalled, "so I went down and did the same. I was called back for another audition, then another, and finally I was flown to New York."

Miss Nichols landed a part in the 18-member chorus and also served as understudy to Yvonne Elliman, who had the part of Mary Magdelene at first. After a month Miss Elliman left the road show for the same part in a Broadway version of the opera (which opens Oct. 12) and Miss Nichols took over the lead role.

Miss Nichols said "Jesus Christ Superstar" closely follows the Bible in telling the story of Christ but uses colloquial terms. Often, she said, nuns and clergymen would attend the show and most of them appeared to enjoy it.

"While I was in the chorus I used to scan the audience for priests and nuns and watch their reactions. They seemed to like it pretty much," she said.

Surprisingly, many audiences had their share of middle-aged and even elderly member, most of whom looked as though they enjoyed the performance, too, she said. "once a group of people in wheelchairs came up to us after a show and told us how good they thought we were."

Despite her enthusiasm for the show ("The music is good and the lyrics are great"), Miss Nichols doesn't think she'll stick it out if the present tour goes on for two year, as she expects it will.

Instead, she hopes to land the role of Mary in a Los Angeles version of the rock opera if one is produced.

"We're all watching what happens on Broadway. If that show is a hit other ones will open in Los Angeles and London," she said.

Miss Nichols calls her fellow performers "great people" and considers everyone part of a close, though big, family.

"When we first got together I loved them all, then as we got to know each other I started hating them all, and then I got over that and loved them again," she mused. "One girl had to go to New York for a while and when she got back she said she couldn't believe she would but she had missed us all terribly."

She considers her first real professional role "sort of a rest. If I like it I'll continue in music." What she really wants to do is record her own compositions and those of friends.

"I'm not making any plans, though," she said, wrinkling her face into a grin. "In this business you don't plan too far ahead."

After the first exhausting month on tour, Miss Nichols said she began to get stronger and now has caught her second wind.

"Being home even for only a few days helps, too," she said, waving her hand to indicate the townhouse at 168 Roundtree Boulevard where her father, Mark Falcone, a revenue officer for Marin County, and her mother live.

"My parents drove down to San Jose to get me after the last show and I feel better after just one day of eating home cooking," she said. "I just hate eating in restaurants."

No Drastic Increase In Security Planned

No drastic increase in security is planned for the Marin Civic Center Tuesday when both Angela Davis and six San Quentin inmates, charged in connection with last month's prison violence, will make court appearances at the same time.

Security is beefed up whenever Miss Davis appears in court, and Sheriff's Lt. Ronald Retana said yesterday a similar security setup would be in effect Tuesday.

He declined to discuss details of that setup or how many extra men would be on duty.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said, however, he thought the dual court appearances would multiply security problems "substantially," and added it is possible persons entering either courtroom may be searched at one point, with the entire area cordoned off.

But neither Retana nor Maloney said they expected trouble when Miss Davis and the inmates make morning appearances in superior court.

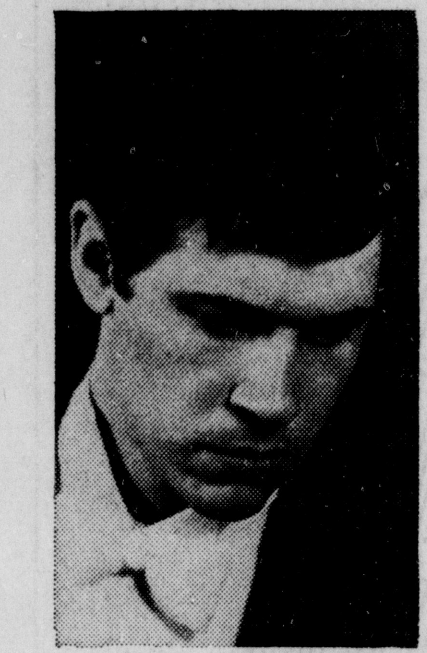
Among the San Quentin inmates indicted yesterday was Fleeta Drumgo, one of the so-called Soledad Brothers whose most recent court appearances in San Francisco have been disruptive.

In addition to the court sessions Tuesday, a Ban the Bomb march is planned on the board of supervisors chambers in the adjoining administration building in protest of a planned nuclear test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain.

Maloney was unaware how many persons might attend the court appearances, but added that he didn't think the nature of Miss Davis's court session was such to attract a large crowd.

The session is for hearing of a motion for suppression of certain evidence in her case.

The six inmates are to be arraigned on charges of murder, conspiracy and assault stemming from the alleged escape attempt Aug. 21 in which six persons were killed.



CLASSICAL GUITAR — Phillip de Fremery, former student of Andres Segovia and Oscar Ghiglia, will present a recital of classical guitar works by Dowland, Bach, Villa-Lobos and Albeniz at 8 p.m. tomorrow at St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross.

Man Is Serious From Accident

A Greenbrae man was hospitalized yesterday after he suffered multiple injuries in an auto-motorcycle accident, Marin General Hospital officials reported.

Timothy Kraus, 23, of 461 Via Hidalgo, Apt. 13, was admitted at 12:46 p.m. with multiple fractures, cuts and bruises. He was reported in serious condition today.

Details of the accident were unavailable.

Belvedere To Study Dog Control Issue

Dog control will be discussed by the Belvedere City Council when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the community center.

The council also will consider a recommendation that radar control of speeding on San Rafael Avenue be continued, according to City Mgr. William L. Cavalli.

Pair Arrested For Paint Over Statue

NEW YORK (UPI) — A university instructor and a student were arrested Friday on charges they dumped a can of red paint over a statue of Theodore Roosevelt outside the American Museum of Natural History.

Charged with criminal mischief were Mark Dornstreich, 30, an instructor at Ruters, and James McCarthy, 19, of Norristown, Pa.

Four Hurt In Car Crash

Two Sonoma County teenagers were hospitalized and two others treated for injuries suffered in an automobile accident in the Petaluma area last night, Hillcrest Hospital officials reported.

Police in the Southern Sonoma area had no details of the wreck, however.

Linda Carlson, 16, of Santa Rosa, with an injured left ankle, and Gene Calli, 20, of 319 Meacham Road, Petaluma, with internal injuries, both were reported in good condition today in Hillcrest Hospital and Sonoma County Community Hospital, respectively.

Treated at Hillcrest were Timothy Torre, 16, of 8791 Cypress Avenue, Cotati, cut left eye, and Dan Capella, 16, of 3642 Roblar Road, Petaluma, bruised arm.

FAIR GROUNDS TAKE SHAPE

Landscapers are working feverishly to get thousands of plants in place before the Marin County Fair opens next Friday at its new site at the Civic Center adjacent to the Veterans Memorial Building. Green turf is being rolled out for instant lawn, two huge tents are up and last minute preparations are underway at the site next to a picturesque lagoon. The fair, successor to the old Marin Art and Garden Fair, will run through Oct. 11.

Divorce Rate Shows Decrease

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—Divorces in California, as expected, decreased in the first six months of 1971, says the State Health Department.

About 51,900 "dissolution of marriage" decrees were granted, compared with about 56,200 during the same period of 1970.

The reduction was anticipated because 1970 figures reflected a big jump when the minimum waiting period for a final judgment was decreased from one year to six months.

26 Bus Deaths

LIMA (UPI)—Twenty-six persons were killed and 20 were injured Friday when a bus with 50 passengers plunged over a cliff near Puqui, 240 miles southeast of Lima. Police said they had no further details of the accident.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Improper Trump Play Plus Finesse Attempt Dooms South

Earlier in the week we were talking about a 90-day freeze on finesses. Now, the finesse has many peaceful uses, and no sound statesman will ban it completely for all players. Perhaps we will have to issue ration books, and bridge players would have to tear out a stamp and turn it in if they want to take a finesse. A device of that nature might have saved South in today's hand.

WITH ACE

South won the first heart trick with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps and then led the jack of clubs for a finesse. East won with the queen of clubs and thoughtfully cashed the king of diamonds. Then he led another diamond to remove the last trump from the dummy.

South couldn't understand what had gone wrong. He had already lost a club and a diamond, and he still had to lose one more trick in each of those suits. Down one.

You may point out that South lost his contract by drawing three rounds of trumps, not by taking the club finesse. But South drew trumps because he relied on an eventual club finesse to bring the contract home. If he had known that a branch of the government would step in to prevent him from finessing, he would have played the trumps properly.

PROPER PLAY

The proper play is to win the first heart in the dummy, and then lead a diamond at once without touching the trumps at all. West wins the diamond and returns a trump (as good a defense as any). South wins, ruffs a diamond in dummy, gets to his hand with a trump and ruffs his last diamond in dummy.

RETURNS TO HAND

Now South returns to his hand with the ace of hearts (saved for this purpose) and draws a third round of trumps. The contract is now secure, and South can take out his ration book and pay a stamp to try a club finesse if he wants to play for an overtrick.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠- A J 9 8 7 2
♥- A 6
♦- J 6 5
♣- J 4.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade or pass.

This is a borderline decision, and you should do whatever your temperament or the nature of your partner dictates. The jack of diamonds and the jack of clubs are not worth very much; if you traded them for the queen of spades or the queen of hearts, the hand would be a much better opening bid.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON GREB

Guess who was born today and became famous.

1. Do you know a small man in major league baseball who consistently outscores big men? Today's top birthday celebrity (155 pounds, 5'10") is in the record books because in 1962, as a Los Angeles Dodger, he surprised everybody by grabbing 104 stolen bases to challenge, if not surpass, Ty Cobb's old mark: (A) Willie Davis; (B) Tommy Davis; (C) Maury Wills.

2. Another little man shook up the British Empire when, after earning a law degree, he was treated as an inferior in South Africa. It so upset this deeply spiritual man that he started a non-violent civil rights movement, suffered imprisonment many times, and finally became the founding father of a fully independent nation: (A) Mohandas Gandhi; (B) Sun Yatsen; (C) Jomo Kenyatta.

3. This English writer is so talented that two universities awarded him honorary doctor's degrees. Are you able to guess his name from such book titles as "The Ministry of Fear" and movies like "The Third Man"? (A) C.P. Snow; (B) Graham Greene; (C) Evelyn Waugh.

4. Can you identify one of America's funniest comedians by his real first name, Julius? Probably not, because only his nickname has been on theater marquees, advertising the many hit films he made with his brothers, "Animal Crackers," "Horsefeathers," and "A Night at the Opera": (A) Jack Warner; (B) Dick Smothers; (C) Groucho Marx.

THE LAST SUNDAY IN SURREY

Rev. Barton Sarjeant of Christ Episcopal Church, Sausalito, will end a six-month stay in England Oct. 10 when he conducts his last service at Saint Martin's Parish Church, East Horsley, Leatherhead, Surrey. The church was built over a period of several hundred years with the tower dating from the 11th Century, the nave constructed in the 12th Century and the high altar finished in the 13th Century. Rev. Charles Craft, rector of Saint Martin's, has been in Sausalito for the six months taking Reverend Sarjeant's place. Reverend Sarjeant and his wife, Beverly, and two children will be honored by the English parish tomorrow with a harvest supper after Evensong. During their stay in Sausalito the Crafts visited their daughter, Caroline, who now lives in California.

ANNUAL REPORT

Editor Terms '71 As 'Year Of Indecision' In Churches

PHILADELPHIA (LC) — A veteran Lutheran editor characterized 1971 as a "year of indecision" in the churches when "much was discussed, but little or nothing was decided."

According to Dr. Albert P. Stauderman of Philadelphia, executive editor of The Lutheran, twice-monthly magazine of the Lutheran Church in America, "It was a bad year, compared to the previous ones, and not a good year either . . ."

Dr. Stauderman presented his yearly review of religious developments at the 58th annual meeting of the Lutheran Editors' and Managers' Association, attended by some 60 members from the LCA, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

It marked the 27th presentation of news highlights in religion at the association's sessions, the first nine by Dr. G. Elson Ruff, editor of The Lutheran, and the last 18 by Dr. Stauderman, who commented that now he "might as well try for 20."

Dr. Stauderman described 1971 as a "year of revised priorities . . . local church rather than national. Denomination rather than council. Confessional unity rather than ecumenism. Evangelism rather than social activism. Conciliation rather than brinkmanship."

As the best example of the latter he cited President Nixon's proposed visit to China and the about-face of the United States on mainland China's admission to the United Nations.

When such membership was suggested by the Faith and Order Conference at Cleveland in 1958 sponsored by the National Council of Churches, he noted, there was a loud outcry and the NCC was smeared with charges of being Communist.

"Now it's a policy of a conservative U.S. administration," he said.

In listing some of the events of the year, Dr. Stauderman observed that there was "no really big story" and "some surprising omissions."

Notably, he added, "the race issue has cooled off, not because of achievements but because the races are so polarized they don't conflict any more; campus unrest has ended or gone underground, welfare reform is exactly where it was a year ago, and there's nothing new on sex, either!"

Lutherans "tentatively regrouped," according to Dr. Stauderman, as the ALC and the LCA moved closer together with unified activities in parish education, world missions and theological training. By "a strange coincidence," he noted, the LCA's proposed new structure "will just about parallel" the ALC's.

SAN FRANCISCO — Mrs. Ralph Stair, moderator of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, USA, will keynote the annual meeting of the Synod of the Golden Gate next Saturday.

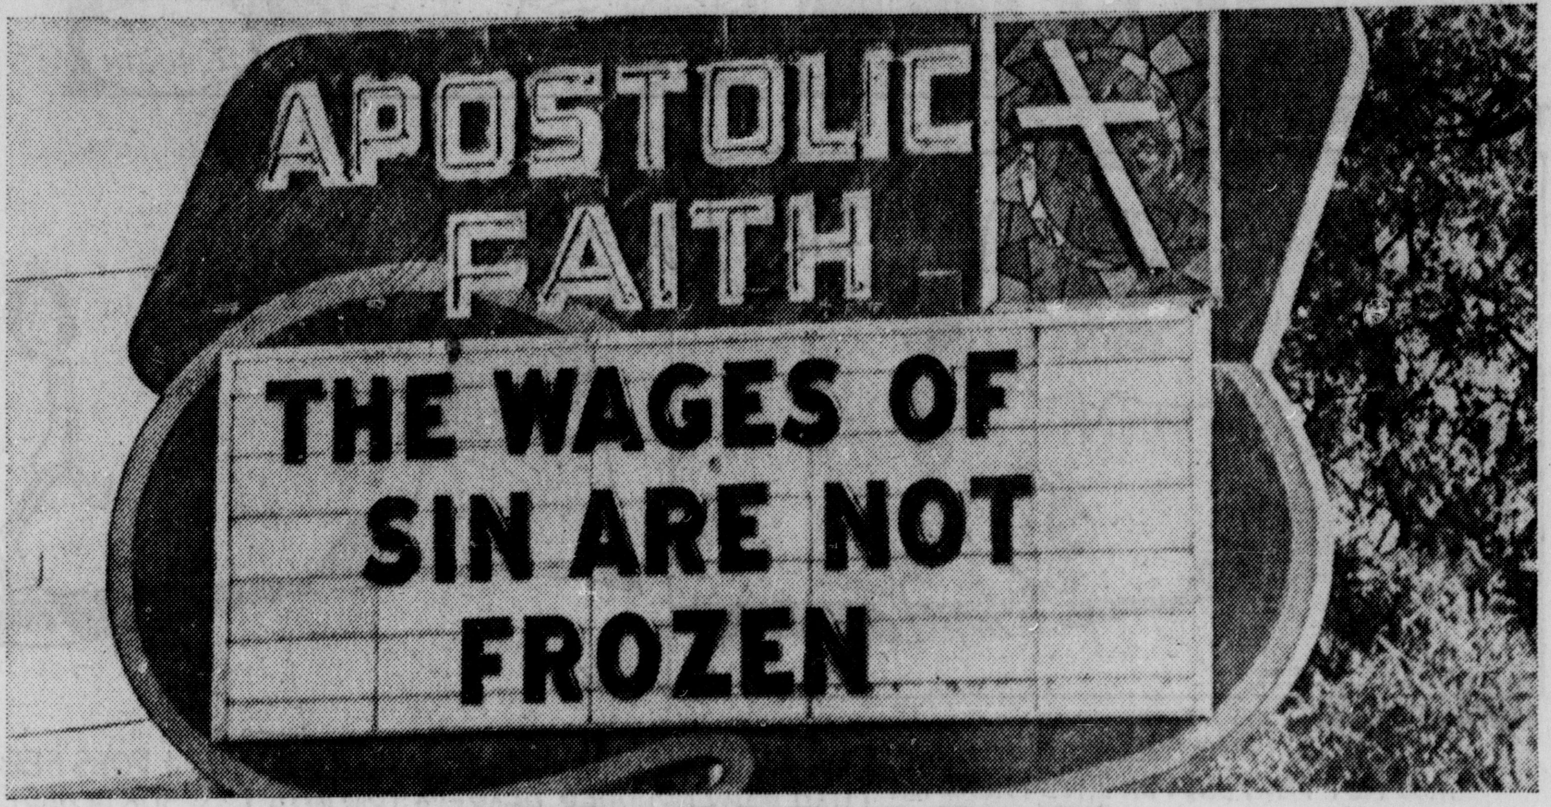
Mrs. Stair is the first woman to be elected to the highest honorary position in the church. She will speak to the general session at 10 a.m.

During her year in office, which continues through May 1972, Mrs. Stair will preside at the annual meeting of the General Assembly, highest ruling body of the two-million member denomination.

Business matters, which will come before the synod, will be action on the proposed 1972 budget, and a proposal by Rev. J. Davis Illingworth, synod executive, for a synod-wide participation "toward a spiritual Renaissance."

Presiding at the session will be Rev. Frank Mar, pastor of the Chinese Presbyterian Church in Oakland and vice moderator of the synod, which includes Marin.

The meeting will be held in Calvary Church.



A SIGN OF THE TIMES

28-7 VICTORY

Terra Linda Whips Tam

By RON LENT

After Dick Rodrigo's wife, Doris, gave birth to an eight-pound potential halfback earlier in the day, the Terra Linda High School assistant football coach watched his team thump visiting Tamalpais High School, 28-7 at San Rafael High last night.

Quarterback Kevin Donohoe tallied twice to trigger the Trojan's opening Marin County Athletic League win, but rival head coaches Don Lucas of Terra Linda and Mike Davlin of Tam agreed that "gifts also played a role in the outcome."

"I can only shake my head when thinking about (cornerback Pat) Locey's interception for us being turned into a touchdown for them" with nine seconds left before the half, Davlin said.

Though disappointed in walking off second best on the scoreboard for the third consecutive game, Davlin remained composed while recalling the heart stopping events.

Sporting a 14-0 advantage, the Blue and Gold were battling the clock during six-play, 77-yard march. On second and 10, a harried Donohoe fired an errant pass into Locey's waiting arms. After Locey caught the ball, Trojan end Wes Emerson jarred the pigskin loose; flanker John Buckley quickly pounced on it in the end zone for a Trojan score.

"If you take that one away from us and the 60-yard (screen pass and) run (from Donohoe to fullback Mike Sabel) which set up our first touchdown after the opening kickoff, it might have been 7-7 at halftime," Lucas commented following the game.

As is his wont, Lucas was not outwardly pleased with the victor's performance, other than the final score. "Our pass blocking broke down," he explained, "and we'll have to work on execution."

While they are at it, the Trojan staff might conjure a tag for Rodrigo's unnamed boy, his third budding Terra Linda gridder, circa 1987.

Like Rodrigo, Davlin is also building for the future, though not necessarily in the same manner.

To start with, he has All-League middle guard Herb Wade. The junior stickout, returning after a week's absence due to a kidney infection, played at linebacker for the first time. He had a tough time there but so did his colleagues, although linebacker Tim Nowell and cornerback Alvin Price, both juniors, donated outstanding contributions.

The pair are expected to return next fall, while Trojan quarterback Donohoe packs his strong right arm off to college, much to Davlin's relief. In addition to maneuvering for 12 points, he passed for 222 yards.

The Trojan defense proved superior in containing Tam's elusive backfield. The visiting Indians trotted out three quarterbacks, including first-time starter Tim Nowell, Mark Dawson and Pat Locey, plus a plethora of runners.

The rushers featured Tom Collins, appearing for the first time this year after suffering a shoulder dislocation, Price, Don Parker and Clifford Hall. The quartet logged nearly equal time but no points.

This talented foursome posed many difficulties for the Terra Linda defense spearheaded by Steve Withers; conversely, the Trojan stoppers proved perplexing for the Tam field generals.

When not deposited on the hard turf, Locey showed he could scramble like Donohoe; Nowell displayed throwing distance comparable to Donohoe;

San Rafael Loses First Game, 13-12

A third period penalty nullified San Rafael High School's go-ahead touchdown and the visiting Bulldogs dropped their first football game in three outings, a 13-12 decision to Homestead High School in Sunnyvale last night.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser hit wingback Dave Urquhart with a 35-yard scoring strike, but an official spotted an ineligible Bulldog receiver downfield, thus precluding the six-pointer.

"That could have iced the game," Bulldog coach Bob Muster said today, "but you never know."

He explained, "we were simply outhit. They came right at us like we expected. But they are big and execute very well." Homestead has a ball-control attack featuring the field generalship of quarterback Dave Ralston and the running of flankerback Mike Morrison.

The pair were shut off inside, but winning coach Mort Vandenberghe, an erstwhile Ukiah area coach, adjusted his strategy, enabling the pair to skirt the ends in the second half.

The circling of the flanks worked well, providing the hosts steered clear of lanky Bulldog defensive end Duke Bessee. "He played a good game all around, and so did Urquhart."

Other than this pair, Muster chose to reserve comments on individuals "until we view the films Monday."

Meanwhile, Muster will mull

Firm Blasts False Turf Injury Call

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Monsanto Co., the leading producer of synthetic turf, has assailed demands by the National Football League Players Association for a moratorium on further synthetic turf installations in stadiums.

A Monsanto spokesman said Friday a charge by the association that "there has been an alarming rise in player injuries on account of the increased use of the artificial surfaces" is "irresponsible and completely without basis in fact."

"Prior to the introduction of AstroTurf, Monsanto did extensive laboratory testing to determine the best design and to provide performance characteristics acceptable to the users," the company said in a statement.

"These tests involved shock absorbency, traction, drainage, durability and other factors."

"We further learned that responsible, independent groups such as the NCAA, staffed by team trainers, physicians and orthopedic surgeons, were conducting much broader surveys," Monsanto said.

49er, Raider Ticket Hikes Investigated

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Fans of the Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers could be in for a cash bonus soon.

It was revealed Friday that the federal government is investigating ticket price hikes made by the two teams to learn if they violated President Nixon's wage-price freeze.

The 49ers boosted admission prices by a dollar per contest to their approximately 40,000 season ticket holders and the Raiders raised prices 50 cents per game to their approximately 50,000 season ticket holders.

Half of the 49er hike was an excise tax that goes to the city to help pay off the cost of remodeling the team's new home in Candlestick Park and therefore could be legal.

It was revealed here Friday that the Office of Emergency Preparedness is checking into the Bay Area teams' price situation.

The Atlanta Falcons had to abandon a proposed ticket price hike and have filed suit on grounds that the price hikes were made prior to the Aug. 15 wage-price freeze.

Rain Washes Out Playoff Opener Of Orioles, A's

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rain and wet grounds today forced a one-day postponement of the opening of the American League championship series between the Baltimore Orioles and Oakland Athletics.

The postponement was announced about two and one-half hours before the scheduled 1 p.m. EDT start of the game. There had been an almost steady drizzle, developing at times into showers, since shortly after midnight.

The first two games of the best-of-five series were rescheduled for Sunday and Monday in Baltimore.

Dave McNally, the Orioles' 21-game winner, and Vida Blue, Oakland's 24-game winner, had been scheduled to pitch the opener.

American Leauge president Joe Cronin made the decision to postpone the game. It was the first rainout since the playoffs began three years ago.

Cronin said there would be no travel day before the series resumes in Oakland. The first game there will be on Tuesday, as scheduled.

Both the Orioles and the Oakland A's had to cancel workouts Friday because of the rain, remnants of Hurricane Ginger, which pelted the tarp-covered field although it cleared up late in the day.

The Orioles aready have had 14 rainouts this season and wound up playing a 158-game schedule because four other rained out games —including a July 29 contest when Blue was scheduled to pitch —were never replayed.

But Blue did pitch against the Orioles twice early in the season and he beat them, 1-0, and 2-1, on a pair of four-hitters enroute to his glittering 24-8 record that made him the sensation of the baseball season.

The long season seemed to take its toll on the 22-year-old lefthander and he was 1-2 the final month of the season after owning a 23-6 mark on Aug. 29. He also wasn't in any mood Friday for speculating on whether he thought he could beat the Orioles again.

"I'll just go out and pitch," Blue said in the Oakland dressing room Friday, "I'll throw the ball and if they hit it, they do, and if they don't, they don't."

Blue then said, "don't start asking me questions because I'm not going to answer them. I'm going back to the hotel and get some rest." When asked by a group of reporters why he wouldn't talk, Blue said, "my reasons, Vida Blue's reasons." Asked if he was uptight, Blue said, "What's uptight?"

However, Manager Dick Williams insists that Blue's arm is sound and he's regained the form he showed earlier in the season. "Velocity-wise, he's not as fast as he was at the first of the year but knowledge-wise and control-wise, he's much better," Williams says.

Sal Bando, the club's third baseman, admits the team had "some doubts" about Blue in mid-September. "He wasn't throwing the ball as hard as he was before. Guys were getting hits off him who couldn't touch him before. They were even getting hits off him with two strikes," Bando said.

But Bando said Blue flashed his old form when he pitched 12 scoreless innings in his last two starts and he said, "you'll see him throwing hard against the Orioles."

Williams estimated that Blue threw the fast ball 95 per cent of the time early in the season but throws it 85 per cent now because, "he's getting his breaking stuff over."

If the A's — 0 0 13-10 under the dog in the best of five series — are to have realistic chance, it's considered a must for Blue to win the opening game. In the nine games the club played without Blue, Baltimore had a 7-2 edge.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver will start lefthander Dave McNally, 21-5, despite a 36-day stint on the disabled list with bad elbows, against the A's. Even though McNally has reached the 20 victory mark for four consecutive years, he's been overshadowed by Blue this season.

If rain doesn't foul up things, it'll be Mike Cuellar against Jim Hunter on Sunday with Monday a travel day. The series is scheduled to resume in Oakland on Tuesday with Jim Palmer against Chuck Dobson.

The winner will host the first two games of the world series next weekend.

Laver Ends Lutz' Giant-Killing Spree

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Bob Lutz' giant-killing spree in men's singles at the $50,000 Redwood Bank International Open has been brought to an abrupt halt by redheaded Rod Laver.

But it took considerable effort by the top-seeded Australian to beat the unranked Lutz 7-6, 2-6, 6-4 in Friday's quarterfinals at the Berkeley Tennis Club. A day earlier, Lutz had cut down fifth-seeded Jan Kodes and he was aiming for another upset over Laver.

But the Aussie ace rose to the occasion and garnered a point when he needed one by either a rocket serve, deft volley or pinpoint placement.

"I was quite confident going into the match," said Lutz. "I've been playing better than I've ever played in my life. But, unfortunately, Rod also was at the top of his game."

Arthur Ashe, the sixth seed, used a devastating backhand to score a mild upset over second-seeded Cliff Drysdale 6-2, 6-2. Ashe's booming volley off the backhand forced poor passing shots by Drysdale.

Laver met Tom Okker of the Netherlands today in one semifinal match while Ashe and Australia's Ken Rosewall tangled in the other. The winners play for the singles title Sunday.

Okker defeated Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 while the fourth-seeded Rosewall eliminated Marty Riessen in easy fashion 6-1, 6-3.

$9 Million Offer For The Indians

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A group headed by former Cleveland third baseman Al Rosen and industrialist George Steinbrenner have offered to buy the Indians for $9 million, it was reported today.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said the Steinbrenner-Rosen group made the offer to Indians owner Vernon Stouffer.

Steinbrenner denied he had made any firm offer, the Plain Dealer said, but did admit he has talked over the situation with Indians owner Vernon Stouffer.

"All I can say is that I have an interest in seeing the ball club stay in Cleveland," said Steinbrenner. "I have been a close friend of Mr. Stouffer's for a long time. I have the highest regard for him."

Seattle Tips Winless Warriors

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—Lenny Wilkens sank two free throws with three seconds left to clinch a 104-100 come-from-behind victory for unbeaten Seattle over winless Golden State in the first game of a National Basketball Association pre-season doubleheader Friday night.

Portland and Milwaukee played in the second game.

Golden State, led by Jim Barnett's 13 points, moved to a 57-45 halftime bulge and increased it to 19 points, 75-56 with four minutes left in the third quarter.

However, Spencer Haywood, the game's high scorer with 26, sparked Seattle's comeback with nine points as the Sonics outscored the Warriors 19-7 to move within seven at the quarter's end.

The surge continued into the fourth quarter with the Sonics going ahead to stay midway through the final period.

Dick Snyder added 21 for Seattle while Cazzie Russell was high for Golden State with 20. Nate Thurmond scored 18 for the Warriors.

Three Teams Tied In Prep Soccer Loop

Terra Linda, Redwood and Tamalpais high schools, all with a win and a tie, shared the Marin County Athletic League soccer leadership after the opening week.

In MCAL action yesterday, Terra Linda moved into a first place tie with a 1-0 triumph over Novato on the loser's field. Other results: host Redwood drubbed Marin Catholic 4-2; visiting Drake and San Rafael battled to a scoreless deadlock; while invading Tamalpais and San Marin played to a 2-2 standoff.

Kurt Erlandson scored Terra Linda's lone goal. Schariar Sarabi of Redwood and Dave Stacey of Marin Catholic were landed for fine play.

On Tuesday at 4 p.m., San Rafael visits Marin Catholic; San Marin is at Novato; Tamalpais treks to Drake; and Terra Linda hosts Redwood.

Pirates Favored To Take Series

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The San Francisco Giants, after a day to get over their scary western victory, were favored to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates today in the opening game of the National League playoffs with Giant Gaylord Perry pitching against Pirate Steve Blass.

However, the well-rested Pirates, runaway winners of the N. L. East, were slight favorites at 5-6 to win the best-three-of-five playoffs and a berth in the World Series starting a week from today.

One thing all the experts were predicting was that there will be plenty of slugging in the showdown that starts at Candlestick Park at 1 p.m. PDT (4 p.m. EDT)

"I'll tell you one thing," said Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh, "Ain't nobody gonna be pitching any shutouts in this series with the bunch of hitters we've both got."

The Giants, however, will probably be missing their top slugger, Bobby Bonds, when they take the field. Rightfielder Bonds, who led the Giants in homers win 33 and runs-batted in with 102, missed the final game of the season Thursday night because of a pulled muscle in his side and Giant manager Charlie Fox wasn't about to take chances by returning him to the lineup too soon. "I don't want Bobby to play today if his side still hurts," said Fox. "I'd rather he took an extra day off and then came back healthy."

Dave Kingman, who filled in for Bonds Thursday and slammed an important two-run homer for the Golden Gate team in its clinching 5-1 victory over the San Diego Padres, will get the call in right field again.

"Kingman showed he can play under pressure, and I don't think we lose much with him in there in Bonds' place," said Fox.

Righthanders Perry (16-12) and Blass (15-8) get their starting assignments in the opening game with plenty of rest. Despite the Giants' wild scramble to stave off the onrushing Los Angeles Dodgers in the closing weeks of the season, Fox was able to keep his staff from getting jumbled and weary. Perry goes into this opener off three days rest and Blass has had five days rest.

The belief is that if the Giants had clinched their division as early as the Pirates clinched in the East, Fox would have preferred to have Juan Marichal pitch the opening game of the playoffs. However, in a nip-and-tuck race Fox maneuvered so that Marichal would be able to pitch the last game of the season if the division pennant came down to that one game—that's exactly what happened, and Fox's strategy paid off as Marichal won the big one with a five hitter.

Now Fox plans to have John Cumberland pitch the second game of the playoffs and have Marichal ready with three days rest when the playoffs, after a day off Monday, switch to Pittsburgh for the third game on Tuesday. For the Pirates, Murtaugh has 19-game winner Dock Ellis, starting pitcher in this year's All-Star game, ready for the second, and ex-Cardinal Nelson Briles to oppose Marichal in the third.

49ers Take On Eagles Sunday

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — With a new-found running attack, the San Francisco 49ers look for their second straight road victory Sunday against the winless Philadelphia Eagles. The game will be televised by CBS (Channels 5 and 10) beginning at 10 a.m.

Vic Washington, playing his first season in the National Football Conference after a couple of years in Canadian football, is giving the 49ers some ground speed which they have lacked in recent years.

Washington sprinted for 82 yards in San Francisco's win over the Saints last week to help the 49ers amass 194 rushing yards. That's the most for a 49er team since 1968 when they ran for 248 yards against Atlanta.

Coach Dick Nolan says he will start Washington ahead of Doug Cunningham while Ken Willard operates out of the fullback slot behind quarterback John Brodie.

Cornerback Bruce Taylor of the 49ers has been limping with a hamstring pull this week and may see limited duty against the Eagles who have lost their first two games to Cincinnati and Dallas.

In case Taylor can't make the opening whistle, Nolan will go with second-year man Mike Simpson. On the defensive line, veteran tackle Charlie Krueger will start ahead of Stan Hindman. Krueger has recovered from minor pre-season surgery on his knee.

Philadelphia quarterbacks Pete Liske and Rick Arrington have been intercepted 10 times so far this season. They usually try to hit Ben Hawkins, Harold Jackson and Gary Ballman. Hawkins has had some outstanding games in the past against the 49ers.

Running back Tom Woodeshick, a nine-year pro, is nursing a knee injury but may go against San Francisco.

Judging from past scores, Nolan isn't taking the Eagles too lightly. Each of their last three meetings in 1966, 1967 and 1969 have been decided by one point.

San Francisco enjoys a 6-2-1 lead over the Eastern Division Eagles in their cross-country series.

The Eagles defense got a boost this week with the return to action of middle linebacker Tim Rossovich. He will start his first game since a preseason knee injury put him on the shelf.

Sacramento Road Trip For Sonoma

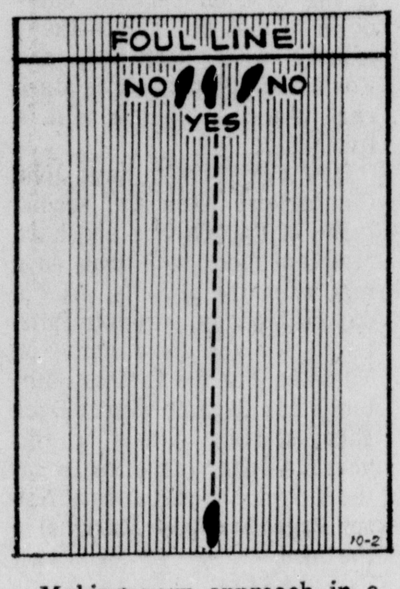
The Sonoma State College footballers, 1-1, visit Sacramento State, 0-2, tonight at 8 o'clock on the Hornet Field in a Far Western Conference contest. This game marks the first varsity meeting between the two schools.

The Rohnert Park team faces a victory-hungry opponent which features a balanced passing-running attack. All-FWC split end Chris Bowman, who prepped at Terra Linda High, heads the attack unit with seven catches for 139 yards and two scores. Dave Sobolewski and Jim Holmes alternate at quarterback.

The hosts top runner is blockbusting fullback Larry Crawford. The 6-foot, 220-pounder has chalked up 117 yards in two games.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



Making your approach in a straight line is important in attaining accuracy. If you drift one way or the other, your accuracy will suffer. Should you think you're drifting, practice-roll a few balls and check to see that your left foot is on the same board at the finish as it was at the start.

Orange Crate Derby On Tap In Novato

The San Rafael and Novato Jaycees will sponsor an Orange Crate Derby tomorrow in Novato starting with 9 a.m. registration for children 10-15 years-old for the right to compete in the state finals at Pleasant Hill Oct. 10.

Safety checks and trial runs will be held at 10 a.m., an hour before eliminations start.

The Derby car construction is left to the imagination of the individual, according to Novato race chairman Tom Senior. However, the vehicles cannot exceed seven feet in length and four feet in width, nor can the combined weight of car and driver surpass 250-pounds.

Winners will be determined by a double-elimination racing schedule on a Novato course near the San Carlos Way and San Marin Drive intersection.

Henry Fires 297 Game

Ed Henry, San Rafael plumber, rolled 11 straight strikes Thursday night before missing on his last shot in the North Bay Classic League at Country Club Bowl, San Rafael.

His light hit left the 2-4-5 to give him a 297 game, high score of the past week's bowling in Marin County. Henry, who rolled games of 214 and 209 for a 720 series, also rolled a 657 series to tie for top honors at Greenbrae Lanes.

The Redwood junior varsity and frosh footballers registered wins this week.

The Frosh scored a 24-0 triumph over visiting Petaluma Junior High School Firday, after the Larkspur-based junior varsity dumped invading Drake 25-12 on Thursday.

The Giant yearlings who won nine straight over a two-year span, got a three touchdown past performance from Eddie Anderson.

San Rafael Driver In Sprint Car Race

Rich Scettrini of San Rafael will be driving car number 99 tonight, the Western Plating Co. Special, in the sprint car races at Petaluma Speedway.

Time trials begin at 7 p.m. and racing at 8 o'clock on the Petaluma oval. Scettrini, in his first year of sprint car racing, ranks 10th in the association standings.

TROJANS

and Dawson punted with the same efficiency as Donohoe.

Alas, the trio combined could not equal the four touchdown drives the Trojan quarterback engineered. In the opening 12-minute period, Donohoe took his team 73 yards in seven calls for the first score following the opening kickoff. The big play was a 60 yard screen pass from Donohoe to Sabel on the first sequence from scrimmage. Donohoe capped it with a two-yard journey around left end.

The Trojans crossed the goal line twice in the second period with Sabel blasting over from a yard out to climax a six-play, 68-yard drive; and Buckley fell on Locey's fumble across paydirt, seconds prior to the intermission.

Afterwards, Davlin mused, "what can I say... we gave them the fits" — and Terra Linda unwrapped its third victory prize.

Brooks' Glove Headed For Hall Of Fame

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The glove all-star Baltimore third baseman Brooks Robinson has used the last three years will be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. after this season.

Ken Smith, director of the Hall of Fame, will pick up the glove after the playoffs or the world series, depending on when Robinsón is through with it.

"It'll hold up for the playoffs and the world series," said Robinson, who has won 11 Golden Glove Awards and has appeared in 15 consecutive all-star games.

Robinson said he got the glove three years ago from outfielder Dave May, who has since been traded to Milwaukee.

"I gave him two gloves for one," Robinson said. "It felt good when it was new — just the right size and it wasn't too big."

"It was put out by Rawlings and is called the Pro Model. It doesn't have any name autograph in it, like Marty Marion or Joe Doaks," he explained.

Robinson holds a major league record with nine years as the leading fielder. He holds two other major league and three league records for third basemen.

Marin Soccermen Lose To Ohlone

College of Marin's soccer team lost to Ohlone College, 2-1 yesterday on the Stephenson High School field in Fremont, with Joe Navarro, formerly of Drake High School, scoring Marin's lone goal.

Next game for Marin will be Friday at 3:15 p.m. in Kentfield against DeAnza College of Cupertino.

Miami Crushes Baylor, 41-15; Irish Are Next

MIAMI (UPI) — For the moment, the Miami Hurricanes don't want to think about Notre Dame next week. They are savoring a 41-15 victory over the Baylor Bears Friday night and Chuck Foreman's 50-yard run in the second period.

Foreman, a lanky halfback from Frederick, Md., had put the Hurricanes ahead in the fateful second quarter with a one-yard scoring run and a 15-yard touchdown pass to flanker Bill Perkins.

Miami got the ball again after giving up a two-point safety when kicker Mike Burke saw a centered ball sail over his head and downed it in the end zone.

Suddenly it was fourth down with one yard to go at exact midfield and only 27-seconds left before halftime. Miami quarterback John Hornie brook, a shifty option ball handler, pitched out to Foreman around the right end. The 201-pound runner broke a tackle at the line of scrimmage and went all the way, leaving Baylor bodies sprawled on the artificial Orange Bowl turf in his twisting wake.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

A Key Game For Redskins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Dallas-Washington drama tomorrow might be titled, "After The Fall." One of the teams will fall from grace — the special grace of the unbeaten.

Dallas is 2-0 and the Redskins are off to the same quick start under new head coach George Allen. There's always the possibility of a tie of course, but ties don't count in the final standings. This is an early-season situation that calls for a big win and each will be trying for that when they clash in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas. First place in the Eastern Division of the National Conference is at stake.

In other NFC contests, Sunday, Detroit (1-1) is a 7 point choice over Atlanta; Chicago (2-0), one of the four remaining unbeaten teams in pro football, finds itself a fourpoint underdog to Los Angeles (0-1-1); San Francisco (1-1) is a 14 1-2 point choice over Philadelphia (0-2) and St. Louis (1-1) figures nine points better than the New York Giants (11).

In the AFC, it will be a battle of veteran quarterbacks John Unitas and Earl Morrall against rookie Jim Plunkett as Baltimore (1-1) and New England (1-1) tangle at Foxboro, Mass. The Colts are picked by 10 1-2.

Also, Pittsburgh (1-1) is given a two-point edge at home over San Diego (1-1); Miami (1-0-1) is seen as eight better than the New York Jets (0-2) and Kansas City (1-1) is tabbed by 6 1-2 over Denver, (0-1-1-).

In inter-conference tilts, Minnesota (1-1) is favored by 14 1-2 over Buffalo; Houston (0-2) by 10 over New Orleans (1-1) and Cincinnati (1-1) by 1 over Green Bay (1-1).

Oakland (1-1) is given a chance to hand Cleveland (2-0) its first loss in an AFC clash on national television (ABC-9:00 p.m. EDT) Monday night that winds down the third week of the season. The Raiders are picked by three.

The Washington defense, which has limited its first two opponents to a total of 20 points —a conference low—will be severely tested by a Dallas offense that has scored a total of 91 points in its first two victories, including 42 last week against Philadelphia.

The Cowboys also have a couple of other streaks going for them. They've won 15 of their last 16 games since the 10th game of last season and have taken the last six contests with the Redskins.

Washington, on the other hand, is seeking to win its first three games of a saason for the first time since 1947. And Dallas is 0-3 against teams coached by George Allen, who defeated the Cowboys while mentor of the Los Angeles Rams.

All of these fancy figures won't mean much once the real hitting starts, however.

By that time, it will all get a lot more basic. Can Billy Kilmer, who had a fine game in the 'Skins' 30-3 rout of the Giants last week, pass accurately against that awesome Dallas defense that intercepted seven Philadelphia passes? Can Larry Brown, bothered by a hand injury, be an effective runner? Is Roger Staubach sufficiently recovered from the mild concussion he suffered in last week's game? Who will win the aerial showdown between Cowboy defenders Herb Adderley, Mel Renfro, Cornell Green and Charley Waters and Redskin receivers Charley Taylor (two TD catches against the Giants), Roy Jefferson and Jerry Smith?

It's early in the year, true. But this one may settle a lot. It could make clear just how strong Allen's outfit of tagalongs is going to be. Or it could prove even more clearly that the Cowboys of coach Tom Landrey are finally moving with precision toward the greatness that has eluded them for so long.

Ali Signs To Fight Big Buster Mathis

NEW YORK (UPI)—They might have to dub it "The Suet Struggle" when Muhammad Ali faces Buster Mathis in a 12-round bout at the Houston Astrodome Nov. 17.

The 29-year-old Ali weighed a less-than-svelte 220 1-2 when he disposed of former sparring partner Jimmy Ellis in the 12th round of his last fight, on July 26, also at the Astrodome. The former heavyweight champion had to wear special high-waist trunks to help hide an ungainly roll never seen in his "floatlike-a-butterfly-sting-like-a-bee' days.

Mathis, 27, has not fought since he lost a 12-round decision to Jerry Quarry in March, 1969. The 1964 AAU champion tended toward a blubbery 230 in his active days.

The pair signed for the fight at a mid-town Manhattan hotel Friday.

Ali was guaranteed $300,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts by Top Rank Inc., while Mathis will receive 15 per cent.

Jimmy Iselin, president of Peers Management, which oversees Mathis' career, was confident that the $200,000 his organization put up towards Ali's guarantee will pay dividends in the future.

Ali was to have fought young Mac Foster in Tokyo on Nov. 29. Presumably, the fight with Mathis rules that one out. The Tokyo match reportedly has run into financial problems and difficulty in securing permission from the Japanese Boxing Federation for it to be held.

Ali has insisted that he will have three more fights, including the one with Mathis, in his tuneup campaign for a rematch with Joe Frazier and a chance to regain the title he lost over 15 torrid rounds to the undefeated Philadelphia slugger last March. The rematch is expected to be held next spring in Los Angeles.

Mathis was knocked out in 11 rounds by Frazier on March 4, 1968, in a fight billed as the "Heavyweight Championship of New York State."

In his only other fight against a ranking heavyweight, Mathis outpointed George Chuvalo in a 12-rounder prior to the Quarry bout.

Mrs. Gunter Is Upset Victor

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Sixth-seeded Nancy Richey Gunter of San Angelo, Tex., upset third-seeded Francoise Durr of France Friday in the $18,000 Virginia Slims Thunderbird Tennis tournament.

Mrs. Gunter ousted Miss Durr 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

The tournament's No. 2 seed, Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, defeated Leslie Hunt of Australia 6-2, 6-2, and Kerry Melville of Australia defeated Judy Dalton, also of Australia 6-1, 6-3.

The tournament continues through Sunday.

Behr Says Rivers Fight Not Over

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, fresh from the Senate defeat of his "wild rivers" legislation, today warned conservationists they "haven't even fielded a team" in their battle to save California from pollution and exploitation.

Of 240 air and water pollution measures introduced in the Legislature last year, he told a University of California conference, "only 85 of the more insignificant ones became law."

This year, with 513 such measures introduced, the proportion of fatalities will be even greater, he predicted.

Among those already dead were ones to protect the coastline, ban nonrecyclable containers, phosphates, persistent pesticides, lead in gasoline, the Southern Crossing bridge on San Francisco Bay, billboards on scenic highways, and to preserve the Eel, Klamath and Trinity rivers as wild and free-flowing of dams — Behr's own bill killed Thursday.

The senator, in his speech prepared for the conference, said "the sad fact is that in California today most 'environmental' laws are still being written by the lobbyists for the anitconservation interests."

Behr spoke on "The Greening of California — An Environmental Outlook." The conference sponsored by the University Extension was entitled "From Goldenstate to Superstate: California since the Second World War."

"The picture of who's got the clout in Sacramento is a little clearer," Behr said, when you find that just the oil, automobile and timber lobbyists outmanned conservationist lobbyists 27 to 6, and outspent them 10 to 1.

Behr suggested several steps to effective conservationist action in Sacramento, among them: organize with groups outside the conservation movement, and communicate with legislators as a member of a group, not as an individual.

Come equipped with the facts. Too many conservationists are long on zeal and indignation, but short on facts.

Explain environmental problems calmly and patiently to a legislator.

Get to committee members before hearings. "They are seldom convinced by oratory, and are more often irritated at having to sit through it."

Let your legislator know you are prepared to flex political muscles at campaign in his behalf.

"The conservationist must be willing to put his money where his platitudes are, and pay part of the price of the war on pollution."

Fight pressure with pressure. Organize a "pollution lobby" with men who know how to lobby, keep the pressure on, get the message across, "and summon the troops when they are needed."

Indicate support through telegrams, letters, petitions and Capitol visits.

Behr insisted that government "will respond to responsible pressure."

He cautioned conservationists that "there are no total or lasting victories.

"It is naive to think, for example, that San Francisco Bay was ever saved. The bay was never saved; it was merely reprieved, and it is constantly threatened by pollution, bay fill, ambitious dreams of port planners, and greatest threat of all, the Baldwin Channel (to Stockton)."

Push For Aqueduct Funds Hit

For at least the next two weeks, the Marin Municipal Water District will not be allowed to urge a "yes" vote on Proposition B, the Nov. 2 ballot measure asking voter permission to participate in financing the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct.

Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire yesterday issued a temporary injunction against the water district and its directors until 10 a.m. on Oct. 14, when the district must appear to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent.

The judge acted on the request of Huey D. Johnson of Mill Valley, western regional director of the Nature Conservancy, who contends that the water district has no right to use funds collected from water users to advocate passage of water bonds or to urge a "yes" vote on Proposition B.

Johnson's action was filed yesterday by attorney Douglas P. Ferguson of Mill Valley.

Not only is Johnson trying to stop the water district from campaigning in favor of Proposition B, but he also is asking return of public funds spent on the passage of Proposition H last November. The measure authorized the district to issue $11.5 million in bonds to improve water facilities.

Johnson claims the water district spent at least $19,500 for brochures and advertising for the 1970 bond campaign. The expenditures were illegal, he contended.

Besides recovery of the $19,500, Johnson seeks a civil penalty against the district of $3,000 for violating the requirement to report campaign expenses, and an injunction against further spending to advocate passage of Proposition B next month.

$2,350 In New Watches Stolen

Burglars who broke into two freight shipping offices stole $2,350 in new wristwatches, San Rafael police reported yesterday.

The break-ins were at the Pacific Motor Trucking and Railway Express Agency offices, both at 35 Jordan Street, Wednesday night or early Thursday. Two cases of watches consigned to a San Rafael jeweler and an electric adding machine were stolen from the express agency. Nothing was taken from the truck lines office, police said.

The skin of the beaver was often used as money in early Canada.

Vocational Nurses Vote To Affiliate

Vocational nurses at Marin General Hospital have voted to affiliate with the California Licensed Vocational Nurses' Association, an association spokesman said yesterday.

James W. Andrews, a representative for the Oakland-based association, said Thursday's vote was 28 for and 15 against. He said affiliation required a majority vote (26) of the total number of vocational nurses (52), even though all nurses didn't vote.

The vote came, he said, as two Bay Area unions continue efforts to organize all hospital workers at Marin General. He named those two unions as the Hospital and Institutional Workers Union and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes.

Andrews said his association was approached earlier this year by vocational nurses who did not wish to lose professional identity by being included in a larger union.

Andrews said the next step is to meet with hospital officials to work out a "memorandum of agreement."

"Utilization of LVNs (licensed vocational nurses) will be one of the first items we will discuss," he said.

In the past, he explained, vocational nurses at Marin General have expressed concern that responsibilities assigned them did not reflect their level of training.

He said a vocational nurse can perform nearly all duties that registered nurses are regularly assigned.

Gun Wielding Burglars Are Surprised

Two gun-wielding burglars were surprised yesterday while rifling a Sausalito residence when the owners of the home showed up, Sausalito police reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Ty Tolomei of 120 Filbert Street returned home about 4 a.m. and heard a noise upstairs. The couple reported two black men, both wearing ski masks and holding guns, started down the stairs toward them.

Mr. and Mrs. Tolomei locked themselves in a downstairs bedroom, according to police, who said the two men fled from the residence through a kitchen door and went into the hills.

Nothing appeared to be missing from the home, but police discovered clothing, firearms, money and jewelry rapped in a bedspread in one bedroom. Officers said they found two guns and two ski masks in the hills behind the residence.

Knives Brought To Dinner In England

CHICAGO (UPI)—Nearly 300 years ago in England the man who came to dinner brought along a knife—and so did his wife.

Knives for guests were available only in homes of the most wealthy, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, so the guests had to bring their own.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Market Weathers Unpleasant News

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market weathered a barrage of unpleasant news as it posted its first weekly gain in a month. Turnover was moderate.

Aside from bargain hunting and long term optimism about the economy, there was little to encourage buying of stocks.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Traders worried about the chaotic world monetary situation, the unanswered questions about phase two of President Nixon's economic program, and a drop in the government's s index of leading economic indicators in August.

A strike by east and gulf coast longshoremen at the weekend also made traders a little nervous, although there was widespread belief Nixon would invoke the Taft-Hartley Act before things got out of hand.

For the week, the NYSE common stock index registered a gain of 0.40 to 54.66. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index rose 0.78 to 98.93, while the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 4.67 to 893.98. Advances topped declines, 851 to 788 among 1,851 issues crossing the tape.

Volume for the five days aggregated 56,965,120 shares, down from 61,173,880 shares a week earlier, and also well below the 72,245,038 shares traded during the year ago period.

A University of Michigan survey on consumer buying intentions also had bearish implications for Wall Street, but like everything else it, too, had little impact on stocks, as bargain hunters bid up the recently depressed stock market.

According to the University's Survey Research Center, American people generally back Nixon's wage-price freeze but are quite pessimistic about its achieving any early success in slowing inflation or reducing unemployment.

A more cheery item for investors was a statement by Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans that phase two of Nixon's economic policy must "restore the profit-making potential of business" so it can expand and create more jobs. This tended to encourage traders because there had been concern recently that the administration would bow to pressure from labor groups for an excess profits tax.

As for the stock market's outlook, Stanley Schwartz, a general partner of Oppenheimer & Co., said "the long term trend is up." He said the economy continues to improve but many people are taking a wait and see attitude.

"A lot of the nation's business has not felt the effects of the improved economy," Schwartz concluded, "and as a result there is considerable caution around." Robert H. Parks, vice president and director of economic research for duPont Glore Forgan, said "overwhelming evidence will be forthcoming which will help to convince investors that the United States economy is in a sustained recovery."

Queen's Cousin Officially Opens British Week Events

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Princess Alexandra of England, the chic, blue-eyed blonde cousin of Queen Elizabeth, got British Week festivities started Friday with the usual pomp and circumstances.

Then she ducked out for a beer.

The Princess told a large crowd of invited guests at City Hall, "I hope as a result of this week the bonds of friendship as well as those of trade will be further strengthened between our two countries."

A red carpet was rolled all the way from the sidewalk to the top of the staircase at City Hall as a couple of hundred civic leaders sat underneath the rotunda for the opening of the nine-day British trade promotion event, the first ever held in the United States.

The Princess, wearing an over-the-knee dress of a coral-persimmon color, and her husband later visited a just-opened British pub in Union Square.

Her husband, the Honorable Angus Ogilvy, moved behind the bar and poured a few draughts of British beer.

"Look, I've got a new profession," he told his wife who had a small sip of beer which she said she doesn't like much.

The royal couple also visited the $1.25 million "Treasurers of the City of London" exhibit at City Hall where the 34-year-old princess chatted with children and other visitors.

She told one woman: "This is such a lovely city. I think I'll retire here."

But Princesses don't retire and have to carry on in the best British tradition.

Her Royal Highness had a full day, including the opening of the British "model rooms" display at Union Square, a visit to the City of London Pavilion at Civic Center, and finally the English-Speaking Union banquet.

Today's highlights turn from royal beauty to royal military might—17th century style—when the Hon. Artillery Company of Pikemen and Musketeers demonstrate drill movements.

She will be in attendance tonight when the 15th annual San Francisco Film Festival gets going at the Palace of Fine Arts theater.

In its early years, the festival openings were marked by incidents of pie-throwing, scantily clad starlets upstaging the movies, misplaced reels and other mishaps. But last year's event went smoothly.

The film shown will be "The Go-Between."

Reagan Assails Demos On Officer Protection

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan today promised a convention of California Republicans that as long as he is governor those who attack peace officers will be treated as violent criminals and not political revolutionaries.

He also criticized the Democratic-controlled Legislature for not passing the peace officer protection measures he requested in January.

"Since I asked for those laws," the governor said, "sixteen law enforcement and corrections employees have been killed in the line of duty. How many brave men must die before our opponents face reality?"

The measures generally would toughen penalties for assaulting peace officers or even advocating it.

"Sabotage and bombings and arson are not political crimes," Reagan said. "They are criminal acts of violence. And so long as I have anything to say about the matter, they will be treated as criminal acts."

"Killing a policeman is murder whether the bullet is fired by a bank robber or a self-proclaimed revolutionary martyr."

In a highly partisan speech prepared for the Republican State Central Committee's fall convention, Reagan also condemned Democratic reapportionment, "Gerrymandering", which he said has "cheated" Mexican-Americans.

And he criticized anti-poverty attorneys who are challenging California's new welfare reform act in the courts.

Reagan strongly endorsed President Nixon's foreign and domestic policies, which recently have been assailed from both the right and the left by some California Republicans.

Delegates were told by U. S. Attorney Genral Mitchell Friday night that Nixon plans "startling" new foreign and domestic "initiatives" between now and the 1972 election. Mitchell also accused Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Vance Hartke, D-Ind., of "gutter politics" in recent criticisms of Nixon's Vietnam policies.

Reagan led a sharp GOP attack on Democratic reapportioning. The legislature next week is scheduled to begin debating the reapportionment of legislative and congressional districts.

"The Democratic gerrymander 10 years ago deliberately deprived our fine citizens of Mexican descent of their rightful share of legislative representation —even though they are California's largest ethnic minority community," Reagan said.

Republican state chairman, Putnam Livermore, charged on Friday that Democrats are "stirring up a typical brand of reapportionment brew" that is "odoriferous."

Culture In Marin? Well, Door Is Open

"CULTURE HAS FINALLY come to Marin," someone remarked to state Sen. Peter Behr during intermission at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building on opening night.

Metropolitan Opera star Dorothy Kirsten had already sung her first number. The Marin Symphony Orchestra had already played the world permiere of a newly composed symphonic suite.

The comment which reached Behr's ears sounded like a statement of the obvious.

"Not really," he responded. "We have only the facility which will make it possible for culture to come to Marin."

THE SAN FRANCISCO Symphony has increased the number of its concerts scheduled in Marin for the coming season to four.

After two decades, the Marin Symphony Guild has been revitalized as the Marin Symphony Association and is preparing a long calendar of events for the new season, mostly centered at the new auditorium.

A Marin Concert Association has just been organized and foresees a schedule of four or five fall and winter events, beginning with Frula, the Yugoslavian folk dancers, Nov. 22.

The Family Service League will sponsor its a.m. series of six lectures and musical programs, starting Oct. 15.

Marin Civic Ballet and Actors Playhouse of Marin also have productions scheduled at the new auditorium.

THE MARIN SYMPHONY Orchestra, 85 professional and non-professional musicians under the baton of Sandor Salgo, never sounded so fine as in the new auditorium. Some thought they "played over their heads" on opening night, as the sports writers might say. Others, including I-J music critic Maybelle Speckmann, believe the Marin Symphony has long been just as good, but never before played in a place where the acoustics enabled listeners to hear how good it really was.

Either way, those who have faithfully supported the growth and development of Marin Symphony for the past 20 years can be justly proud of what their efforts finally have produced.

Marin Symphony has three concerts scheduled for the season ahead — Nov. 23, March 7, and April 11. The Marin Symphony Association also sponsors two performances of the Marin Youth Orchestra and a concert by Orchestra Piccola, both conducted by Hugo Rinaldi.

THE MARIN SYMPHONY Association is conducting its annual membership drive and season ticket sale.

Tickets for the four Marin concerts of the San Francisco Symphony are already on sale, as are tickets for the a.m. series of six lectures and music programs.

To supplement Senator Behr's remarks, one might say that culture is presently knocking on Marin's door.

If we wish to welcome culture to Marin, we need only open the door (of the ticket office).

Tickets for all these events are now available in one place, for the first time. A box office is open at the Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center where tickets for any and all auditorium events are obtainable.

IF YOU WISH to see the contemporary cultural scene in Marin in full perspective, you must look beyond the new auditorium building.

Dominican College in San Rafael is the site of a never-ending procession of musical and cultural presentations.

San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo is "home" for the Kensington Trio which presents periodic dinner concerts.

The Art and Garden Center in Ross is "home" for the Ross Valley Players, whose newest offering, "The Girl in the Freudian Slip" will open Oct. 22. Art shows are displayed there periodically.

Mill Valley's Bach-to-Mozart group presents its candlelight concerts at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley.

Today marked the opening of Mill Valley's 15th annual fall art festival. It will be open all day again tomorrow from 10 a.m. till dusk in Old Mill Park. The work of more than 200 artists and craftsmen is on display.

College of Marin periodically offers top musical, dramatic and artistic events.

Unfortunately, Festival Theater apparently has died for lack of support and it is said that this season may be the last for Marin Shakespeare Festival.

It is to be hoped that these latter two are not foreshadows of what's ahead culturally for Marin.

Let us hope that everything now in the planning and selling stage is successful and thereby encourages more and better performing arts presentations in the future.

—Jack Craemer

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the Petaluma Board of Education for pushing a study of year-around school scheduling — an obvious way to teach more children in the same number of classrooms.

BRICKBAT to the Office of Emergency Preparedness for its series of contradictory rulings on who is affected by the President's wage freeze. OEP's inability to make up its mind puts many people — school teachers, particularly — in the position of not knowing from day to day what their pay is to be.

BOUQUETS to parks supervisor Scott Tilden and the San Rafael Beautification Committee for their plan to retain a memory of the old courthouse by incorporating its Fifth Avenue entrance into a "mini-park" at the southeastern highway entrance to San Rafael.

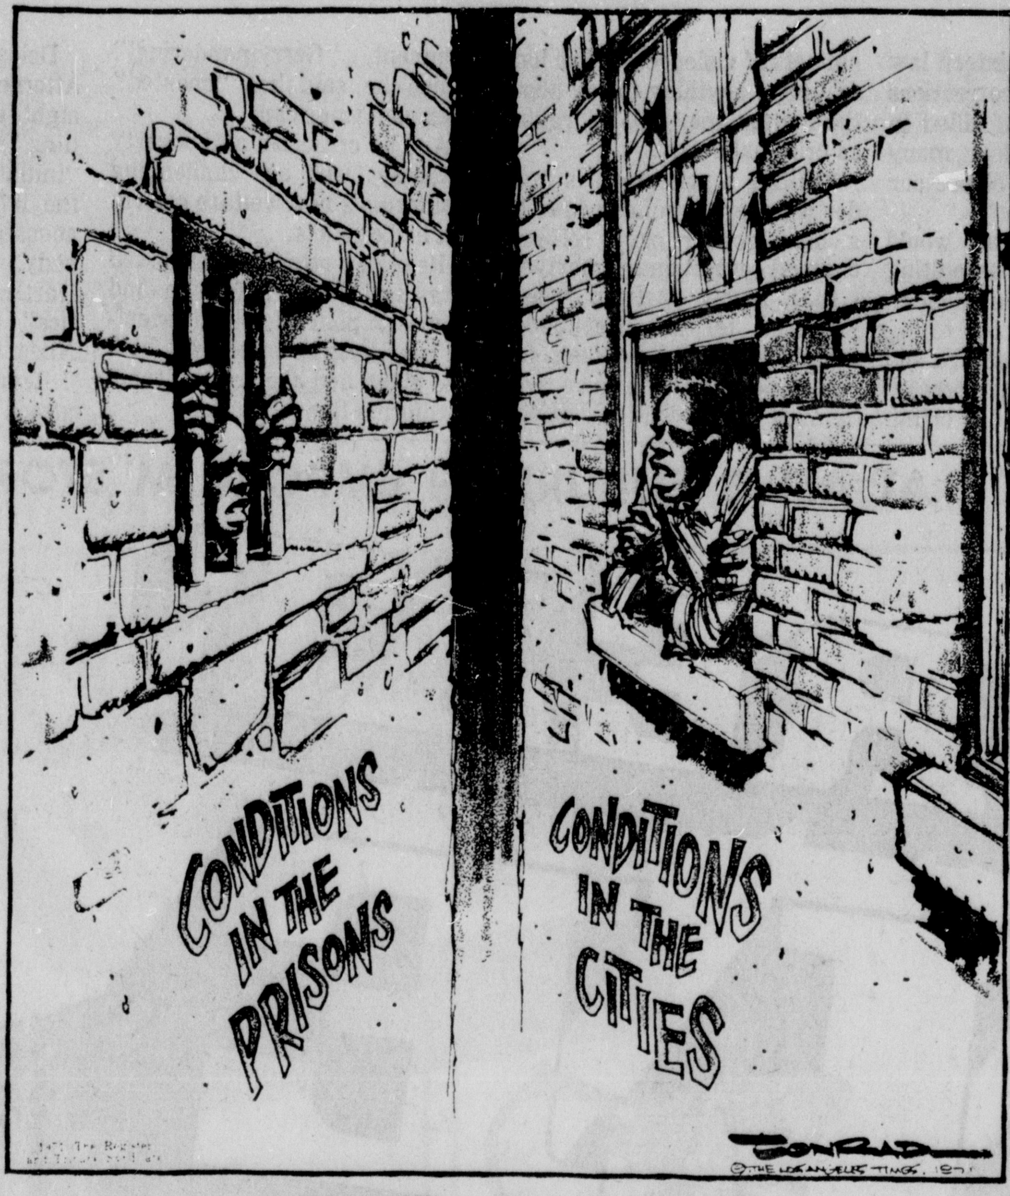
WORTH SAYING AGAIN

If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we should find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm all hostility. — Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.



"I drew life. . .How about you?"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Water District's Request Escalates

On Oct. 26, 1970, you wrote in an editorial supporting Measure H — the $11,500,000 Marin Municipal Water District bond issue that:

"If we thought this $4 million portion of the bond issue (for Marin Aqueduct II, State 1, from Novato to Hamilton AFB) represented merely a downpayment on eventual outby of $60 million or more, we should be very reticent to endorse it."

Now, less than a year later, the Marin Municipal Water District has called a referendum (Measure B) for water approval of a contract with the Sonoma County Water Agency, totalling $23,800,000 ($45,308,000, including interest) for the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct and $11,500,000 ($23,000,000 including interest) for a share of the Army Corps of Engineers Warm Springs Dam. According to County Counsel Doug Maloney, those figures are only estimates, not limitations.

On top of that, MMWD plans call for outlays of $22,110,000 ($41,926,000, including interest) for the Marin Aqueduct which will carry water from the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct terminus in Petaluma to points within the District.

Moreover, planned in-district improvements, including amounts approved last year, but not yet spent, total $33,620,000 ($66,797,000, including interest).

Grand estimated total over $177,000,000!

Who pays for this? We all do. "Very preliminary" reports from Stone and Youngberg, MMWD financial consultants, indicate a total rate increase from 1970-78 of 67.65 per cent (for a lower rate increase plus an ad valorem property tax rate reaching 32 cents per $100 of assessed valuation by 1977). Of course, even higher water bills and taxes would be in store beyond 1978.

Still 'Marvelous Marin' In Letters Column

I've always believed that to find out what kind of community you live in, there's no better way than to read the letters column. "What Our Readers Say" yesterday (Sept. 28) seems to confirm this.

First, we have a lady who asks you to do better because she is "antagonized" by (would you believe it?) four comic strips. Although I agree with her that two of them are personally unamusing, I'm sure she would find it easier to turn the page than for you to terminate your contracts with the suppliers.

Second, a Mr. Pontius . . . a seemingly self-proclaimed expert on the U.S. Constitution, froths about the horror of a citizen of the United States possibly feeling he was a part of a greater whole. After professing to know what was in the minds of the Founding Fathers when they wrote our constitution, the gentleman interprets the Pledge of Allegiance as making one a resident of San Anselmo, and Marin County. He then goes on to interpret the law as to the rights of citizens to vote anything into the Constitution. I may be mistaken, but I did not think the San Anselmans were proposing a constitutional amendment, and I do believe there is such a thing as "dual citizenship" under the laws of the U.S.A. As far as I know, the most generally cited interdiction concerns loss of citizenship as a result of bearing arms in the service of another nation. So I think Mr. Pontius was in his turn "unfair" to Mr. Skewes-Cox (neither of whom I know) and to those citizens of San Anselmo who have forsaken provincialism.

Third, fourth and fifth, however, lowered my adrenalin level back to normal. Mrs. Child has a novel (if probably unfruitful) suggestion to Max Friedman about the question of the future fate of the Town and Country Club acreage in Fairfax. The acting director of the Arab League office in San Francisco makes an even-tempered (if probably unilateral) rebuttal to the statements of the two young Palestinians now living in Marin. And Mr. Jerry Friedman from Point Reyes Station enlightens the rest of us on one of the permitted uses of national parks (in this case, dairying).

So, on balance, I guess, it's still Marvelous Marin. Three-out-of-five really ain't so bad!

GRATIA E. LANDLEY

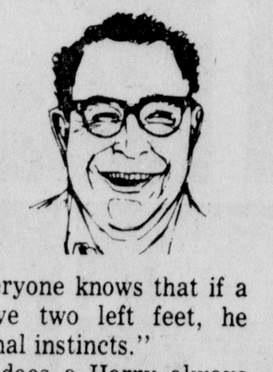
ART BUCHWALD



Latest Anti-Defamation League Is Simply Wild About Harry

WASHINGTON — I received a call from a guy last week who claimed he was president of the Harry Anti-Defamation League. He said, "You wrote an article last week in which you used the name Harry to make fun of a TV football situation. For years now radio, television and newspaper writers have been holding up the name Harry to ridicule and derision, and we Harrys have banned together to do something about it."

"Now wait a minute, sir," I protested. "I do not always use Harry when I need a fall guy. Sometimes I use George, other times Arnie and quite often I use Henry."

"That's what I mean," Harry said. "Why don't you ever make fun of the Steves or Jims or Jacks or Bills?"

"There is nothing funny about a Steve, a Jim, a Jack or a Bill," I answered frankly. "The image just isn't right. If I call my guy Chuck or Jack, my reader is going to expect him to punch someone in the nose. But if I call him Harry or Fred or Louie, the reader is going to expect him to be punched in the nose. It's as simple as that."

"BUT WHY SHOULD this be? We Harrys and Mortons and Arnies and Chesters have a right to live too."

"I didn't make the rules," I protested. "A long time ago there must have been a Harry who slipped on a banana peel. From then on, any time a writer needed a name for someone who was going to get all fouled up, he used Harry."

"Well, we Harrys don't like it," Harry said. "It's bad enough that people are always making fun of Harry, but it's even worse when they make him the guy who commits the crime on a TV show."

"I don't know why you take offense at that," I said. "Everyone knows that if a Harry doesn't have two left feet, he probably has criminal instincts."

"Yeah, but why does a Harry always have to be one of Rocco's boys or Frank's henchmen? Why can't he be the leader of the mob?"

"PEOPLE JUST DON'T think of Harry as a leader," I said. "Writers know this. If they have to come up with a name for a gang leader they would rather go with Red or Dusty or Phil. You just can't see a Harry being the brains behind a bank job. As a matter of fact, it's more likely that he's the guy to make the fatal error so everyone gets caught."

"You see? All your prejudices about Harrys are coming through. Those of us who are not public jokes are stool pigeons."

"Not necessarily," I said. "Max is more liable to rat on the gang than Harry."

"WE AREN'T TAKING IT any more," Harry said. "From now on every time we see a Harry presented in a bad light on television, we're going to call the sponsor and tell him that everyone in this country named Harry is going to boycott his product. And we also intend to cancel our subscriptions to any newspaper that holds up a Harry to derision."

"Frankly, sir . . . " I began.

"The name's Harry," he said angrily.

"Harry, then," I said. "I think you're being oversensitive. If your name was Hubert or Alfred or even Bert you might have a case. But I only use Harry when I'm looking for a minor schnook. If I'm looking for a real hopeless case I'll never use Harry."

"Who do you use then?"

"Marvin."

Phantom Fighters Give Rogers Only Middle East 'Blue Chip'

WASHINGTON — Sec. of State William P. Rogers' meeting with the foreign ministers of Israel and the Arab states in New York will present a position sure to arouse familiar passions. Despite reports to the contrary, the present intention is to hold firm against repeated Israeli requests for numbers of Phantom fighter-bombers.

The decision is based on the conviction that the balance of military power continues to be in Israel's favor for all the extensive weaponry the Soviet Union has given Egypt. The latest supersonic fighters and the most-advanced ground-to-air defensive missiles are part of the weaponry, along with 15,000 Russian technicians and pilots.

Within the State Department the words of Israel's own leaders are taken to support the conviction. In June Prime Minister Golda Meir told the kneeset that "during the past year the United States has expressed in deeds its understanding of the need to maintain the military balance between Israel and the Arab states." Of the Rogers' peace initiative, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said on Aug. 12, "We gained not only the cease-fire, which still continues, but an increase of defensive strength at a rate such as we had not known until then."

AN ARTICLE OF FAITH in the present determination to leave the arms balance unchanged is that Egypt's President Anwar El-Sadat means peace. He wants to improve the lot of his own people. Therefore, military adventures and even bigger military spending are ruled out. If the Sadat rhetoric is now and then bellicose, policymakers write it off as just that — rhetoric for the Arab world.

Back of the Rogers stand at the U.N. is the belief there is still a change for an interim settlement that will see the opening of the Suez Canal. This would be taken by both sides as a first step toward a final compromise agreement. The frank appraisal is that the odds are against it. But, with the fuel for still another war piled up in the Middle East, hope persists.

The present decision on the Phantoms will increasingly get into domestic politics as 1972 draws nearer. Support for Israel has long been a political staple, with the Democrats traditionally pushing for all-out help. A great deal of Democratic campaign money comes from wealthy Jews on the liberal-Democratic side of the fence.

In Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson's presidential campaign, on the verge of public avowal, championship of Israel is a major theme. He relates this to the threat of the Soviet Union and the big Russian military buildup in the Mediterranean. The senator proposes a $500 million credit to Israel to buy arms.

An objective look at Rogers' bargaining position, as he tries once again in face-to-face confrontations to bring off the peace initiative, raises serious doubts. How do you bargain in such a tough game without impressive bargaining counters? The Phantoms could conceivably be such a counter.

WITH SO MUCH AT STAKE, Rogers might say to Israel, "Yes, we will let you have the Phantoms if you accept the terms of an interim settlement. Let the Egyptians cross the canal with flags flying and take a position whether it be "X" or "Y" yards or miles on the Israeli-held side. And there is no point in arguing about the distance the Egyptians would move, since we propose to put a neutral force between the two sides."

Offering nothing tangible, Rogers is asking the Israelis to give up what they have — part of what they won in the six-day war in 1967 — without a quid pro quo. That is not bargaining. It is a wistful belief that virtue must triumph where it has never triumphed before.

Positions are hardening. By unanimous vote of the U.N. Security Council, including the United States and the Soviet Union, Israel was called on to change policies on housing and population that confirm Israeli expansion in the old city of Jerusalem, united by the triumph over Jordan in the 1967 war. Israel promptly let it be known that it would ignore such a demand that included a call for a U.N. investigative mission.

No one would deny Rogers an "E" for effort. If he is given one of the vacancies on the supreme court, as is rumored, his successor will confront a perilous Middle East deadlock.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Spying Widely Accepted; Russ Just Overdid It

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

If not the world's oldest profession, then spying must be close to it.

And even in this age of automation and electronics, the individual still plays a prominent role in the business of one nation spying upon another —so prominent indeed that it takes a story like Britain's ouster of 105 Russians at one fell swoop even to raise an eyebrow.

SO RECOGNIZED is the spy's role in international affairs that no one even gets very indignant about it.

For example, last April Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told newspaper editors meeting in Washington of the "major and vital" role U.S. intelligence would have to play in any agreement reached in the U.S.-Soviet SALT talks on limitation of strategic weapons.

He said the United States could undertake such an accord "only if it has adequate intelligence to assure itself that the Soviets are living up to their part."

So far as is known the Russians made no protest to this slur upon their gentlemanly conduct.

THE BRITISH CASE involved a certain amount of usual British sportsmanship. The Russians' mushrooming spy activities in Britain were said to have been known also to the Labor government of Prime Minister Harold Wilson which preceded the present Conservative government under Edward Heath.

The British had suggested to the Russians in a quiet way several times that they should cut back on their spying. Heath apparently acted only after the Russians seemed to indicate spying was among their international privileges.

It was a large figure, as a matter of fact, comprising approximately 20 per cent of all the Russians in Britain, diplomatic, business, tourist or what have you. On an internatinal scale, it almost took the spy business out of the individual category and placed it in mass production.

SO WELL ESTABLISHED is the spy business that Russian indignation over the British action must be taken simply as part of the act.

In 1970 the Soviets awarded a military medal and the Order of Lenin to George Blake, a double agent who escaped in 1966 from Britain's Wormwood Scrubs prison. The awards cited his "selfless activity."

Electronic spying is so commonplace as to be taken for granted.

For example, electronic devices litter the ocean floors reporting the passage of potential enemy submarines. American and Soviet spy-in-the-sky satellites regularly photograph each others' and Communist China's military and nuclear installations.

Russian trawlers report on the U.S. Apollo space program.

DESPITE THE ALMOST open nature of international spying, it is rare that a real international incident develops.

One such came in the U-2 incident of 1960 when the Russians shot down the spy plane piloted by Francis Gary Powers. It broke up a Big Four summit meeting in Paris and prevented a visit by President Eisenhower to the Soviet Union.

President Nixon's administration is taking no chances that a similar incident might prevent his own scheduled visit to Communist China.

The United States has let it be known that flights by U.S. drone spy planes over China have been halted.

Instrumental In Shaping The Politics In The Far East

EISAKU SATO
'God's on my side'

SATO

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's Prime Minister Eisaku Sato is very much like the country he leads —modern and westernized but preserving some ties with the old way.

Perhaps this is part of his political secret that has kept him in office for a longer consecutive term —six years and 10 months — than any prime minister since Japan adopted cabinet government in 1885.

Or perhaps his success goes back to his own summation of his life: "I am ambitious."

Sato has traveled extensively in Europe and America, plays golf, eats Western food and sips Scotch sparingly. But at home with his wife, Hiroko (she is a cousin and it was an old-style marriage arranged by clan elders to keep the property intact), he prefers Japanese dishes, particularly those he remembers from his childhood.

HE IS A conservative man who dresses accordingly and has made his job his hobby, working six-day weeks with few vacations.

That childhood was spent in rural Yamaguchi Province on Japan's main island of Honshu, where he was born March 27, 1901, one of three sons of a small town brewer of rice wine.

His oldest brother, Ichiro, was a vice admiral in the Japanese Navy when Japan's defeat in World War II ended his career. His middle brother, Nobusuke — who adopted his wife's surname of Kishi — was prime minister for two-and-a-half years before student rioting drove him from office in 1961.

Eisaku Sato, the youngest brother, did not begin his career in politics. After winning a law degree at the Imperial University of Tokyo he entered the ministry of railroads as a junior executive and held a top-level job during World War II.

AFTER THE WAR Sato switched to politics and by 1948 was secretary general in Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida's cabinet. In 1949 he was elected to Parliament from his home province, a seat he has held ever since.

Sato became prime minister in November 1964, and his policies continued to encourage Japan's rapid economic growth. A political conservative, he has worked under the theory that the Japanese may be nudged — but certainly not pushed — into change. He has maintained his party's traditional ties with big business and has been pro-American in foreign policy.

"I have the gods on my side," he once told a visitor in speaking of his career, but the gods weren't on the job in 1969 when Mrs. Sato told a magazine writer her husband, in the early days of their marriage, had beaten her and gone out with geishas.

She later explained that "beaten" was too harsh a term for the fact that her husband had impatiently struck her, and that in the old days the geisha party was normal entertainment for a young man.

MRS. SATO has done much to humanize the image of her patient husband, who tries to cautiously influence, rather than dynamically lead, the Japanese.

"Eisaku is not an interesting person," she said once. "When I look at his sleeping face I cannot help feel pathos for his introverted character."

Sato's political enemies see little pathos in the prime minister.

INDIRA GANDHI
Born to the job

GANDHI

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Indira Priyadarshini Gandhi is a widowed grandmother of 54 with a silver streak through her black hair —and a steel trap mind in the pragmatic art of backroom politics.

India's prime minister prefers to ask rather than order, to allow programs to languish sometimes rather than be aggressive —but when she moves to solidify her grip on political power she can be ruthless and effective.

She comes naturally by her competence in political matters, since she was the only child of Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister and a world statesman until his death in 1964.

SHE WAS named to head the government on Jan. 24, 1966, after the death of Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, and according to many accounts elder Congress Party leaders selected her believing she would be both popular and easy to manipulate. They have learned better.

Mrs. Gandhi's political schooling began early with a famous series of letters her father wrote her from a British jail. At age 13 she organized a children's group with 6,000 members to aid the independence movement.

She completed her education at Oxford University and married a young lawyer, Feroze Gandhi (no relation to Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi). She herself was jailed for nine months during that period of struggle for independence from Britain.

WHEN INDEPENDENCE came in 1947 Mrs. Gandhi, her husband and their two sons moved in with her widowed father so she could serve as Nehru's official hostess and trusted political aide. The move resulted in the breakup of her marriage within a few years, and Gandhi died in 1960.

Mrs. Gandhi openly entered politics in 1958, and a year later she was elected president of the Congress Party.

A clue to coming events came a year after Mrs. Gandhi became prime minister. Asked if she thought the Congress Party was hampered by old and ineffective leadership, she replied: "The workers in the field are fine, but we need fresh people at the middle and the top."

IN 1968 SHE moved against her chief party rival, deputy prime minister and finance minister Moraji Desai, and documents leaked out backing charges that Desai's son had become wealthy through business deals while serving as his father's private secretary.

The ministry that leaked the charges was controlled by Mrs. Gandhi's closest friend —who was dropped in a later purge.

A battle for party leadership raged and when the dust settled in November, 1969, there were two parliamentary groups — Desai and other older leaders had 64 "Old" Congress supporters in parliament while Mrs. Gandhi had 227 "New" or Ruling Congress supporters and controlled party machinery. She consolidated her power this year by unexpectedly calling an election, catching her opponents in disarray and emerging with 350 out of 521 parliamentary seats.

MRS. GANDHI draws a veil over her private life, but she appears wholely devoted to politics. She has been known to leaf through a western fashion magazine while on a trip abroad and, while her government formally opposes alcohol, she occasionally sips a sherry.

THIS WEEK In The World

U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Hungarian Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, who once said, "A dead cardinal may be worth more to the cause of freedom than a live one," emerged, alive, from the U.S. embassy in Budapest.

The Hungarian primate's departure and flight to the Vatican Tuesday ended 15 years of self-imposed refuge from the Hungarian government, which had kept an unmarked car parked daily outside the embassy to take the 79-year-old prelate back to jail if he stepped outside.

For 26 years, Mindszenty had fought the Communists who took over Hungary. Twenty-three of those years he spent in jail or at the embassy accused by the government of treason.

THE GOVERNMENT had told him he could leave the embassy and the country — but never return. That was a condition Mindszenty could not accept until Pope Paul VI ordered him to leave, "to make the hardest sacrifice of your life." Mindszenty did, saying, "I accept what will be perhaps the heaviest cross of my life."

In London, the British Foreign Office identified the Soviet agent who defected and provided information which led to the expulsion of 105 Soviets on charges of engaging in espionage and plotting sabotage. The agent, the British said, was Oleg Lyalin, an obscure member of the Soviet trade delegation, who in August had been charged with drunken driving.

North Vietnamese troops mounted a major offensive which allied commanders said was aimed at trying to embarrass President Nguyen Van Thieu only days before the South Vietnamese election in which Thieu is the only candidate. Allied forces quickly rushed thousands of reinforcements to the area 80 miles northwest of Saigon along the Cambodian border to stall the drive. Massive U.S. air support accompanied the counteroffensive against three North Vietnamese divisions.

THE UNITED STATES' two-China policy received another setback in the United Nations when Canada and Iceland gave strong indications they would vote against the U.S. plan and instead support a move to allow only Communist China a seat in the body.

MAO TSE-TUNG
Man in the shadows

MAO

HONG KONG (UPI) — If, when he travels to Peking, President Nixon meets Mao Tse-tung, he will be meeting a man who probably will know a lot more about him than the President will know about his host.

For all his many years of power and world renown, for all the reverence paid him by more than 700 million Chinese, Mao Tse-tung remains a shadowy figure to the world.

Because of the semi-seclusion in which the Communist Party chairman has now lived for so long, rumors are continually being floated about his health. On several occasions in recent years he has been reported gravely ill, on his death bed. Less than two weeks ago reports circulated the world that he had died. On that occasion, as previously, Peking's spokesmen said he was in good health. The last time he was seen in public was Aug. 7 when he met with Gen. Ne Win, chairman of Burma's revolutionary council.

MAO HAS, over the years, generally appeared at major national functions, such as the Oct. 1 National Day celebrations, waving the smiling in response to the incessatn chanting of "Mao chushi wansui!" (long live Mao) from the rostrum of Peking's Tien An Men (Gate of Heavenly Peace) Square, where he proclaimed the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949. This year's celebration was reported canceled, one of the factors that prompted the rumors Mao might be seriously ill, or even dead.

Except for such appearances, the Chinese public, despite the excessive adulation they give him, rarely sees him.

Mao's history, exploits, accomplishments and political beliefs are well known enough; they are on the record. What sort of a man he is, is more of a puzzle.

Through the years, some sort of image has emerged. He has been described as a chain smoker, to the extent this is said to have given him a cough and worsened what was already not too good a speaking voice. His language, in private, is described as "very down to earth, salty, sometimes downright dirty" to quote one early colleague.

HE IS SAID to like, and to still drink copiously in defiance of doctors' orders, the powerful (over 100 proof) Chinese mao tai wine. Even in his late years — he is 77 — he is said to exercise regularly. He is reported to take long walks daily and still to do alot of swimming (he has swum the Yangtze, China's largest river, several times).

He is described as a voracious reader as well as prolific writer. In dealing with associates he is said to be firm, demanding, and to speak with a "peasant's bluntness." He has always been described as a tremendously hard worker who even today often works through the night until dawn.

Mao was born in December, 1893, the son of a rice farmer, in the village of Shao Shan in the south-central province of Hunan. He apparently knew severe poverty and is said to have been treated harshly as a child by a father who beat him often. Even then, however, it is said he was an avid reader, both of Chinese classics and Western works. He attended school in his native Hunan (where his teachers, too, were said to be very ready with beatings). A rebellious youth by temperament, he was in his teens when he left his native village but not before, according to some accounts, he joined the local revolutionary forces supporting Sun Yat-sen in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty. This was in 1911, when he was 18.

FORA TIME young Mao worked as an assistant librarian in Peking University, also keeping up his own readingand studies. In July, 1921, he became one of the 12 founding members of the Communist Party of China, and from then onward he was dedicated to the revolutionary cause, concentrating from the very start on building a power base among the peasants.

This historic Communist "Long March" that was to lead him and followers eventually to the defeat of the Nationalist government forces led by Chiang Kai-shek began in October, 1934. The roundabout march, taken to break out of encirclement by the Nationalists and harried by their forces all along the way, took nearly a year and covered almost 6,000 miles.

Mao's forces fought the Japanese in World War II and then turned their power against Chiang in a civil war that lasted from late 1946 until Communist victory in 1949. For 10 years till 1959 Mao was head of state as well as party chairman, but he appeared to lose none of his power when he gave up the former position.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK
Last of Big Five

CHIANG

TAIPEI (UPI) — President Chiang Kai-shek has been a leading actor in the turbulent history of China for nearly half a century and he is the last survivor of the Big Five leaders of World War II.

He will be 84 on Oct. 31, leading an aloof life on his Taiwan stronghold, watching his hopes for return to the Chinese mainland disappear amid the realities of world politics.

It is all very different from when Chiang was born to a farming family in Chikow, Fenghwa district, Chekiang Province. His parents named him Chiang Chung-cheng, but he later changed his given name to Kai-shek, which means "rock hard."

A TEACHER described him as a proud and humorless boy, wandering away in deep thought as his classmates played. He was married at age 14 to a bride his mother chose, in the traditional Chinese way, and whom he divorced later in life.

He grew to young manhood under the corrupt Manchu dynasty.

Despite this, in 1906 he was admitted to Paoting Military Academy and because of his brilliant record there was chosen for advanced study in Japan. Upon graduation in 1909 he became a member of the Japanese army.

It was in Japan that he met Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who was to become China's first president. When revolution broke out at home in 1911 he left immediately to join the successful fight.

SUN DIED in 1925 and the Republican government was foreign-dominated. Although Chiang and the Communists were mutually suspicious, they remained united long enough to stage the successful 1926-27 revolt. A Communist who helped organize the countryside for Chiang's Kuomintang Army was Mao Tse-tung. In 1927, when Chiang turned against the Communists, one of those marked for death — and who escaped — was Chou Enlai.

Chiang's break with the Communists won him support among foreigners and wealthy Chinese but his power held only in Central China. Elsewhere local warlords ruled.

Chiang was determined to crush the Communists but never succeeded, although he inflicted heavy losses and in 1933 forced them out of their Kiangsi stronghold for the "long march" to barren Shensi province in northwest China where they began building a new power base.

WHEN JAPAN invaded Manchuria in 1931, Chiang continued to concentrate his efforts on defeating the Communists, saying: "Japan is a disease of the skin, Communism is a disease of the heart."

In 1937 the Japanese, whose intelligence reported Chiang and the Communists might settle their differences long enough to unite against the foreign enemy, began the real invasion of China. It wasn't until Japan's surrender in 1945 that the Kuomintang and the Communists were completely free to battle it out. Chiang lost and was driven from the mainland to Taiwan in 1949, proclaiming his intention to return.

He has lived on Taiwan ever since,

PRESIDENT SUHARTO
An iron will

SUHARTO

JAKARTA (UPI)—President Suharto of Indonesia has been called "the smiling general" because of his quick grin and quiet manner --but behind the smile lie personal shyness and an iron will on public matters.

There is nothing flashy or charismatic about soft-spoken Suharto, nothing to remind Indonesians of the man he succeeded, Sukarno. Suharto was a relatively obscure major general in the army strategic reserves when he first came into the public spotlight on the morning of Oct. 1, 1965.

Communist assassins had killed six top army generals in an attempted coup d'etat. Finding himself senior in command, Suharto acted with speed and skill to abort the coup and so impressed the Indonesian Congress they voted for him to gradually replace Sukarno.

ONE OF THE myths about Suharto is that he escaped assassination because a soothsayer had warned him to be out of Jakarta that night. And it is true that Suharto, like many Javanese Moslems, believes in mysticism and — reports say — does consult a soothsayer. But he has denied the story, explaining:

"On the night of September 30 I actually went to see my ailing youngest son in the military hospital. All other reports are mere thumbsucking. I left the hospital about midnight, returned straight home and went to bed."

He speculates that the Communists spared him "because they probably considered me a minor officer who could be handled later." There was little in his public record to warn the Communists of their mistake.

SUHARTO WAS born June 8, 1921 in the central Javan village of Kemusu Argamulja, the son of a landless peasant. He attended school sporadically — those run by the Dutch, then the Japanese — but was little affected by western culture.

After a brief career as a bank clerk, at 19 he joined the Indonesian army, then sponsored by the Dutch. During World War II he served in the forces recruited by the Japanese, and after the war joined the war for independence from the Dutch.

He rose quickly and steadily in the army hierarchy after independence, but he remained aloof from the corruption that riddled the Sukarno regime. To this day he avoids ostentation.

He has one wife, Hartinah, and three sons and three daughters. Fishing is his great love and he enjoys swimming, hunting and bicycle riding.

FERDINAND E. MARCOS
The hero of Bataan

MARCOS

MANILA (UPI)—"Basically he is a scholar, not a politician, an introvert, not a handshaker."

That is how a biographer described Ferdinand E. Marcos, sixth president of the Philippine Republic —but in contradiction Marcos is the first Philippine president to win reelection since independence in 1946.

He is a firm friend of the United States, and the man who eased the rigid anti-Communist laws of his country. He is married to a former beauty queen and his spectacular background includes being convicted of murder and being his nation's most decorated war hero.

MARCOS WAS born on Sept. 11, 1917, in Sarrat in the province of Ilocos Norte on Luzon Island, the son of an educator-turned politician who taught his four children, "Don't start a fight unless you can win it."

Both parents —particularly Marcos' teacher-mother — stressed the importance of reading and scholarship; at the same time Marcos and his brothers learned boxing, hiking in mountains and jungles, marksmanship, hunting and swimming.

In 1939, at the age of 22, Marcos was accused of the murder of a local politician who had defeated his father in an election. He completed his schooling at the University of the Philippines while out on bail under police guard, and passed his bar examinations. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to 17 years and 4 months imprisonment. Refusing a presidential pardon and although not yet formally sworn in as a lawyer, Marcos argued his own appeal before the Supreme Court and won acquittal.

DURING WORLD WAR II he was wounded five times, won 22 decorations including the U.S. Distinguished Service Cross which Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur pinned on, commenting that without Marcos, Bataan might have fallento the Japanese three months earlier than it did.

Marcos was a fast-rising young lawyer in 1949 when he first ran for the Philippine Congress, telling his followers in his home province that if they elected him, they would also be electing a future president.

He fulfilled the prophecy at noon on Dec. 30, 1965, when he was sworn in as president. He was reelected in 1969, advocating "free and mature" relations with the United States and closer ties with neighboring Asian countries.

American Trade In The Far East Has Skyrocketed During The Past Decade

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Far East, more familiar to most Americans as a battleground than a market place, has become a major American trading partner.

Trade officials expect U.S. exports to Asian nations to reach a record $10 billion this year. But because American imports from the Far East outweigh exports, the trade relationship is proving to be a sweet and sour experience.

Still famed for their highly prized silks and spices, Asian nations also serve as primary producers of raw materials for the manufacturing plants of developed nations. In return they buy American agricultural goods and basic machinery for their own industrialization.

ALTHOUGH MOST Americans remember Asia only as the scene of three major wars in as many decades, American trade with the area has increased sharply in the past six years, jumping 23 per cent in 1970 alone, according to Commerce Department officials.

The officials appear confident Asian markets for American goods will continue to expand, although not at the pace of 1970. That makes the Asian market increasingly important to American businessmen and farmers.

In fact, once American involvement in the Vietnam War is ended, Washington officials hope that American businessmen will replace soldiers as the major U.S. image in Asia.

On the other hand, American consumers have only to recall the number of "made in Japan" or "made in Hong Kong" labels on goods they have bought to realize the impact that Asian imports have had on the U.S. economy.

JAPAN HAS proven to be both the hero and the villain in the American trade position in Asia. Japan is the greatest American market in Asia and its greatest trade rival at the same time.

Largely because Japanese exports to the American market are 28 per cent ahead of last year's rate —with Tokyo doing virtually nothing to halt the pace — "the 1971 deficit with Japan will be well over $2 billion," a Commerce Department official told UPI recently.

This was one of the major factors that caused President Nixon to announce his dramatic economic shift, including a 10 per cent import surcharge which some officials concede was aimed primarily at Japanese exports.

Trade problems have become so sensitive between Washington and Tokyo, in fact, that some officials here fear a trade war could erupt.

In mid-September, Nixon emphasized during an impromptu press conference in his oval office that "friendship and alliance" between Japan and the United States was indispensable because both countries "inevitably are going to be economic competitors."

NIXON ALSO recognized that Japan produces more goods than the whole of Southeast Asia, including mainland China, combined, and stressed the need to "reduce the tensions" between Washington and Tokyo on economic matters.

The two imponderables in the Asian trade scene are what effect the import surcharge will have on Asian exports to the United States and general world trade policy reform, and how big a market mainland China will prove to be for American and Japanese goods in the future.

Officials in Washington say it is too early even to speculate on either point.

Second only to Canada in world importance as an American market, Japan unquestionably is the greatest U.S. trading partner in Asia. Purchasing enormous tons of American coal, lumber, chemicals, soybeans, aircraft and corn, Japan alone accounts for more than half of all American exports to Asia.

IN RETURN, Japan ships to the United States iron and steel products, textiles and clothing, and the pianos, television and radio sets, stereos, cameras, and automobiles that have become so familiar to American consumers.

According to Commerce and State Department officials, Japan imported a staggering $5.56 billion worth of American goods in 1970, and sent $5.95 billion worth of their goods to the United States.

That is five times the amount of imports and 10 times the exports to the United States by Australia, America's second largest trading partner in the Pacific.

Sausalito Chosen As Site For Programs

Students from the Marin City Learning Center who desire to participate in federally-funded remedial math and reading programs will have to attend the special classes in Sausalito schools, the Sausalito School District Board has ruled.

Earlier this month the district learned it would have to provide the federal programs to children who attend the learning center, a private school in Marin City.

In voting to hire 10 aides and a community worker for the federal Title One program Thursday night, the board, by a 3-1 vote, agreed the Title One services would be available and administered only in the district. No aides or services would be provided at the learning center itself, the board decided. Fifteen children at the center are eligible for the federal program.

The dissenting vote was cast by Trustee Jerry L. Whitcomb, who objected to the restriction.

Trustee Robert A. Thompson told the Independent-Journal that representatives of the state Department of Compensatory Education, which oversees administration of the federal funds, had informed the district Thursday that the state prefers that the funds be used "directly by and at public schools in our district. This is the district's preference, too, because we cannot properly oversee administration of the funds if part of the program is held at the learning center."

Thompson Thursday night reiterated an earlier suggestion that some of the federal money could be used to bus youngsters from the learning center to the school district to participate in the program. If money was needed for busing, he asked Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg if the number of aides could be reduced at a later date. The superintendent said that would be possible.

Thompson also warned the Title One Advisory Committee (a group of parents and staff members which will work to set up the federal program) not to present the board with a plan which calls for aides or services at the learning center. "If they do, we are not going to approve it," he said.

The board voted to hire the following aides, one of whom will be chosen community worker, for the Title One program: Gloria Sweeney, Flora White, Jackie Harris, Rachel Hinton, Evelyn Magee, Ruby Myles, Georgia Payton, Catherine Johnson, Marjorie Blakemore, Heather Douglas and Dolores Talley.

Two aides, dismissed last week by the board because of their involvement with the Marin City Learning Center, were re-employed Thursday night by the board.

In reversing its decision to fire aides Hazel Curry and Jackie Harris, the board acted on the advice of County Counsel Richard V. Godino who said the dismissals were, in his opinion, not legal.

The women, who are both members of the board of the learning center were fired by the board for what it termed "conflict of interest."

Knifepoint Assault Of Woman, 25

A 25-year-old woman was kidnapped and raped at knifepoint in Sausalito Thursday night by a man who stopped to ask her for directions, then forced her into his vehicle.

Detective William G. Palmini said the woman told police she was walking on Bulkley Avenue toward the downtown area about 9:20 p.m. when a silver grey auto pulled up beside her. When she approached the driver's side of the vehicle to answer a question about directions, she said the man grabbed her by the neck and placed a six-inch knife against her throat.

She reported he then forced her into the car, threatening to kill her if she did not do as he said.

According to the victim, the man directed her to lie on the floorboard of the car's front seat with a coat over her head. She said he drove to a secluded area, forced her to disrobe and sexually assaulted her.

Afterward, he allowed her to dress, then drove her to the Spencer Avenue off ramp from Highway 101 and let her out, she reported.

The woman sought assistance from the nearby Sausalito Fire Station No. 2 and notified police who took her to Marin General Hospital for treatment.

Palmini said her assailant was described as a Negro in his 20s, with an Afro hair style and a mustache. The detective said she also described the man as 5 feet, 8 inches tall, about 160 pounds, wearing blue levis and a rust-colored, short sleeved sweater.

Burglars Unbolt, Cart Off Huge Saw

A heavy, electric-powered masonry saw was unbolted from its stand outside a contractor's shop and stolen Thursday, San Rafael police reported today.

The $450 saw was taken from the 708 Francisco Boulevard shop operated by James Cleo Muse, 33 Grove Street, after the shop had closed for the day.

Innocent Plea By Killing Suspects

BERKELEY (UPI) —Larry N. Houston, 26, and Daniel J. Houston, 22, have pleaded innocent to charges of killing an armored car guard in a holdup at a Berkeley supermarket.

The two brothers entered their plea Thursday in Berkeley-Albany Municipal Court.

They were charged with the shooting last week in a holdup of the U-Save market.

Car Thief Just Wanted Trade-In

A supposed customer drove off with a used car from an auto dealer's lot Thursday, leaving a stolen car in exchange, San Rafael police reported.

Salesmen at Dexter Toyota reported a man about 23 years old arrived at their used car lot near closing time. He said he wanted to test drive a 1968 Volkswagen sedan, while leaving his 1971 Pontiac at the lot. He never returned. Police found the larger car had been reported stolen from Oakland Sept. 24.

Student Count

MANILA (UPI)—An estimated 11.8 million students were enrolled in Philippine schools for the 1971-72 school year. The distribution was 9 million in public schools, 2 million in private schools, 200,000 in state colleges and universities, and 600,000 in private higher educational institutions.

The Rich Beggars Face Other 'Jobs'

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI)—Karachi's "rich" beggars may have to look for other jobs. The Sind government is reported to be considering a total ban on beggary.

A survey recently revealed there are 15,000 beggars in Karachi, 75 per cent of whom are professionals. The remaining 25 per cent are the genuine "poor and destitute," including a large number of lepers,

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jack Paar has sold another of his filmed African adventures to NBC for broadcasting during the 1971-72 season. It's called "Jack Paar's African Diary," the result of a four-month jaunt through Africa.

Helen Hayes will be seen during the season in a suspense comedy, "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate," on the ABC "Movie of the Week" series. She plays one of four elderly women who create a fictional girl for a computer-dating questionnaire.

Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, former governor of California, plays a judge in one of the lawyer segments of NBC's "The Bold Ones" series during the 1971-72 season. The episode is called "The Strange Secret of Yermo Hill."

ABC will give an early 1972 air date to "The Enchanted World of Danny Kaye," an animated one-hour special in which the star will be host-narrator for a retelling of the classic Hans Christian Andersen story, "The Emperor's New Clothes."

John McGiver, fine character actor being seen this season as a chemistry professor on NBC's "The Jimmy Stewart Show," commutes from Hollywood to his home in New York's northern Catskills as often as his work schedule permits. Home is a reconverted former Baptist church that is now a 12-room dwelling. McGiver needs the space — he has 10 children.

James Stacy, Dean Stockwell and Stefanie Powers will head the cast of 20th Century-Fox's "The Paper Man" for its new "CBS Friday Night Movie."

Peter Graves will take time off from his "Mission: Impossible" series to play a guest role on Sandy Duncan's new show, "Funny Face."

James Lydon, who grew up playing "Henry Aldrich," and Johnny Crawford, the juvenile co-star of "Rifleman," will guest star in an episode of Glenn Ford's "Cade's County."

Spill Is Part Of Skating

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Olympic champion and television ice skating star Peggy Fleming is married to a fledgling doctor — and just as well.

All those hours performing and practicing on ice have resulted in a perpetual cold for the young beauty who went directly from the Olympics to instant stardom in show business.

Husband Dr. Greg Jenkins is undergoing his internship in San Francisco, still unsure of the medical specialty he may select.

IT WOULD BE presumptuous to advise the young physician. But on the face of things he could do worse than specialize in the cold virus research program or become an orthopedic suregeon.

The latter is submitted for consideration in the event Peggy breaks a limb during her arduous routines on ice.

All skaters, even Olympic champs, tumble once in a while and Peggy admits to taking a spill about once every 30 or 40 performances during her tours with the Ice Follies.

PEGGY SAID, "It's very embarrassing when you fall with a large audience looking on. But sometimes it is unavoidable.

"The reasons for most falls are pennies, popcorn and feathers. Children throw coins on the ice and sometimes spill popcorn. The feathers come from costumes of the other skaters.

"I've been hospitalized twice after running over coins. They not only cause you to fall, they ruin your skates. That's why you'll see so many skaters looking down at the ice when they're performing. Any little foreign object can cause you to stop unexpectedly and fall."

THUS FAR Peggy, a blue-eyed brunette, has escaped serious injury.

But having a doctor in the wings at home is reassuring.

Peggy was last seen Sept. 11 on television in a re-run of her video special, "Peggy Fleming At Sun Valley." In January she will travel through Europe filming still another special for Bob Banner, her producer and show business mentor.

Peggy is a refreshing conversationalist because she pops up with surprisingly honest replies to questions.

ASKED WHAT she thought of United States' chances in the Olympic ice skating competition next year in Japan, she replied, "I'm going to do the television commentary for the skating and I think we ought to win three gold medals. There are a lot of fine young skaters coming up."

How do today's skater compare with the late Sonja Henie?

"We don't run on our toes as much," Peggy replied.

WHAT'S THE most difficult thing about skating other than pennies, popcorn and feathers?

"The spotlights," Peggy said. "They blind you and disorient you during a performance."

What else?

"I get dizzy when I do those fast spins," Peggy concluded. "I'm always afraid if I don't focus on one particular face or prop that I'll fall down."

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The Hollywood record label owned by Herb Alpert, A & M, does not glut the market with LP releases, but nearly all of those which they do produce show a lot of thought, planning and just plain good taste.

Here are a few new and not-so-new worthy of attention:

"JOE COCKER!" A & M SP 4224: Spastic British singer Cocker emulates Ray Charles but is plenty original in his gruff, self-involved song treatments. Many of the tunes in this album were heard in his recent film "Mad Dogs and Englishmen": Hitchcock Railway," "Delta Lady," and "Something." His unique approach to these songs marks him as one of the leading male rock singers of today.

"SOMETHING IN THE WIND" — The Winter Consort — A & M SP 4207: I've already proselytized for this unrivaled group which spans the world of music from Bach to Jerry Jeff Walker. The primary quality which this ensemble of sax, English horn, flute, cello, bass, guitar, drums, lute etc. searches out in their music seems to be beauty. Relax and bathe your harried ears in the luscious sounds of tidbits such as the theme from "Romeo and Juliet," Bach's Air on the G Stirng, a wild Ives chamber piece titled "The Indians," a Bulgarian folktune, part of Ravel's "Tomb of Couperin," and "Mr. Bojangles," among others. Four stars for Paul Winter and his group.

"BRIDGE OVER TROUBLED WATER" — Paul Desmond — A & M SP 3032: Speaking of sax players with good taste and talent, Dave Brubeck's former right-hand man has been doing some excellent work with arranger Don Sebesky (known for his award-winning work with Wes Montgomery).

This album devoted entirely to Paul Simon's words and music includes such standards as "Mrs. Robinson" and "Feelin' Groovy" as well as the title song and some others which were more unfamiliar since I'm not a rabid Simon and Garfunkel fan. Everything Sebesky is associated with glows with subtle, often classically-influenced touches and is full of variety and original ideas; this lovely LP is no exception. Too bad Charlie Parker didn't have Sebesky to work with when he did his famous sessions with strings.

"TIDE" — Antonio Carlos Jobim — A & M SP 3031: The composer of "Girl from Ipanema" plays piano and guitar with his small group and strings in another gorgeous pop album from A & M that is sure to appeal to listeners whether they are into jazz, Latin or just mood music. Iespecially liked the title tune, "Carinhoso," and "Rockanalia" —which doesn't have anything to do with rock by the way.

"CEREMONY" — an electronic mass written by Pierre Henry and Gary Wright, performed by Spooky Tooth — A & M SP 4225: Henry is one of the leading French composers of electronic/musique concrete. His collaboration with a rock group is unusual to say the least. The results will not appeal to everybody, but I found them interesting listening, especially on my pseudo-four-channel playback system with speakers in the rear of the room. The six sections vary in effect from a rather straight rock mass with vocalist Mike Harrison in the foreground and Henry's far-out sounds as strictly background, to a full-fledged electronic cataclysm worthy of the best of Jimi Hendrix.

"FAIRPORT CONVENTION" — A & M SP 4185: This is a nifty little folk-oriented group whose material ranges from medieval songs to Bob Dylan and originals by group members. The British origin of Fairport is noted in many of their tunes. Their extreme youth does not prevent a notable achievement on this LP.

"BROKEN BARRICADES" — Procol Harum — A & M SP 4294: This major British rock group has been one of my personal favorites since the days of "Whiter Shade of Pale." The creations of Gary Brooker, who writes the music and sings it, and Keith Reid, whose job is the trenchant words, are among the most worthwhile to be heard in the deluge of rock. Organist Chris Copping is also a key figure in the performing group of four. "Luskus Delph" is pure Dada in the vein of Captain Beefheart and "Playmate of the Mouth".

NOTHING TO ONE

He sat with his dog
at Candlestick gate —
his accordian lamenting
finger-tip sight —

when a tossed coin rang
a dissonant note
in a tin cup vowing
eternal night.

"Get your scorecard here!"
brought a canine sigh
and with chin on paws
and puckered brow

boredom closed his seeing eyes —
both dog and man
were sightless now.

The crack of a bat
and "That one is gone!"
the fun of seeing a
Mays' homerun —

it's one to nothing
but nothing to one
who sits with his dog
at Candlestick gate.

A Fairground Grows At Civic Center

See Page M2

The Building Of An Oasis

New Marin Fairgrounds Represent 60 Days Of Intensified Labor

"It will be a site to behold," said Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, manager of the Marin County Fair, and she was really emphasizing her play on words.

Because Mrs. McCoy was talking about the location of the Marin Fair, which will open at 10 a.m. next Friday for a four-day run on its new 80-acre site north of the Marin Civic Center. And those who have seen the sights at the site know what she is talking about.

In a 60-day period, architect Aaron Green of the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation landscape contractor A&J Shooter of San Rafael, and Mrs. McCoy's staff have been hard at work turning a barren, dusty stretch of ground into a veritable oasis.

NOW, JUST days before the opening of the first Marin County Fair at the Civic Center, the lawns, plants, shrubs and trees are in place and awaiting the crowds of adults and youngsters, from in and out of Marin, who are expected to flock to the "new look" fair.

From 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. each day from Friday through Oct. 11, the fair will be open to offer its conglomerate exhibits of gardens, flowers, fruits and vegetables, carnival and boat rides, art, sculpture and craft booths, displays by commercial and non-profit organizations.

There will also be daily entertainment which will feature ballet, folk and square dancing, comedy shows, country rock music, and the first Marin Film Fair competition, with winners in the independent and student categories plus a prize-winning film on the "Man and Nature" theme.

IN ADDITION, there will be the National Aeronautics and Space Administration exhibit with its authentic Moon Rock as an added attraction for fair visitors.

But none of these attractions would seem very appealing or exciting without the fair's lush, green environment.

And that is what Aaron Green, the Shooter firm and Mrs. McCoy and her aides have been working so hard to attain these past 60 days.

"We really started from scratch," Green admits, "and in some cases we had to use sod instead of seed so as to develop grass in three weeks and cut down on the dust. But we all felt it could be done, and we know the visitors to the fair will like it."

NEIL SHOOTER, of the contracting firm, noted that the landscaping is really in the character of Marin, although there are some unusual trees, like a couple of Austrian black pines.

"But the big trees, 25 to 30 feet tall, are cedar and pine to make Marinites feel right at home," he added.

The landscaping includes three and a half acres of planting around the Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium with entry and interior gardens, as well as a large planting area between the auditorium's parking lot and Civic Center Drive.

Many parts of the fairgrounds are not landscaped, to provide space for the booths and the floriculture, horticulture and art displays.

BUT THE landscaped area has been covered with nearly 3,800 plants, more than 6,100 groundcover cuttings and two and a third acres of lawn.

The plants are divided into 52 varieties, including a total of 200 trees, 14 of which are the large cedars and pines.

The plants and lawns will be watered by 600 sprinkler heads which will be fed through three and a third miles of pipe. The water flow will be controlled by 37 remote control valves triggered automatically from three master controllers through four miles of electric wiring.

All of this was installed in the 60 days.

IN 60 DAYS the new fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center in San Rafael's Santa Venetia area has been transformed from a barren, dusty site, to a lush green area with trees, plants and shrubs. Here workmen were photographed at an earlier stage of their efforts. The 1971 Marin County Fair will open there on Friday and will conclude a four-day run on Oct. 11, featuring exhibits of floriculture, horticulture, art, photography and crafts, plus daily entertainment.

AS WORKMEN began their efforts to prepare the fairgrounds for this year's Marin County Fair only 60 days ago, they started with this circular outdoor stage, where daily entertainment will be offered when the fair opens this Friday and continues through Oct. 11. The wall in the background is part of a newly constructed storage facility.

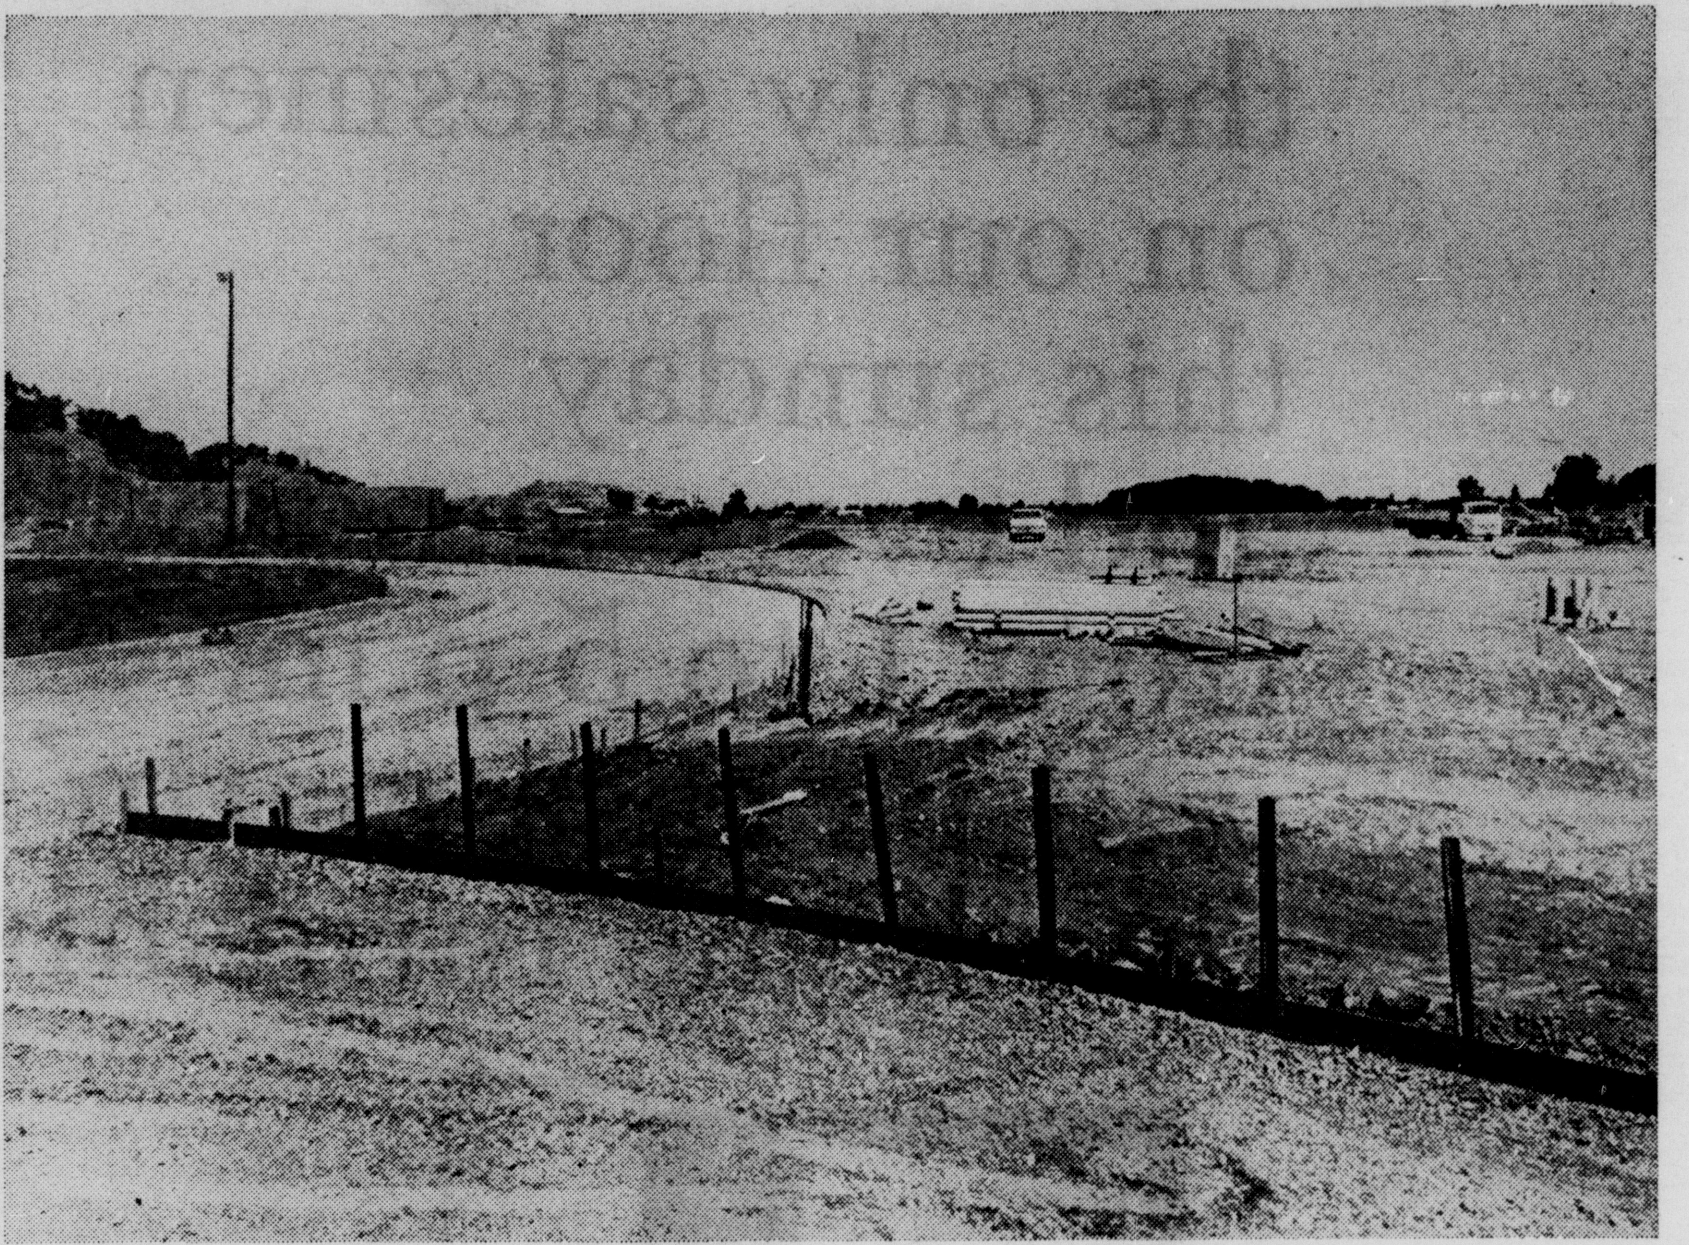
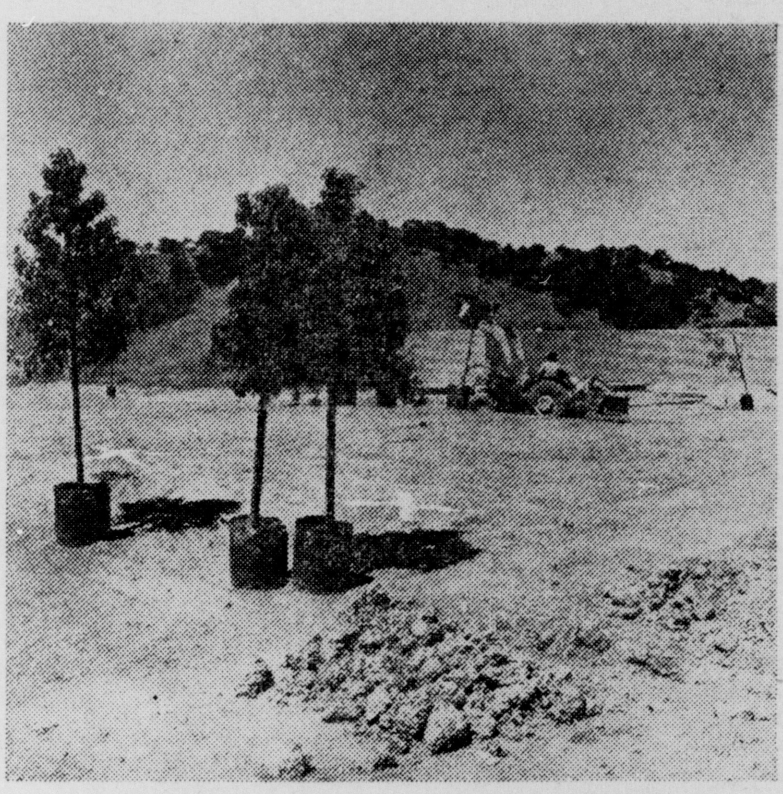
will be in gravel, to permit visitors to get around without ruining the new plantings. But half an acre of the gravel walks will be replaced with lawn, which will be installed after the fair and will be permitted to groz for a full year so that it will be hardly enough to be trod on by the 1972 fairgoers.

"This landscaping is just the first stage of the fairgrounds," Green said. "We hope to add to it year by year. But we know that right now, we have something of which Marin can be proud."

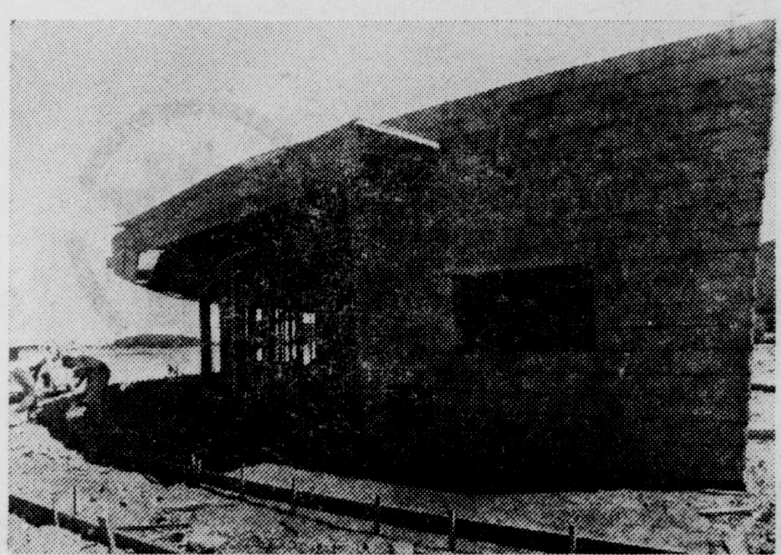
Visitors to the fair can determine for themselves if Marcelle McCoy is right — if, indeed, the site is truly a sight to behold, a "60-day wonder."



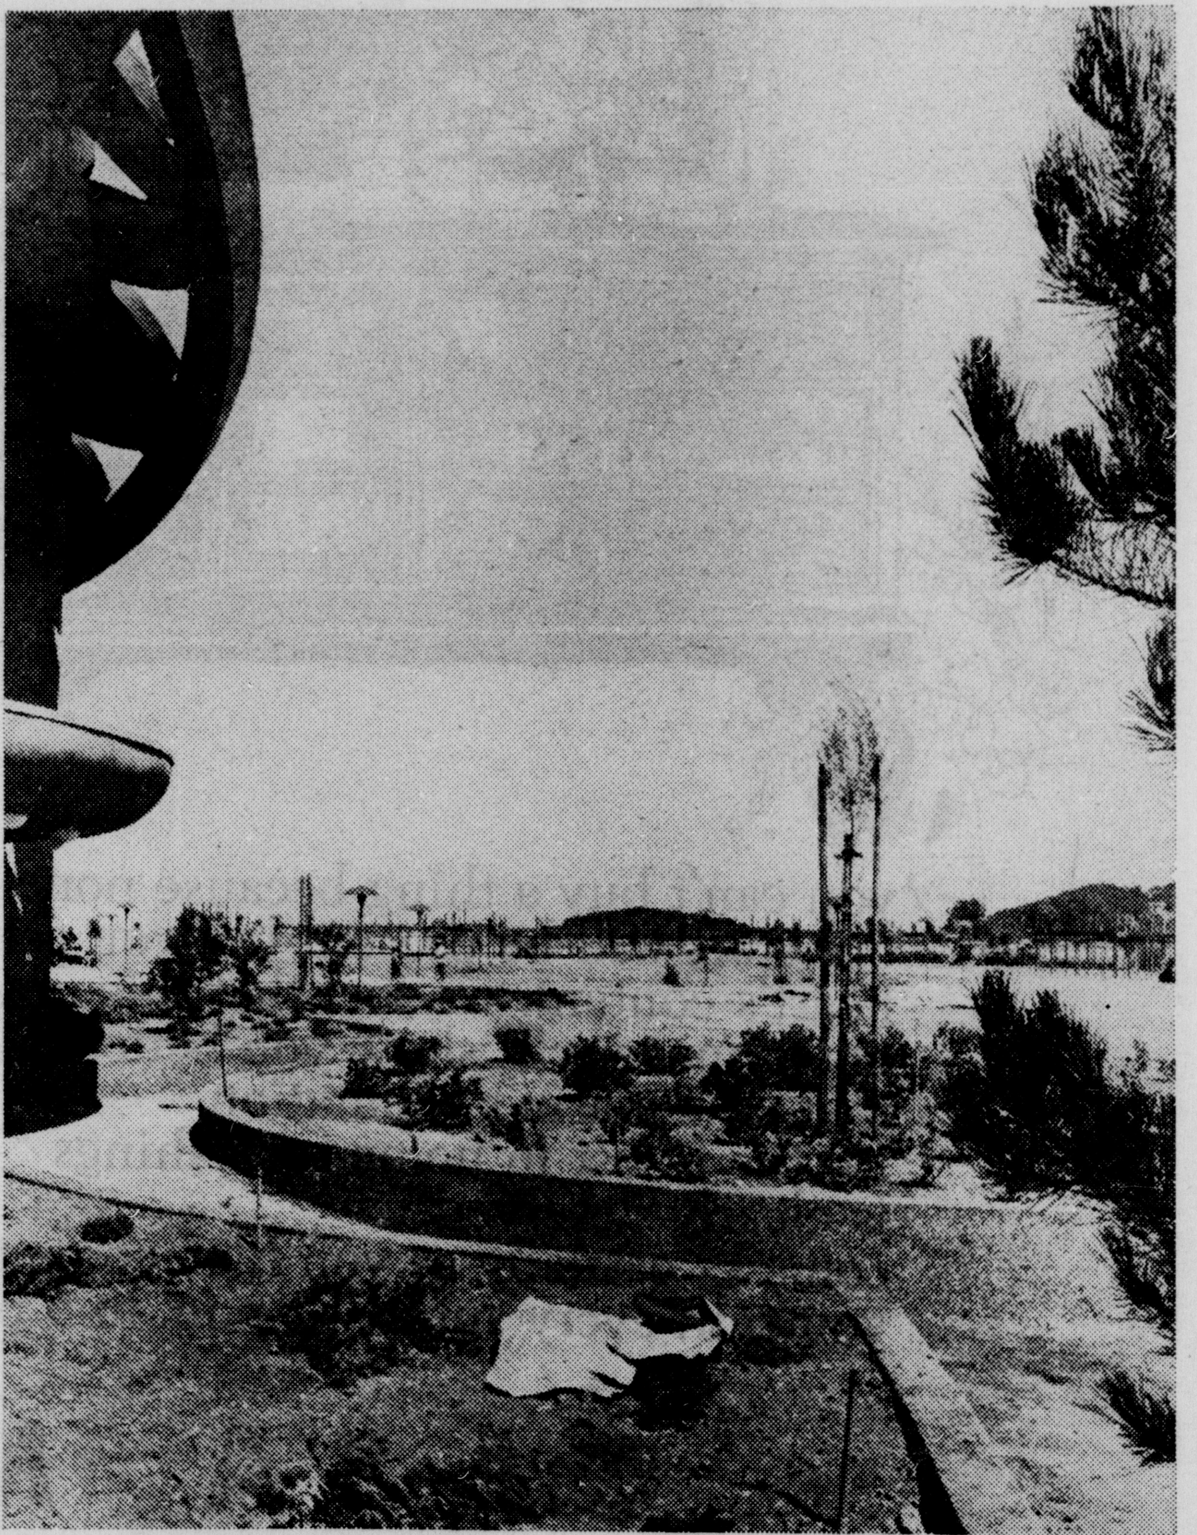
THE FAIRGROUNDS at the Marin Civic Center looked like this in mid-August just before construction and landscaping began for the 1971 Marin County Fair. Now, a bare 60 days later, the job is being completed and will be ready for the fair opening this Friday at 10 a.m.



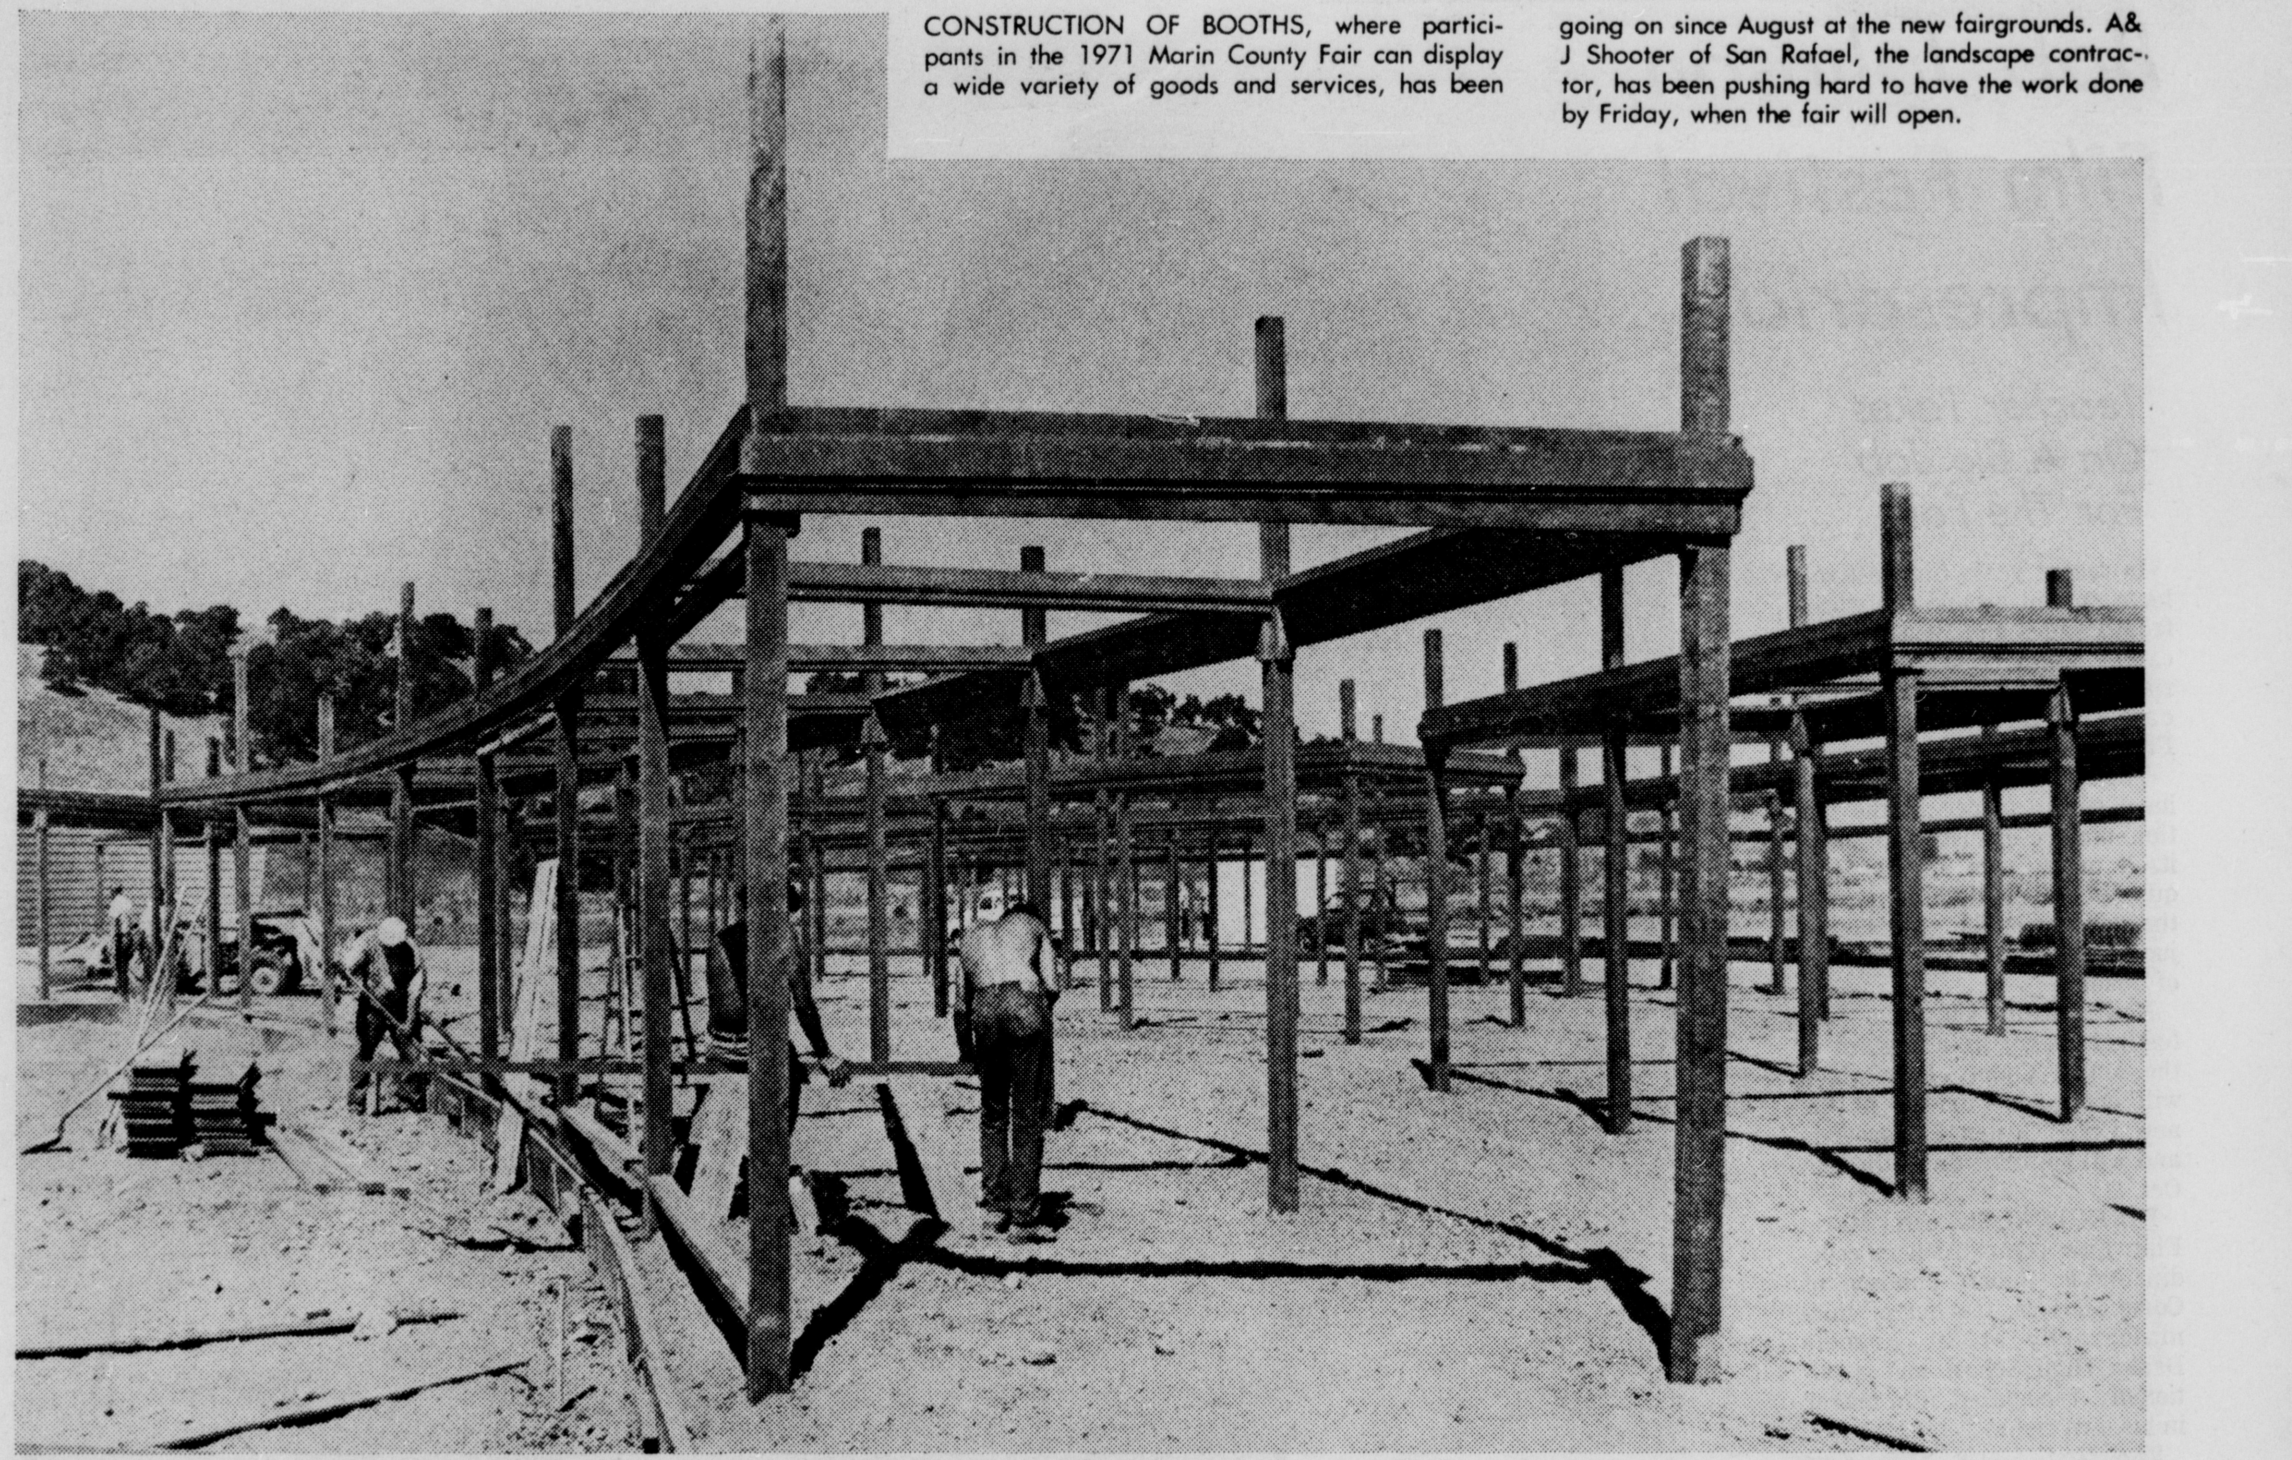
A VARIETY OF trees, some small and some 25 to 30 feet high, have been planted on the Fair site to beautify it for this Friday's opening. "X" marks the spot for each tree as the plan to provide plenty of shade nears completion.



THE STORAGE BUILDING has been under construction as part of the preparation of the site for the Marin County Fair at the fairgrounds adjacent to the Civic Center. This building will be a permanent part of the fair facilities.



THE VETERANS AUDITORIUM entrance site includes gravel walks surrounded by planted areas, all hurriedly set into place to meet the deadline of the fair opening this Friday. The 1971 Marin County Fair will be the first to be held on the 80-acre fairgrounds near the Civic Center.



CONSTRUCTION OF BOOTHS, where participants in the 1971 Marin County Fair can display a wide variety of goods and services, has been going on since August at the new fairgrounds. A& J Shooter of San Rafael, the landscape contractor, has been pushing hard to have the work done by Friday, when the fair will open.

A little bit of nature that can be your own.

PARK TERRACE an enclave of individual townhouses in the heart of Mill Valley, offers your family a new way of living by bringing back some old values . . . privacy, a sense of space, an unhurried environment at home with nature.

Small courtyards interspersed with fountains and trees give Park Terrace a village character. Each house looks out onto patios front and back, thoroughly private. And the entire community is nestled in a terraced park, with its own landscaped brook, forming a shelter of greenery and quiet on three sides. Here nature can be enjoyed on a human scale, with the conveniences not even possible in city living: a maintenance program that includes all outside gardening, lighting, and upkeep of all fences and building exteriors . . . all outside land taxes, an underground cable TV system . . . even pays all water bills and insurance on every structure. Unlike the conventional homeowner, you will never be faced with the cost of roof repairs or exterior repainting.

This unique worry-free community is the result of more than two years of planning by the team of The Haywood Company, Developer, and Agora, Architects and Planners. We have attempted to take into account the full idea of what a dwelling should offer you for twenty, thirty, forty years into the future.

We want Marin County to be the first to see Park Terrace...

65 townhouses for sale, from $33,900, most favorably located in the heart of Mill Valley, ideal for commuting, for schools, for shopping, for recreation, for worry-free living.

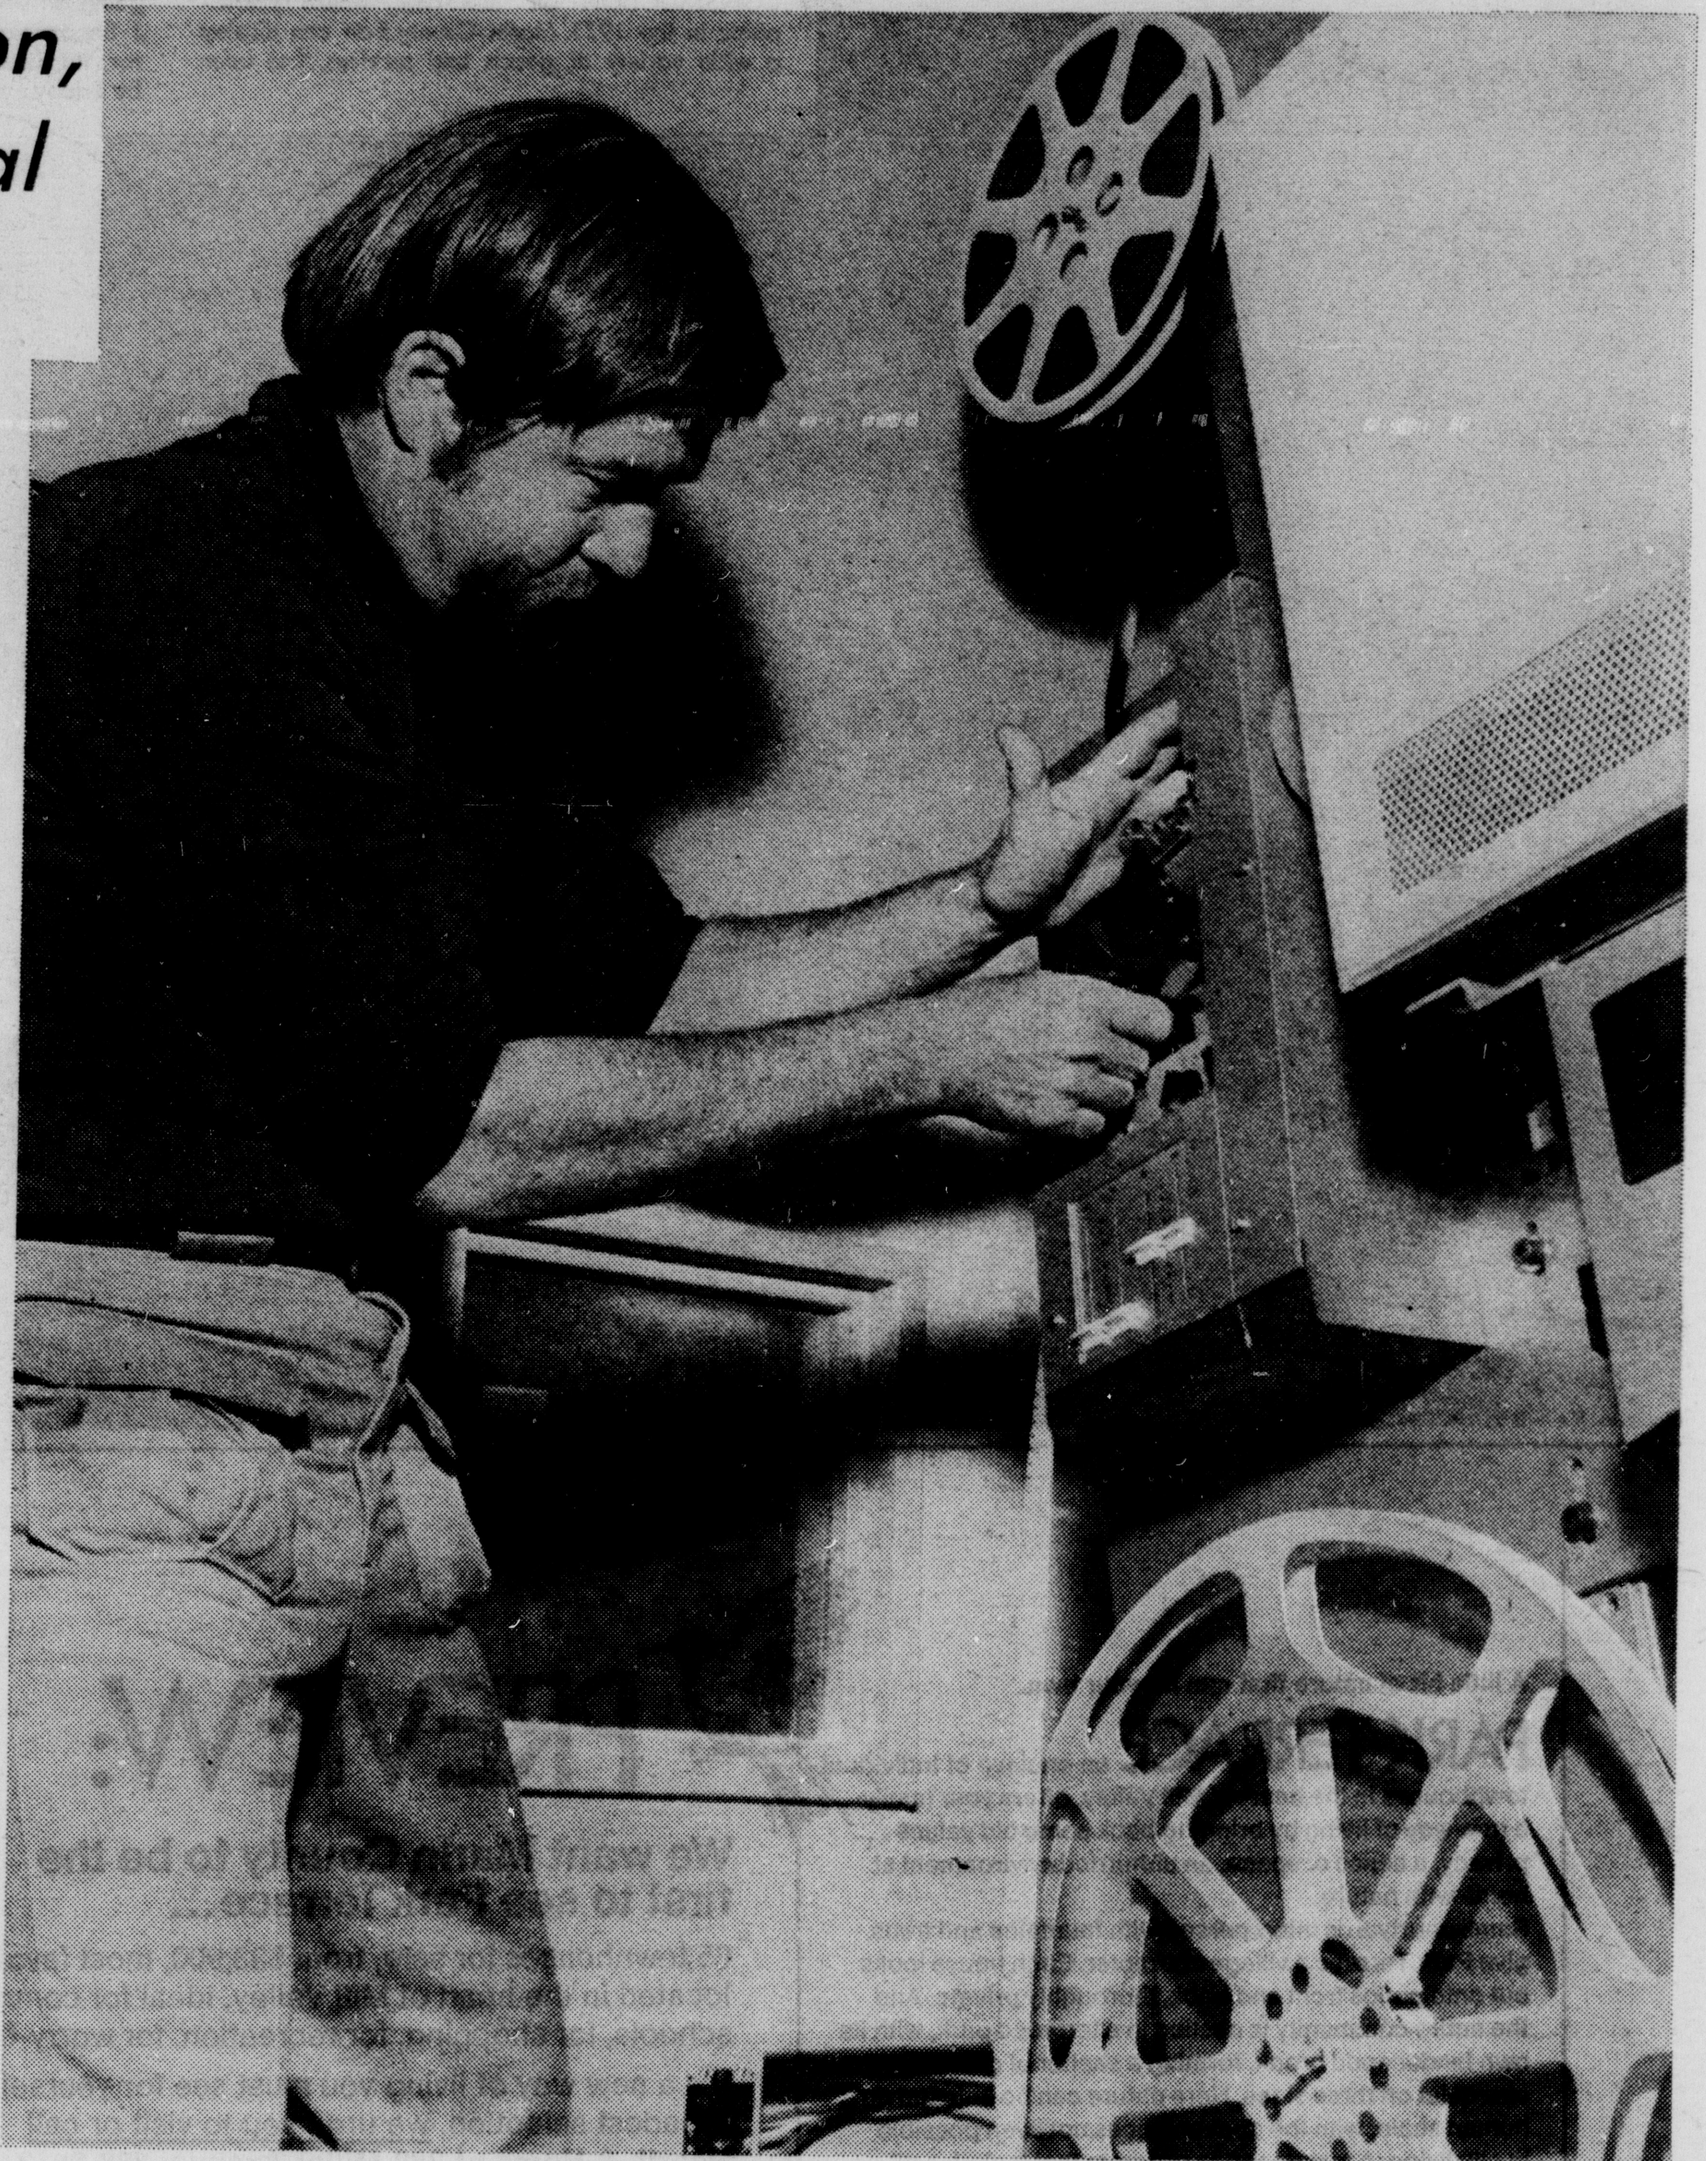
Bob Johnson, Film Festival Impresario

Teacher Takes On A Big Job For The Fair



ROBERT JOHNSON, Sir Francis Drake High School cinematography teacher and coordinator for Marin Film Fair to open next Friday in conjunction with the 1971 Marin County Fair, prepares the projector for a preview run of a film in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building Theater at Civic Center where the fair films will be shown.

In recent years film festivals have spread around the world, from Cannes and Venice on the exotic Mediterranean and Adriatic shores to New York, Chicago, Atlanta and San Francisco in this country.

They were organized and have grown to permit the motion picture industry to judge itself on its own standards of quality rather than to permit the general public to make all judgments through its purchase of tickets.

Now, Marin joins the film festival scene, as a feature of the Marin County Fair which will open next Friday at the new Civic Center Fairgrounds and will continue daily through Oct. 11.

DIRECTING THE first Marin Film Fair competition as coordinator is Robert Johnson of Corte Madera, teacher of cinematography at Sir Francis Drake High School and a nationally recognized film-maker in his own right.

The first Marin Film Fair will be unique because it is designed to assist the independent producer and the student maker of films, and it is specifically aimed at film-makers in Marin and in the eight adjacent Bay Area counties.

And Bob Johnson, who is currently on a sabatical from his teaching and who spent part of the summer in Europe, has been paying for that leisure with hours of hard work.

HE SPENT most of the past month screening the more than 100 entries to the Film Fair, getting them ready for last week's judging. He is now working out the program which will present the winning films, in each category, and the film judged with the best "Man and Nature" theme.

The films will be shown four times a day, at 11 a.m., and at 1, 3 and 5 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Building Theater, and when the fair is finally ended, Johnson will have to maker certain that all entries are returned to their rightful owners.

"It's quite a job," he sighs, "but with the type of response we received in our first competition I look forward to seeing our Marin Film Fair growing into another of the world's major film events."

"WE HAVE received many films on the 'Man and Nature' theme, and I am elated by the response. We want this Film Festival to have its own character and to be different than any other in the Unites States, and the emphasis on ecology will do this," he said.

"The quality of some of the student entries is very high," Johnson added, "and would be worthy of any competition. I have found that students have as many ideas about making films as any other film-maker, but they usually don't have the money or the equipment to develop their ideas.

"But every once in a while a student thinks of a new way to do things, and this is what we're looking for. It's like a treasure hunt, and that's the fun of it.

"EVERY STUDENT would make a film out of himself, that is, by expressing himself in this medium. The inherent character of film-making is that it is so expensive that certain things develop; doing films on nature is inexpensive because you don't have to get a release from a tree, and so our emphasis on ecology and the environment has encouraged a response among the independent producers and among the students."

Bob Johnson came to film-making in a sort of zig-zag way.

He was born in San Francisco, was raised in Sacramento, and attended San Francisco's St. Ignatius High School and the University of San Francisco.

WHILE ON duty in the Air Force he was trained as a camera repairman, and this renewed an interest in photography and filming that had flickered in his youth as he sporadically assisted his father, a still photographer who owned his own small custom color-film laboratory.

After Air Force service Johnson attended San Francisco State and received his teaching credential in English and drama. He joined the staff of the Sir Francis Drake High School English and drama department and directed more than 35 plays at the school before he became involved in film-making with the students.

He and his students produced the award-winning film, "The Idaho Test," a satire of standardized tests which was aired by the National Broadcasting Co. Television network and won an honorable mention at the Foothill International Film Festival a few years ago.

JOHNSON THEN formed Fishtail Sky Films, a distributing company for outstanding films produced by his students and for his own films.

He recently spoke on student film-making at the 1971 Midwest Film Conference in Evanston, Ill., is chairman of the National Council of Teachers of English Film-Making Committee, and is writing a book on "The Art of the Film" which is to be published this fall.

"I've noticed that there seems to be a new trend among student film-makers, at least if our entries are a criterion," Johnson said. "We formerly saw many 'running away' films, with a theme based on 'escapsim.'

"BUT THE films I have screened for our Marin Film Fair have been more hopeful, more positive, with more emphasis on the theme that 'we can do something.' "

"Another aspect of our Film Fair that is important concerns the viewer," Johnson noted. "We are allowing our audience to see certain kinds of films which were not available to the general public five years ago."

"This permits the audience to compare what independent and student film-makers are doing with the Hollywood style, and to expand its esthetic enjoyment," Johnson said. "I know that the substantial prizes we offered attracted many of the entries, but I also know that many independent and student film-makers are intrigued with the idea of a wide audience for their films.

" IN THE Independent Producer category, first prize was worth $500, second received $250, and for third we gave $100," Johnson added. "The student winners received $250, $100 and $50, and the Man and Nature winner was awarded $250."

The interest, the enthusiasm and the quality of the films which were entered indicate the Marin Film Fair competition was a success in its initial year.

The theme of the Film Fair was based on a statement by the late Frank Lloyd Wright:

"The song, the masterpiece, the edifice are a warm outpouring of the heart, of man — human delight in life triumphant: we glimpse the infinite."

With this as their guideline, Johnson and Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, fair manager, have worked diligently to produce a film program that they are confident visitors to the Marin Fair will enjoy.

Marin Has A Long History Of Fiestas, Fairs And Festivals

Its Residents Rarely Pass Up An Occasion For A Celebration

By DOROTHY GARDINER

The ancestor of all Marin fiestas, fairs, livestock shows and festivals was a raucous celebration in the old Spanish tradition started 126 years ago when San Rafael was on the threshold of becoming a Western frontier town.

Alcalde Don Timoteo Murphy decreed in 1845 that the Oct. 24 feast day of St. Raphael, patron of the Old Mission San Rafael Arcangel, be celebrated with a fiesta.

Murphy's adobe hacienda was then the lone dwelling in the old mission community. His 22,000 acre rancho extended across today's multi-million dollar fairgrounds at the Civic Center.

The annual holiday grew into San Rafael's oldest tradition, surviving — with a lapse following World War I — until two decades ago.

REVIVED BY San Rafael's Marinita Parlor of the Hative Daughters of the Golden West in the 1930s, it again became one of the county's biggest annual events.

During its early years the Spanish speaking population of California and Mexico flocked to San Rafael during the last week of October to place wagers on bull, bear and cock fights.

Vaqueros placed mustangs down the dirt main thoroughfare — today's Fourth Street.

ACCORDING TO the late Florence Donnelly, the Independent-Journal's long-time women's editor and historian, Murphy's adobe at Fourth and C streets was the scene of gala feasts attended by his many friends.

Vaqueros dressed in "brilliant colored blouses, dark pants . . . boots with spurs that came high above the ankle" jumped horses across high hurdles, lassoed cattle and galloped down the main street plucking handkerchiefs from the ground.

In 1848 when Marin and California were taken over by the United States, the old Spanish style celebration survived, grew in exuberance and took on trappings of the Old West.

WOODEN buildings, small businesses, saloons, water troughs and hitching posts began to appear in the mission community as Americans and Europeans poured into California following the discovery of gold in 1848.

According to an account of James H. Wilkins published in the San Rafael Independent on Oct. 13 and 14, 1942, San Rafael's population of "about 750 would increase each year . . . to 6,000 or 7,000" with people coming "from Mexico or San Diego for the fiesta which would last a week."

They rushed to fill hotels and boarding houses. Others slept in their serapes, built makeshift shelters or did not bother to sleep at all.

THE TOWN was flooded with Mexican silver dollars as "all the gamblers from California and other states made San Rafael their mecca," he said.

The native Indians were kept busy "looking after the hundreds of the most beautiful saddle horses that one would care to see."

Fourth Street was the Rialto and each side of the street was lined with gambling tables and roulette wheels," Wilkins wrote.

Men gathered in saloons and hotel lobbies playing faro, monte, chuck-a-luck, red and white rondo and twenty-one. In private back rooms others played high stake poker.

"MANY A ranch was lost in the turn of a card," according to Mrs. Eugenie Grady of San Rafael, whose grandfather, James Watson, operated a saloon on Fourth Street (where Johnson's Hardware is now located.)

Saloons never closed their doors and music blared across the town until dawn.

From the beginning the main attraction was the bullfight.

According to Wilkins the last legal bullfight "took place . . . on Oct. 24, 1868, on what is known today as the Dufficy property" (today's Albert Field.) A $5 fee was charged for this event.

"THERE WAS a large bull ring erected in the early '50s. It would seat about 2,500 people," Wilkins said.

"The bulls, the picadors and bull fighters were brought from Mazatlan and while the banderillos and picadors annoyed the bulls, the matadors never killed them."

Beef and sheep driven into town were slaughtered for the annual barbecue held in a large orchard near the site of the old mission at today's Lootens Place and Fifth Avenue. Women cooked tortillas and other Latin American foods.

AFTER SPECTATORS had their fill of food, whiskey and wine, gambled away their savings and became exhausted, they climbed aboard trans-bay boats and ferries for the long trek home.

San Rafael continued to grow. Homes were built by wealthy San Franciscans on the slopes surrounding the town. Eventually the townspeople succeeded in curtailing the boisterous behavior of the early fiestas but San Rafael Days, as they became called, continued to be celebrated with barbecues, smaller fiestas and parties up until World War I.

Then in 1934 — the 150th anniversary of the death of Fra Junipero Serra, founder of California's mission chain — San Rafael's Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters joined the Grand Parlor and parlors in other mission communities in observing the anniversary.

THE LOCAL Parlor held a two-day Serra Fiesta. Such a "good time was had by all," according to Mrs. Grady, the next year San Rafael Fiesta Days were brought back to life.

For 16 years the Marinita Parlor with the help of the Tamalpais Parlor of the Native Sons turned back the hands of time for two days during the weekend closest to St. Raphael's feast day.

Eight days before the start of the 1934 Serra Fiesta on Oct. 27, the San Rafael Daily Independent reported:

"CITIZENS OF San Rafael came down town this morning to find Fourth Street gay with flgas and banners of varied hues, draped across the thoroughfare from the Union Depot to E Street, giving the city a festive air in anticipation of next week's celebration . . ."

Eugenie Watson, now Mrs. Earl Grady, then leader of the local parlor's drill team, was chairman of the event. Her committee included Marie Borba, now Mrs. Harry J. Pedersen, Mrs. Robert Brusatori both of San Rafael and the late Mollye Spaelti.

On the first day the Navy's giant dirigible, Macon, called the "monarch of the air lanes,"

ONE OF THE MORE colorful celebrations of Marin's early days was the Feast Day of St. Raphael observance instigated by Don Timoteo Murphy in 1844. The Spanish-style celebration continued as San Rafael Days until World I, and then was revived in1934 by the Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West as part of a statewide observance of the 150th anniversary of the death of Fr. Junipero Serra. The picture above was taken at that event and shows, in the front row: Mrs. Tillie Della Bruna, NDGW president; Judge Jordan L. Martinelli; Monsignor Thomas F. Millett, St. Raphael's Church pastor; and Eugenie Watson, now Mrs. Earl Grady, who was fiesta chairman and drill team captain.

AFTER ITS REVIVAL in 1934, the San Rafael Fiesta Days became an annual community celebration. The 1935 observance on Oct. 27 included a parade of four divisions depicting Northern California and Marin County history. These peasant-clad girls riding a horsedrawn float represented the Russians. Also represented were the Indians, the Spanish, the Mexicans and the '49ers. Mrs. Earl Grady of the Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters and Charles Soldavini Sr. of the Tamalpais Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West were the co-chairmen.

flew over the city dropping its nose in salute.

THAT NIGHT hundreds attended a bazaar at Hall Raphael where they played games of chance, watched Spanish entertainers, ate Spanish food, danced and bought cakes, cookies, stuffed toys and other items at a row of booths.

Early the next morning thousands lined the streets to watch a spectacular parade described by the Independent as "one of the most colorful street parades ever seen in San Rafael."

Marchers included the high stepping blue and white cossack-uniformed Marinita drill team, other Native Daughter and Native Son teams, drum and bugle corps led by the state champion Sea Point Parlor uniit from Sausalito.

OTHERS INCLUDED members of the Lions Club, San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, Foresters of America, Druids, Young Ladies and Young Men's institutes, Campfire Girls, American Legion, civic officias, San Rafael police and San Rafael firemen.

Old fashioned two-seated surreys, phaetons, farm wagons and Mill Valley's bicycle for-two unit were applauded as they made their way up Fourth Street.

Worshippers overflowed for over half a block in all directions in front of St. Raphael's Church during a 10:30 a.m. outdoor solemn high mass commemorating the founding of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel in 1817 and the memory of Father Serra.

ONE HUNDRED choir boys from St. Raphael's parish and St. Vincent's School for Boys made their first appearance.

Judge Jordan L. Martinelli presented a bronze plaque for the Marinita Parlor to the church in memory of the founders of the mission. (This plaque may be seen today at the entrance to the church grounds.)

Following a luncheon, a ball game was held at Dufficy Field, the site of the old fiesta bullfights almost 100 years before.

DURING THE ensuing years San Rafael Fiesta Days grew in size and popularity due to the "hard work" of the Native Daughters, according to Mrs. Pedersen, former fiesta chairman and a past president of the parlor.

Later the bazaar was moved to Bianco's Garage at Fourth and E streets. Proceeds were used for cash prizes, trophies, and ribbons for the marching units, best costumes and other parade entires.

A GROUP OF Marin's more prominent citizens of the time gathered in James Watson's saloon for a private celebration during the San Rafael Days fiesta of Oct. 24, 1901. The saloon was located on Fourth Street where Johnson's Hardware stands today. Proprietor Watson is in cap and vest at left rear while his son Edward is in the white jacket on the right. Others identifiable in the photo include Sheriff Billy Taylor, left, and Rudy Litchenberg, Sal Pacheco, E. B. Martinelli, Tom McLean, Ed Rake and Bob Graham.

The annual parade that attracted marchers from far and wide "became one of the best in the state," according to Mrs. Pedersen.

REMAINING proceeds were donated to a homeless children's fund, the Native Daughters home for the elderly in San Francisco, a scoreboard at Albert Park, a drinking fountain for the old yacht harbor, the Native Daughters landmarks committee, and in later years to Guide Dogs for the Blind.

Other highlights still remembered were the Saturday morning children's and pet parades; a fireworks display in 1939 at Dufficy Field; Saturday night street dances in front of the old courthouse attended by early California costumed guests; a hobby show at the old E Street School and the marching soldiers, sailors and airmen who became part of the parade during the years of World WarII.

The advent of St. Raphael's Church's annual fiesta in the late 1940s gave the city a second annual celebration in the spring.

(The two annual fiestas continued until after 1952 when the Old San Rafael Fiesta Days sponsored by the Native Daughters and Native Sons disappeared.)

IN 1948 UNDER the leadership of the late Rev. George A. O'Meara, the church sponsored a three-day Fiesta Hacienda Community Celebration during the third weekend in May to raise funds for a new parish house.

Featured in the church grounds were a carnival, amateur contests, games of chance, and coronation of a queen. It climaxes with a gigantic parade through the downtown streets Sunday afternoon.

The next year the fiesta was even larger, drawing crowds from across California and other states as it commemorated the dedication of the newly constructed replica of old Mission San Rafael Arcangel that had been built with funds donated by the Hearst Foundation.

DURING THE next five years tens of thousands annually attended the Mission Fiesta, as it became called. Proceeds were used to build an addition to St. Raphael's School and for a church building fund.

The last fiesta held in San Rafael four years ago celebrated the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel.

The four-day celebration that opened Oct. 18 included: a reunion of St. Raphael's School alumni; religious observances; a jubilee luncheon sponsored by San Rafael service clubs; a concelebrated mass offered by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken and the pastors from the 21 California missions; free boat rides along the San Rafael Canal, and a regatta staged between the Richmond Bridge and the San Rafael Canal.

WORKING ON this fiesta were the priests and members of St. Raphael's parish; a citizens committee headed by Raymond H. Shone that included William P. Murray Jr.; Rex Silvernale; Judge Carlos Freitas, Irving D. Chapman and J. Warren Crane; the Dominican Sisters of San Rafael; Marist Fathers; St. Raphael's Mother's Guild; Serra Club of Marin and the parish council.

The celebration closed with a Sunday parade down Fourth Street and an old fashioned Spanish-style barbecue prepared by the Nicasio Parlor of the Native Sons at the St. Peter Chanel Seminary.

Country and county fairs became popular during the early decades of the 19th Century. These fairs, where livestock and farm products were exhibited, differed from the old medieval fairs held for bartering and selling wares and animals.

MANY EARLY American fairs featured political speakers, horse racing, automobile racing, airplane flights and balloon ascensions.

During the last century small country fairs were held throughout Marin and Southern Sonoma's vast ranching regions. Many such as the Tomales Ladies Fair, announced in the October, 1896, edition of the Marin Journal, have been long forgotten.

But one early fair — the first to be held near Petaluma — survived and grew into the annual Sonoma-Marin Fair held for five days during the last week of June.

THIS FAIR traces its beginnings back to a "butter and eggs" day held for the first time in 1867 at Straubville at today's intersection of Middle Two Rock Road and Bodega Avenue.

According to Arthur F. (Art) Canavin, fair manager for the last 11 years, ranchers from across the Redwood Empire exhibited livestock and farm products during the next 67 years at different locations in and around Petaluma. At times the fairgrounds were on Fair Street, a site now occupied by the Petaluma High School.

During the 19th Century state legislation was passed to help support the annual fair, and ranchers and farmers from Marin, Sonoma, Lake, Solano and Napa counties participated in the event that became one of the biggest attractions, Canavin said.

IN 1933 IT was taken over by the newly formed Fourth District Agriculture Association, becoming one of the original district fairs in the state.

It is operated by a board of directors appointed by the governor, Canavin explained, and is supported by pari-mutual horse racing funds.

Two of the founding directors, Albert J. Bianchi of Point Reyes Station and William Gnoss of Novato, are still on the board. Albert P. Behrens Sr. of Petaluma, a director since 1938, has served as president since 1948.

In 1934 the fair moved permanently to its 65-acre fairgrounds at Kenilworth Park. In the early years exhibitors from Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Marin and Sonoma participated.

IN THE 1960s when it "got too large" the participating counties were limited to Marin and Sonoma, Canavin said.

During the last 11 years it has continued to grow to become one of Petaluma's biggest businesses and employers, according to Canavin.

In 1960 a total of 20,000 attended. This year a record breaking crowd of almost 59,000 visited the five-day fair.

Five employees — Canavin, a secretary and maintenance men — are on the payroll year round with another 200 hired for either six or eight weeks around fair time, Canavin explained.

ELEVEN YEARS ago the fairgrounds were used by 8,000 persons during the 361 days they were not used for the fair, the manager noted. Last year 100,000 rented the facilities for weddings, auctions, roller derby, mini golf, horse shows, Friday night jalopy racing and Saturday motorcycle scrambles.

Thirty-five years ago the fair was reorganized as a junior livestock show for 4-H members and Future Farmers of America.

It has become one of the largest junior shows in California and one of the largest west of the Mississippi, Canavin said. This year, the biggest show in its history, $26,000 was paid in premiums.

MORE THAN 4,600 youngsters between 9 and 19 competed for cash prizes with entries including dairy cattle, sheep, swine, beef, horses and home economics.

A rodeo, junior horse show, entertainment and a beauty pageant where since 1963 both the Maid of Marin and the Maid of Sonoma have been selected are main attractions.

The only events open to adult exhibitors are photography, arts and gardening, Canavin explained.

IN THE FACE of creeping urbanization, "it's overwhelming how the fair keeps growing every year," Canavin said.

Marin's oldest surviving county fair — the Grape Festival — was started in 1899 as a one-day benefit to raise funds for the San Francisco Presbyterian Orphanage and Farm, later renamed Sunny Hills.

The orphanage opened in 1895 in a small rented house on E Street between Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue. Its first charges were three young children left motherless the same year.

MRS. PHILO D. Browne, head of the committee that opened the home, was also the founder of the Grape Festival. Additional funds were soon needed as the original home became over crowded and it was moved to larger quarters at Fourth and E streets.

In 1898 a parcel of 20 acres was purchased in San Anselmo for $1,500 and construction started on the buildings that were the home of Sunny Hills from the turn of the century until six years ago when the site was taken over by the Red Hills Shopping Center and a new Sunny Hills built in the hills behind the center.

On June 1, 1901, a garden party was held at Fairhills, the San Rafael estate of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Foster. Booths set up on the lawn sold tea, candy, ice cream and lemonade. Proceeds of $370 were raised at the event, described in the Marin Journal as "one of the largest attended and most successful society events of the kind ever given in the city."

TWO YEARS later, the festival, named for baskets of grapes featured every year, was held for the first time on the first Saturday of October. The 1971 Grape Festival, being held today at the Marin Civic Center, is the 68th to be staged during the October weekend.

In 1903 the event moved to the grounds of the Kent Estate in Kentfield, its home for the next 43 years.

During the following decades the festival grew in size becoming "an old-fashioned country fair" sponsored by volunteers from across the county, according to Mrs. Helen Zweig of Kent Woodlands, former president of Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary, former Sunny Hills director and a longtime festival chairman.

MEMBERS OF the Sunny Hills guilds spread across the county worked all year holding teas, luncheons and dances to raise money to buy materials to make into handmade articles to be sold at the festival, Mrs. Zweig said.

Bathroom accessories, aprons, pot holders, dried flower arrangements, miniature gardens, foods, chutneys, homemade cakes and breads became popular items at the country-style booths, she said.

In 1947 the festival moved for two years to the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross before relocating at the Sunny Hills grounds in San Anselmo.

THE ONE Saturday it rained during its 16 years at this location became one of its most successful days, Mrs. Zweig recalled.

The community rallied behind the corps of women who worked through an early morning "torrential rain pumping water with broom sticks" to save the day, she said. Fortunately the skies cleared by 10 a.m.

Six years ago the Grape Festival moved for two years to Marin Town and Country Club. In 1968 it moved again, for another two year period, to the parking lot at the Northgate Shopping Center. The Civic Center grounds have been its home for the last two years.

ALL PROCEEDS from the festival, Marin's oldest country fair are still donated to Sunny Hills, now a residence and treatment center for emotionally disturbed youngsters.

The Marin Art and Garden Show, for 20 of its 26 years Marin's county fair, has been held annually in the shade of towering trees of an old Ross estate.

The unique show, that introduced the first Art in Action booth ever seen anywhere, traces its beginnings to a one-day fiesta staged in September, 1945, to help raise the $45,000 needed to open the Marin Art and Garden Center on the old Kittle Estate.

UNDER THE leadership of the late Caroline S. Livermore of Ross, ardent conservationist and founder of the Marin Conservation League, eight Marin groups — the Ross Valley Players, Marin Society of Artists, Garden Society of Marin, Marin Conservation League, Marin Naturalists, Marin Music Chest, Marin Dance Group and Marin Garden Club — bought the seven-acre estate and transformed it into a permanent community cultural center.

It was dedicated as a "living memorial, both for those who lost their lives during World War II and other loved individuals."

The first fiesta that cleared about $1,500 was centered around the Octagon House, according to Aaron E. (Ed) Rucker of Kentfield. In a country fair setting arranged in the old gardens, volunteers sold art and plants.

IT WAS SUCH a success, the groups decided to hold a three-day show the following September.

Howard Gilkey, designer of the Oakland Spring Garden Show, a "master showman," was hired to design the first official Marin Art and Garden Show Sept. 18 to 21, 1946.

According to Rucker, who worked as business manager, it was confined to the area around the old trees near the Octagon House. Volunteers built a moongate fireplace that was decorated by the late Jose Moya del Pino.

FOR THE FIRST time, the Marin Society of Artists innovation, an art-in-action booth, was introduced, Rucker explained. Artists, sculptors, potters and weavers demonstrated their skills throughout the run of the show.

The feature was such a success that three years later Rucker's wife, sculptress Nellie Rucker, member of the Marin Society of Artists and a director of the center, was invited along with 26 other society artists, to inaugurate art-in-action at the California State Fair in Sacramento.

In the early years there were "no funds for prizes," and all the work was done by volunteers who had to "pull up 30 and 40-foot vines of poison oak," Rucker explained.

A SPANISH theme was featured in 1947 and again the volunteers rolled up their sleeves and using pick axes and shovels, dug a canal from the area of the old Barn down to the old trees near the Octagon House. During the show the canal held floating flower boats.

That year the show grew and for the first time commercial booths advertised wares, Rucker said.

The early shows were "beautiful and aesthetic," Rucker noted, recalling Gilkey's comment, "You've made something artistic out of a country fair . . . you've made it genteel.

In 1948 the late Herman E. Hein became manager and director. Sponsors donating $6,000 established the first premium fund and cash prizes were offered for the first time.

TWO YEARS later the show became the Marin Art and Garden Fair, the official county fair, sponsored by the Marin County Board of Supervisors and supported by state pari-mutuel horseracing funds.

The next year it was held on the Fourth of July weekend for the first time. It continued to grow and expand over the years drawing crowds in the tens of thousands.

"It became more of a county fair with dust, dirt and honky tonk," Rucker said.

THOUSANDS OF trophies and premium blue ribbons were awarded; hundreds of gardens designed and thousands of art and photographic exhibits displayed.

Dinner dances, light opera, musicales, puppet shows, magic performances, children's games and carnival rides, snack booths, chicken dinners prepared by the Ross Valley Players became some of the highlights during the ensuing years.

In 1958 Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, who started working on the show in the early years as an assistant to Ed Rucker, became manager, a position she has held ever since. (Mrs. McCoy is in charge of the first Marin County Fair to be held at the Civic Center next week.)

LAST FOURTH of July, 11 of the 13 Marin Art and Garden Center groups put on a two-day show with a Parisian theme at the center that drew between 8,500 and 9,000 persons earning proceeds of about $10,000, according to Richard F. Tyler, center president.

Proceeds from the new school will be used to replace the $17,500 rental the center received during the last years it was the site of the county fair, Tyler said.

The new show is a return to the non-commercial early shows, Tyler said. This year there were no outsiders or concessions and the work was done by volunteers.

THIS YEAR'S show, "Weekend in Paris," "was a great success," Tyler noted. The show will be extended to three days next July.

For 22 years one of the most popular annual events in West Marin has been the West Marin Junior Livestock Show sponsored by the West Marin Lions Club every June at Point Reyes Station.

Young members of the 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America compete for prizes with exhibits of projects, beef, sheep, dairy cattle and poultry.

LIVESTOCK judging, the crowning of a queen, a Saturday night ball, exhibits, a horsemanship demonstration and a colorful Sunday parade and barbecue have become traditions that every year draw thousands of spectators to the western regions of Marin.

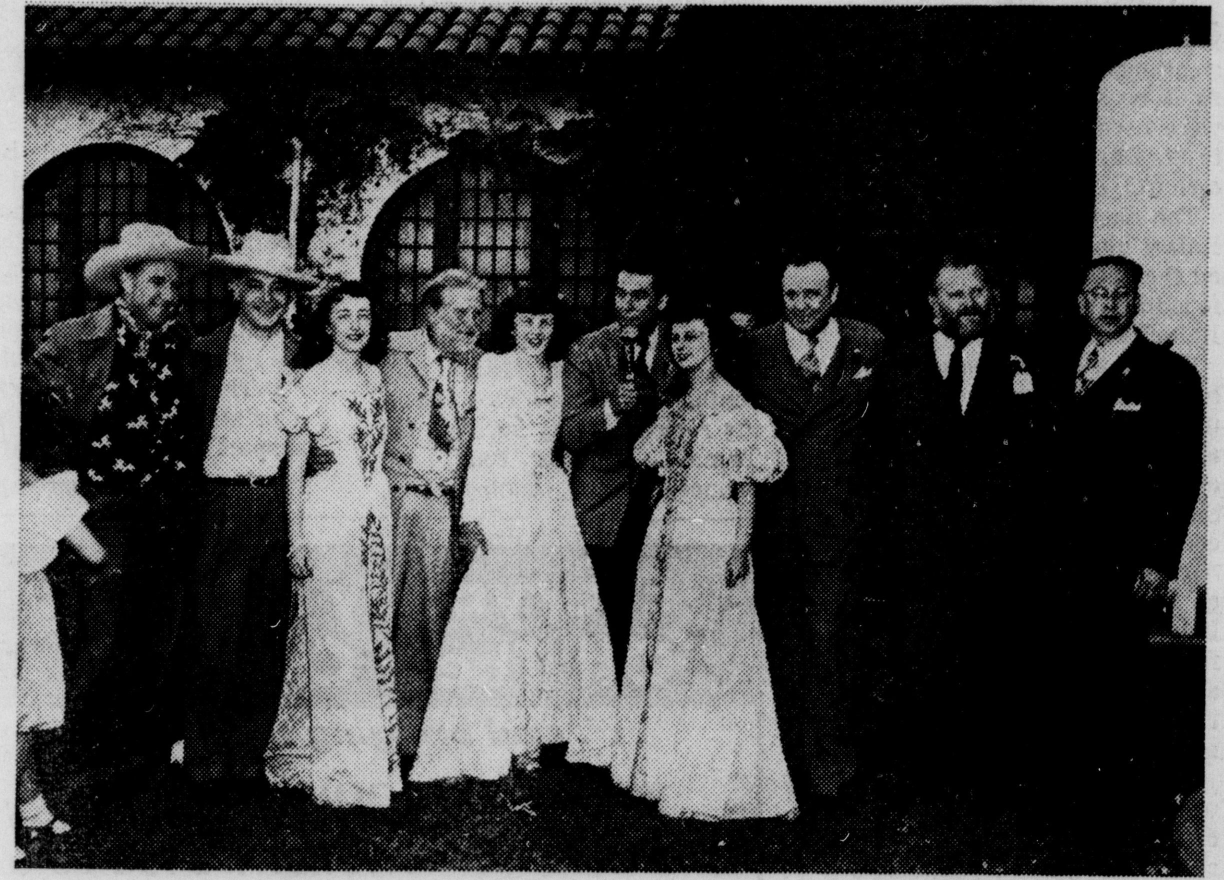
The show has retained its grass roots, country fair atmosphere, with horsemen dressing in Indian, Spanish and cowboy costumes.

This year 15 marching bands, floats, antique cars, 145 majorettes and drill teams participated in the show.

WHILE THE first official West Marin Junior Livestock Show was held in 1949, according to newspaper records, Mrs. Grady says she can recall marching in a parade for a West Marin celebration in Point Reyes Station in 1934.

From Marin's beginning fiestas, fairs, festivals and livestock shows have been an important part of the county's heritage. They are a very special part of its history and the ones that have vanished are still missed by those who remember the great community spirit and the fun that was had by all.

Now a new era in fairs begins with the Marin County Fair due to open Friday for a four-day run at the new 80-acre site at the Marin Civic Center. A new era, true. But also a continuation of a longtime Marin tradition.



MOVIE ACTOR WALLACE FORD, with beard, fourth from the left, was a celebrity guest at the St. Raphael's Mission Fiesta of 1948. THE DRUM AND BUGLE corps of the Mill Valley Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West steps out at Fourth and Tamalpais streets in downtown San Rafael to join the line of march of the 1936 San Rafael Fiesta Days parade. Moving with them, at right in boots and western hat, is Eugenie Grady, who was again the parade chairman.

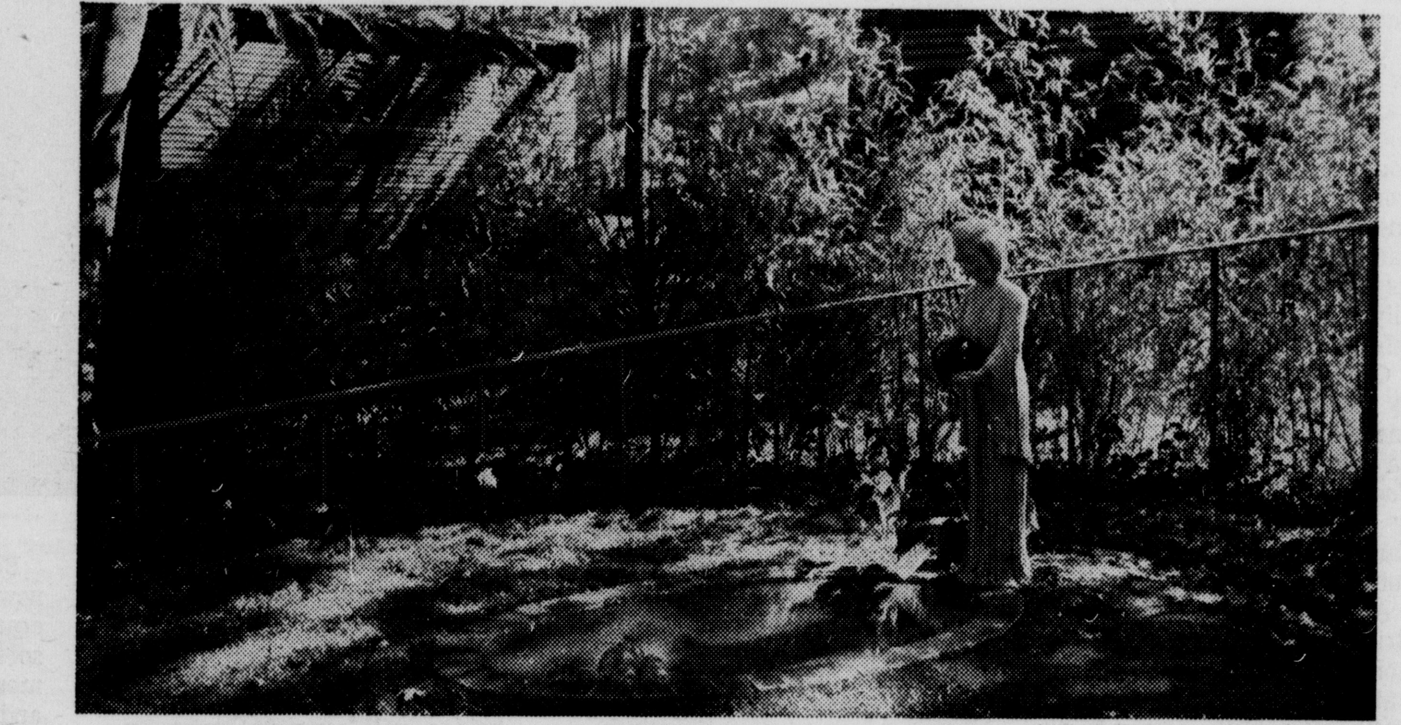
THE SUCCESS OF a one-day festival in 1945 to raise the funds needed to open the Marin Art and Garden Center on the Kittle Estate grounds at Ross caused sponsoring groups to organize the first official Marin Art and Garden Fair as a three-day event in 1946 with Howard Gilkey as designer. Mrs. A. E. Rucker, right, shared the garden sculpture booth with another artist.



GARDEN SETTINGS by professional landscape designers and nurseries and by community organizations were annually the top attraction for the Marin Art and Garden Fair. A sculpture piece by Nellie Rucker was featured in this 1949 plot, and was purchased by a San Francisco woman who used it as the focal point in her Chinese garden.

THE THEME OF the 1958 Marin Art and Garden Fair at Ross was "Pride of Heritage" and it was the year that Marcelle McCoy took over as manager. She now holds that same position with the Marin County Fair, to open next Friday on the new fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center.

That Famous Bridge Has A New Home

The Travel Pages

By DAMIEN KAVINE

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. — A new nursery rhyme may not have been written yet, but London Bridge is "up" — in Arizona!

The bridge in London that was always "falling down" has found an attractive new home in Lake Havasu City, a growing resort community along the lower Colorado River on the Arizona-California border.

Perhaps afraid the famous bridge would be lonely in its new setting, the city has built a few old friends alongside, like a British Village with pubs where you can get your fish and chips and pint of ale just as in London.

THEY'VE EVEN gone so far as to put in cobblestoned walkways to go with the wooden dock. The only thing missing is horse-driven coaches and we wouldn't be surprised if some enterprising soul didn't start a carriage tour of the bridge and its environs which will eventually include a complex of hotels, stores and cafes.

Of course, you're more likely to get into a game of darts at one of these pubs with an Arizona Indian or cowboy than a Cockney cab driver or Piccadilly merchant, but then that's part of this once-in-a-lifetime cultural changeover.

Actually, there once was a British settlement called New London a few miles north of Lake Havasu City. Only ruins are left now of the colony begun by four Cornishmen who mined silver in the nearby Mohave Mountains.

FOR THOSE who have been to London, it may seem a little strange at first to cross London Bridge and see wide-rimmed Stetsons instead of formal-looking Homburgs, and riding sticks rather than canes. But it doesn't take long before the bridge blends in even more scenically with the Chemehuevi Mountains and Colorado River than it did with the Big Ben Clock Tower and the Thames River.

It's interesting to compare the ages of the bridge and its new host.

Lake Havasu City is a mere seven years old while there has been a London Bridge, though not the same one, for about 2,000 years. The first primitive wooden spans were destroyed by Viking raids, with the current 1,000-foot long bridge dating back to 1825.

THE ONLY Vikings the bridge will see now are tourists. Instead of demon-headed warcraft, a procession of pleasure boats sail under the majestic arches of the venerable bridge.

Far from just a tourist attraction, the bridge will be a passageway for cars, trucks and recreational vehicles to and from the mainland and a man-made island created by dredging a mile-long waterway for emplacement of the bridge.

Founded in 1964 by a pair of American industrialists, Robert P. McCulloch Sr. and C.V. Wood jr., Lake Havasu City has light industry and a population of around 9,000.

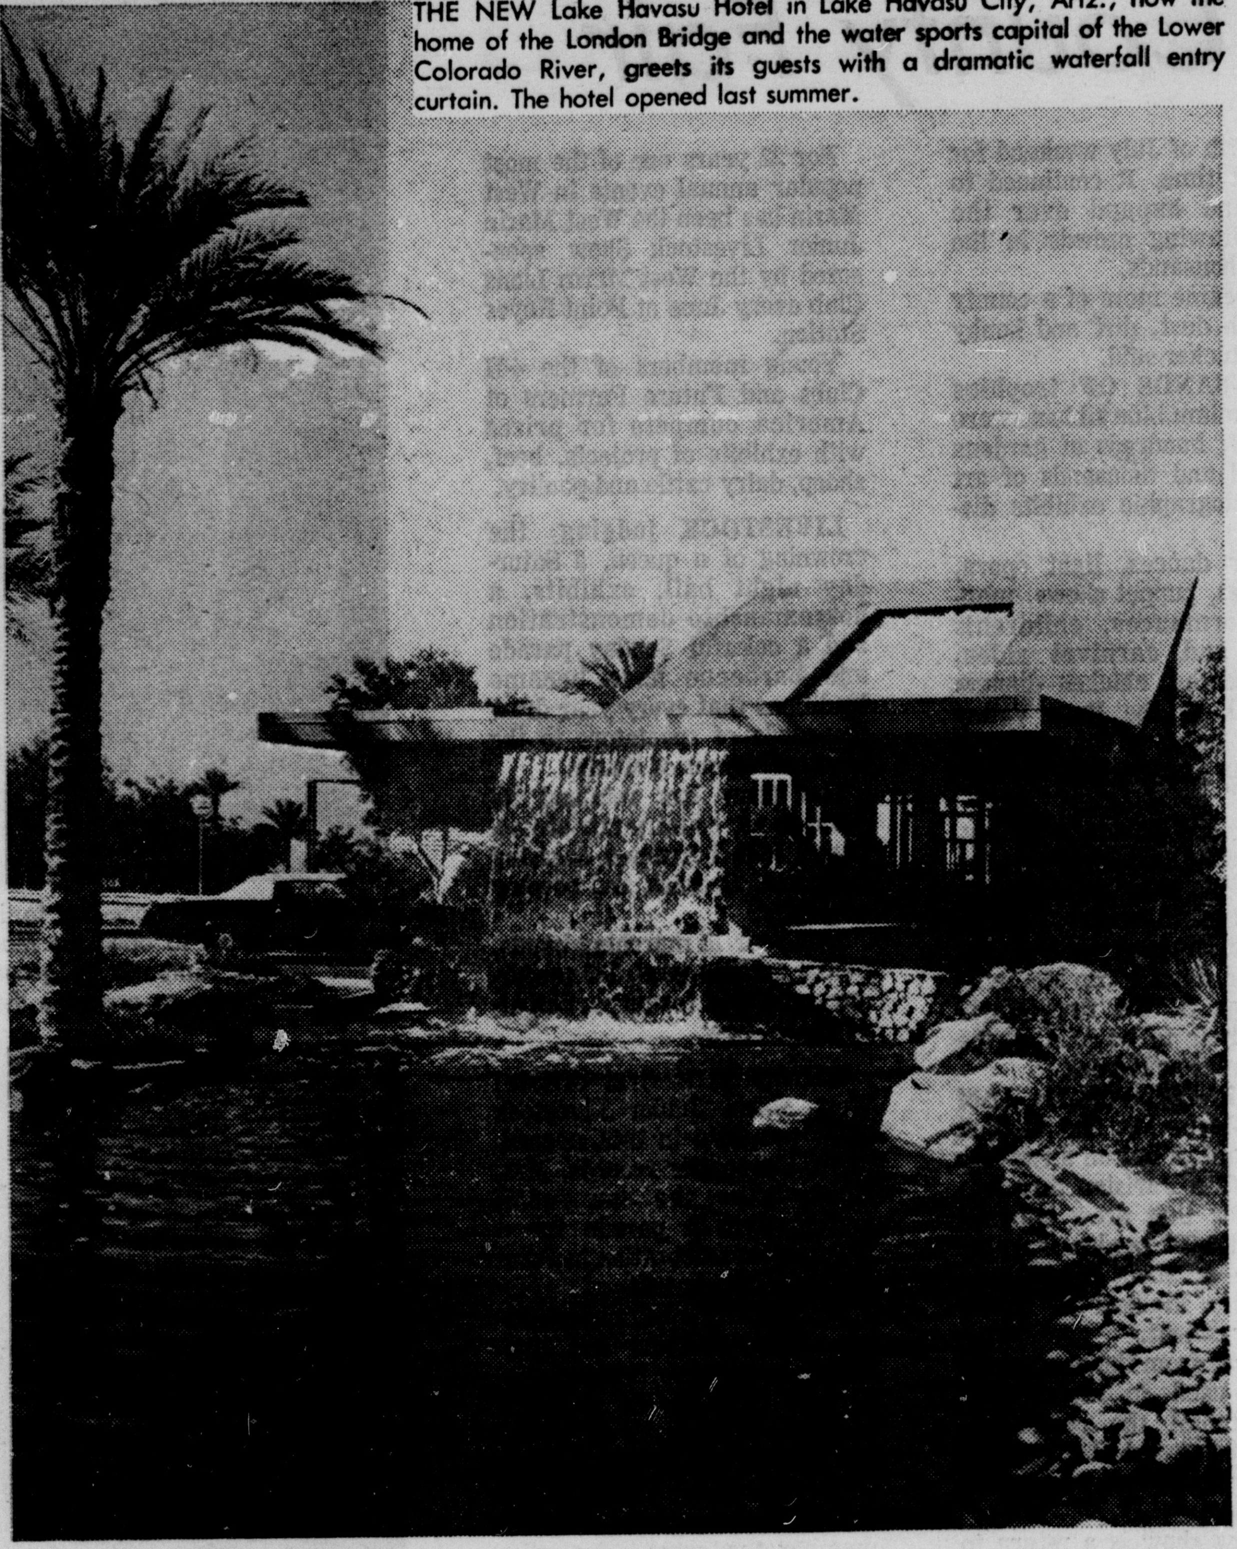
PUT UP FOR sale by the City of London to make way for a wider structure, London Bridge set its owners back nearly two and a half million dollars with another five million dollars thrown in for transportation and reconstruction.

After the purchase in April 1968, each granite stone was lovingly dismantled, given a code number for the rebuilding process, and shipped off to its new home in Arizona. The stones range in weight from a half to eight-and-a-half tons and some 22 million pounds overall, which gives you an idea of how monumental an accomplishment this U.S. version of London Bridge was.

Along with the appropriate Anglo-American hoopla, the bridge will officially open on Oct. 10 with Lord Mayor of London Sir Peter Studd and Gov. Jack Williams of Arizona mingling with Indian tribal leaders and Hollywood personalities.

The opening ceremonies will only be part of a 10-week pageant of arts and crafts, theater and other spectacles that started Sept. 16 and will run through the end of November. Egg-and-spoon, dart-throwing and Elizabethan-to-Victorian costume contest will give a British flavor to the celebrations.

FINAL EVENT of the period will be the world's richest boat race, the $60,000 Eighth Annual Outboard World Championship, Nov. 28 and 29. Write the Lake Havasu Chamber of Commerce, Post Office Box 707, Lake Havasu City, Ariz., 86403, for a schedule of events.



THE NEW Lake Havasu Hotel in Lake Havasu City, Ariz., now the home of the London Bridge and the water sports capital of the Lower Colorado River, greets its guests with a dramatic waterfall entry curtain. The hotel opened last summer.

But there's plenty to do right now. The city has golf, tennis, equestrian facilities, and all sorts of nautical sports equipment. Fishing for bass is good, and the beaches at Lake Havasu City and around the 45-mile-long lake are clean, secluded and, so far, uncrowded.

There isn't the greatest selection of hotels to choose from, and this should be the area where the city will probably receive the greatest growth now that London Bridge is up. The Nautical Inn is comfortable if not luxurious. Rates for a single room without meals start at $14. Lake Havasu Hotel is another popular stopping place.

BY CAR, Lake Havasu City is about four hours from Los Angeles, two and a half hours from Las Vegas and three hours from Phoenix.

When you get there, we recommend that you get out and walk across the bridge at least once, preferably at twilight when the shimmering desert light is most beautiful. You won't feel suddenly transported to London or the continent, though there are such momentos of its past as shrapnel scars from Nazi bombs, but there is a magic and tranquility to the bridge.

With only the Arizona sun to contend with, the "American" London Bridge is going to stand for a long time to come and receive somewhat different traffic than it did in Merrie England. In fact, we'd expect Hollywood to zero in soon.

After all, where else can you find one location to shot both a western and World War II movie at the same time?

Will Rogers' Home Attracts Thousands

A leading tourist attraction in Southern California is Will Rogers State Historic Park, near Santa Monica. The California Office of Tourism reports that more than 250,000 persons a year tour the rooms where for years "the cowboy philosopher" made his home on a 345-acre ranch.

The South Pacific Can Be Paradise To Bargain Hunter

Islands Offer Wide Variety Of Hard-To-Locate Wares

Anyone who thinks the dollar doesn't go far these days — monetarily, as well as geographically — need only turn to Hawaii and the South Pacific, where island shopping is becoming as much of a vacation pastime as island hopping.

Hawaii is an ideal place to start, or even finish, a Pacific shopping expedition. Honolulu, for example, is fine for picking up aloha shirts and muumuus, which will come in handy on some of the other South Seas islands. The selections in Hawaii generally are wider and the prices cheaper.

AMERICAN SAMOA and her neighbor, Western Samoa, carry out the Polynesian theme in real island fashion and in somewhat purer forms than in Hawaii.

Woven pandanus (screw pine) often in colorfully dyed designs, is a Samoan favorite for floor or place mats, shipping baskets, satchels, serving trays and even bedroom slippers. And excellent tapa cloth, hammered from tree bark, may be plain, although it more than likely will be decorated with traditional brown and black designs.

Among the carved wood items that rate highly with visitors are ceremonial kava bowls (kava is a shrubby pepper from whose crushed root a popular island drink is made), tikis (images of a Polynesian supernatural power), facsimile ceremonial clubs and staffs and model canoes.

SHELL LEIS or necklaces and other shell jewelry, as well as dancing and hula skirts made of various fibers, also vie for one's dollar.

French Polynesia, an easy flight from Samoa, offers much the same in "buys" but with some regional differences.

The shopper browsing in Tahiti, Bora Bora or Moorea will find modern versions — some slick, some good, some not so good — of tikis, ceremonial adzes and drums, all carved from wood, while volcanic stone is sometimes fashioned into representations of old gods.

The foremost buys, perhaps, are mother-of-pearl articles, bedspreads in gay patterns and hand-painted, silk-screened or hand-painted fabrics.

THE FIJI Islands, the "crossroads of the mid-Pacific," are full of bargain possibilities, both native and foreign. The many duty-free shops in Nadi and Suva, both on Viti Leva, the principal island in the Fiji group, mean excellent buys in cultured pearls, sari silks, cameras, watches, binoculars, silver filigree jewelry and numerous other "overseas" merchandise that costs only about half as much as in the States.

The Fijis also offer a fine assortment of local handicrafts. Tapa cloth and woven fans, mats, baskets and other items, many bearing distinctive Fijian motifs, are common. So are shell leis, mother-of-pearl jewelry and tortoise shells fashioned into accessories for both men and women.

For the daring man wants to try something different, it's an easy matter to pick up a sulu, that traditional and snappy sawtooth-fringed "skirt" that Fiji men, including soldiers and policemen, wear.

NEW ZEALAND, too, has much to whet the shopper's appetite these days, for it has experienced a revival of Maori (Polynesian) arts and crafts, along with increased production of other "take home" products.

Among Maori creations — the tourist-busy Rotorua thermal area is best for shopping — are war clubs, tattooed facial masks, tikis and a batch of "souvenir" gimmicks carved from wood and featuring ancient decorative designs.

Tikis also are made from greenstone, the local jade; the hand-carved ones are especially eye-catching. Jewelry and other products also incorporate this extraordinarily hard gemstone.

Other possibilities: flax-reed skirts, scatter or travel rugs of sheepskin or lamb wool, artickes inlaid with rare woods and canned cheeses. New Zealand produces some of the world's best and most varied kinds of cheese.

IN AUSTRALIA, sheep play an important part — as they do in New Zealand — in what the shopper will find on store shelves. Wool products, among them blankets, sweaters, skirts and yardage, are all excellent buys, as are sheepskin rugs and vests.

Opals, especially black ones, rank among the world's best and sell at bargain prices.

Still another bargain are the superb Australian wines.

The native crafts, from boomerangs to bark paintings, can be unusual; a bit of careful shopping will uncover fine examples of native work. Still other favorites are stuffed, cuddly-soft koala bears — toy bears, that is — canned kangaroo tail soup, out-back hats, china, pottery and ceramics, hand beaten jewelry of silver or copper and paintings from a new and respected breed of artists.

THE PACIFIC-bound holidayer should bear in mind that virtually all international airports west of Hawaii have duty-free shops. All are ideal for last-minute shopping for liquor, perfumes, watches and cameras, among other goodies, usually at prices 40 to 50 per cent below those you'll find in your local Main Street store.

WESTERN VISITORS find the native marketplace at Suva, Fiji, a fascinating spot for browsing and shopping. Here an American tourist examines just some of the handcrafted goods offered for sale there.

It's The Britain Nobody Knows

There's a part of Britain so little known by Americans that it might almost be on the dark side of the moon.

It's almost tax-free.

It's a cow paradise.

It's nearer to France than Britain.

The queen rules it not as Queen of England but as the Duke of Normandy!

It's the Channel Islands.

Take Jersey, for instance, 10 miles by six, rolling and prosperous.

THE JERSEY tax system is as mild as the climate, and not even millionaires pay more than four shillings in the pound. Consequently Britain's overtaxed rich have settled on the island like flies on a jam bun.

Its population already stands at 70,000, and citizenship is increasingly difficult to attain. Visions of living in a second Monaco haunt the natives: recent proposals to convert St. Helier's Castle into a casino were indignantly quashed.

For visitors to the island a good spot is Longueville Manor, an ivied Norman hall, prudently updated century by century, and an excellent hotel, with double rooms at about $15. Through an open window you may hear the tinkle of Pimm's No. 1 being served by the swimming pool . . .

You may hire a limousine with chauffeur and drive completely across the island for under two dollars, but the best way to explore Jersey is to climb into a rented car, follow your nose, and stop when you arrive somewhere in particular, use Alice's technique in looking-Glass Land: head in the opposite direction. Works like a charm.

If the road beneath your tires plunges suddenly away, do not be alarmed. You have merely left Jersey's central plateau, and are descending towards one of its innumerable sandy bays. The most beautiful of these are St. Brelade's, and the Royal Bay of Grouville, which is dominated by Mount Orgeuil Castle. This harmless-looking fortress was built in 1109 to defend Jersey from France.

It's a good place to laze, sandwich in hand, and admire the sight of miles of sunlit seawater.

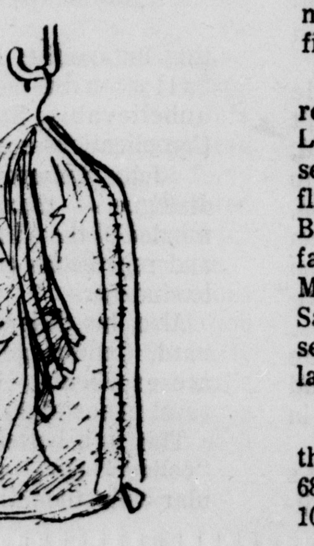
The west coast of Jersey is one enormous beach, where the rollers are perfect and lifeguards patrol the sands. Lovers of long windy walks will not be able to resist its four-mile concrete ramp, built during the German occupation of 1941-45.

St. Helier, capital of Jersey, boasts an elegant 19th Century square.

VISIT THE Lily Langtry showcase in the city museum. Edward VII's exquisite mistress was Jersey-born. Her mother-of-pearl vanity case, displayed here, is surely the zenith of High Victorian camp. There are bushes, tweezers, hooks, combs, spoons, palettes, stencils, razors, pins, puffs, and curling-rods, all intricately worked in silver, even a tiny barometer for Mrs. Langtry to plot her make-up meteorologically.

In the nearby oil portrait by Sir John Everett, she seems no more than a bosomy brunette with a large nose and liquid eyes: for all that, she is Jersey's most famous daughter.

An hour and a quarter north of Jersey by hydrofoil lies Guernsey, Victor Hugo's "ile severe et douce". The capital, St. Peter Port, stacked up against the harbor like palings round a pond, markets as many duty-free good things as St. Helier, within a smaller area. Scotch at $1.50 a quart, La Corona cigars at $8 a 5-lb. box, and beer at a dime a pint are typical examples.



THE COBBLED city square is dominated by Les Halles Market, a delicate Victorian structure full of fresh fruit and seafood. Here 90 cents will buy a vast pink crab, with seawater still wet on its back. Invest six further cents in a lemon, return to your hotel, and bribe the kitchen to boil the crab for you. When it is served, crown it with sweet butter and ply your lemon literally.

You can't eat better anywhere.

At St. Peter Port is the world's smallest church. It is called Le Vauxbelets Chapel, and it holds, at a pinch, one priest and a congregation of two. It is the life's work of a Roman Catholic monk, who inlaid it throughout with translucent shells, broken china, and colored glass.

When the sun slants through the trees and lights up its walls, the effect is like something out of Revelations: "The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth . . ."

(The Channel Islands can be reached by daily flights from London. These serve both Jersey and Guernsey. Continental flights also come in from Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam. A fast hydrofoil service links St. Malo, Jersey, Guernsey, and Sark. There are frequent ferry services between all the islands).

Picking America's Prettiest

THERE SHE IS: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF MISS AMERICA by Frank Deford; Viking, 351 pages, $10. Reviewed by Eugene Block.

A delightful, authoritatively written study of what intellectuals might term triviata Americana is Frank Deford's analysis of all that has gone on on the steel pier of the boardwalk of Atlantic City on the evening of the second Saturday of almost every September since 1921.

In great and interesting depth, Deford relates every conceivable aspect of the pageant which attracted on television, this year, almost 40 million viewers.

"There She Is" gives myriad hints to attractive, talented girls who might want to spend a Labor Day holiday in New Jersey and a year touring the United States and other parts of the world as America's most publicized female. The reader gets to know well every beautiful girl who was Miss America and equally well the many important people behind the scenes of the non-profit organization which produces the show for which NBC extracted close to seven and a half million dollars this year.

In the sense that there are no bad people, no corruption, no avarice, but only beautiful girls with attractive figures, quick minds and wit and abundant talent, "There She Is" is a nice book, a well-written book, a humorous and an interesting one. Deford likes all the people who are the subjects of his book, and they emerge as likable people.

If there is a protagonist, and there are many, it is the Pageant, itself. The author is impressed by it and its integrity:

"If the Pageant had ever sold out to television, by now it surely would have been moved to Burbank, videotaped in a studio, included a lot of male dancers in the opening number, and have slick routines by a comedian named Joey interspersed throughout. All the judges would be Nanette Fabray and Jan Murray, and their vote totals would be lit up on big electronic boards. Second-rate male celebrities would be employed to escort contestants, 'There She Is' would be sung by this year's hot new male lead that the network is pushing . . . and Miss America would be crowned by a leering Joe Namath.

"If you think this is far-fetched, you have never seen what many other beauty pageants are coming to on TV."

Since Deford is a senior editor for Sports Illustrated, he is used to statistics. "There She Is" includes many. He is also used to making decisions and moral judgments. After careful study of all past Miss Americas, he cites his top 10. He deems Evelyn Ay, Miss America in 1954, the best of all: She measured 37-24-36.

Along with being a statistical study, "There She Is" is a historical, economical, sociological, political examination of the times of the Miss Americas. Trends are studied and discussed:

" . . . As a matter of fact, the last 16 straight Miss Americas have come from precisely those states which political theorist Kevin Phillips includes as part of the 'emerging majority' of conservative thought. Specifically, six TV Miss Americas have come from the states of the Confederacy, six from the plains-mountains, and four from the Midwest."

If Deford writes a sequel to "There She Is" next year, he can maintain his thesis with this year's Miss America, an Ohioan who told reporters:

"I'm conservative and I'm very proud of it. I'm not a typical coed, but I feel the majority of my peers feel the way I do. I faced a lot of pressure from my peers, but I feel that I'm a secure enough individual. Idon't need any escape . . . "

Deford does not ignore the fact that all of Miss Americas have been white and that Bess Myerson, Jewish, was the only non-Christian Miss America. But he foresees the time when a black, an Oriental or a Chicana might be sung to by Bert Parks, with a bouquet of American beauty roses in her arms and a crown on her head.

It is doubtful that Frank Deford would argue too strongly that the Miss America Contest is not a slice of triviata Americana. But as he points out:

" . . . The critics who attack Miss America for being irresponsible and escapist miss the whole point. Of course it is. Miss America is escapist, and so are Disneyland and the Baltimore Colts, so is a skinny dip and so is Johnny Carson, so is a ski lodge, and so is visiting the koala bears in the San Diego Zoo, and so are the Indianapolis 500 and a dirty movie from Sweden, and so is Don Ho, and so is a brook that runs through a park in Denton, Tex., with shade trees and flowers and small dogs barking at a clear blue sky. So, too, was the Saturday Evening Post before it became topical and tough and unpopular."

PATRICIA Donnelly, the Miss Michigan and Miss America of 1939, a year when American patriotism was at high tide, is just one of the many beautiful young women pictured and discussed in Frank Deford's "There She Is: The Life and Times of Miss America."

Southeast Asia War From Which We Didn't Learn

WALKOUT WITH STILWELL IN BURMA by Frank Dorn; Crowell, 248 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by James Klett.

At the end of World War II American Army historians interrogated dozens of German generals to learn how to fight on the Russian plains.

It was thought, presumedly, that we would fight there. But there were few if any studies of our experiences in Southeast Asia and China. A recent bibliography of the wars there lists no book in English earlier than 1950.

Reading "Walkout" then, the effect is striking when these World War II experiences are compared with those we have so recently experienced and, in fact, are now experiencing. We should have spent our time studying that earlier war. Europe is almost in its third generation of leaders but the principals Chaing Kai-shek and Chou En-lai are still there. Frank Dorn knew both well.

But even more depressing while reading a book like this is the realization that all the stage props and background characters are also still there. There were at that time, too, those warlords more out to settle petty hatred scores than to fight a war, those "allies" of ours who will line their own pockets at their own troop's expense. The desultory and infectious cruelty continues. And the American is forced to stand by and watch.

Frank Dorn's book is no scholarly analysis. The story is personal, but because Frank Dorn was General Dorn when the decisions were made during our first real jungle war, he was privy to a lot that scholars could only surmise. General Dorn, on the other hand, avoids those egotistical innuendos that usually characterize these accounts.

The first third of the book sets the background for the rest of the book and it is here that we learn what we missed before Vietnam. The rest of the book is a dramatic description of how General Joe Stilwell valiantly fought to put together a beaten Army in Burma and how the Japanese outfought the Allies and chased them out of Burma. This is an exciting tale. But the book shines in the first 100 pages when it describes the Southeast Asian scene we have come to know so well.

General Dorn was attache in China from 1934 to 1938 and knows and loves the Chinese people. How lucky we would have been to learn from him. When we went into Vietnam 20 years after the events of this book our problem was not that we did not know anything about Southeast Asia, it was that we did not know we knew nothing about it.

The book's 250 pages are too few. The maps are good and there are photographs.

Redwood High Graduate Authors A First Novel

THE PAPER CHASE by John Jay Osborn, Jr.; Houghton Mifflin, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

To be young is to suffer — even though you're an ex-Boy Scout, intelligent, and a first-year student at Harvard Law School.

That's the message in this first novel by an author who should know — John Jay Osborn, product of Larkspur's Redwood High, Harvard College and, in 1970, Harvard Law School.

He tells it like it is, and any former grad student (young or old) will recognize and sympathize with his characters.

The hero is Hart, a first-year Harvard Law student who suffers all the pangs of uncertainty, but who survives and even conquers the system.

His fellow-suffers include Brooks, the nice guy who can't make it academically' Ford, the organized operator sure to make Law Review; Anderson, who worries about "maximum grade point"; and Bell, who falls in love with his own outline of the Property course.

Hart's girl, Susan, is a late 20th Century wench who would have been equally at home in Elizabethan England.

Professor Kingsfield, Hart's demanding teacher and unwitting antagonist, is, conincidentally and completely unbelievably, Susan's father. Complications ensue.

JOHN JAY OSBORN JR.
Life at Harvard Law

John Osborn writes crisp dialogue — though one is reminded of the slim vocabularies and repetitious curses common to students.

Also, his descriptions of Harvard, Cambridge and environs are excellent — old grads will revel in nostalgia.

This is a better-than-average "college" novel sure to be popular with students.

Janet Flanner Back Again With Letters From France

PARIS JOURNAL 1965-1971, Volume Two, by Janet Flanner (Genet); Atheneum, 438 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

"Paris Journal" is an absolutely fantastic combination of facts, oddements, trivia and comment.

Miss Flanner, as Genet, has been writing her letters from Paris for the New Yorker magazine since 1925. This is a compilation of some of those letters for the years 1965-71 — the DeGaulle years. This could almost be a part of a biography of Charles de Gaulle and his effects on the times, the people and the monetary system of Europe and America.

But there is so much more.

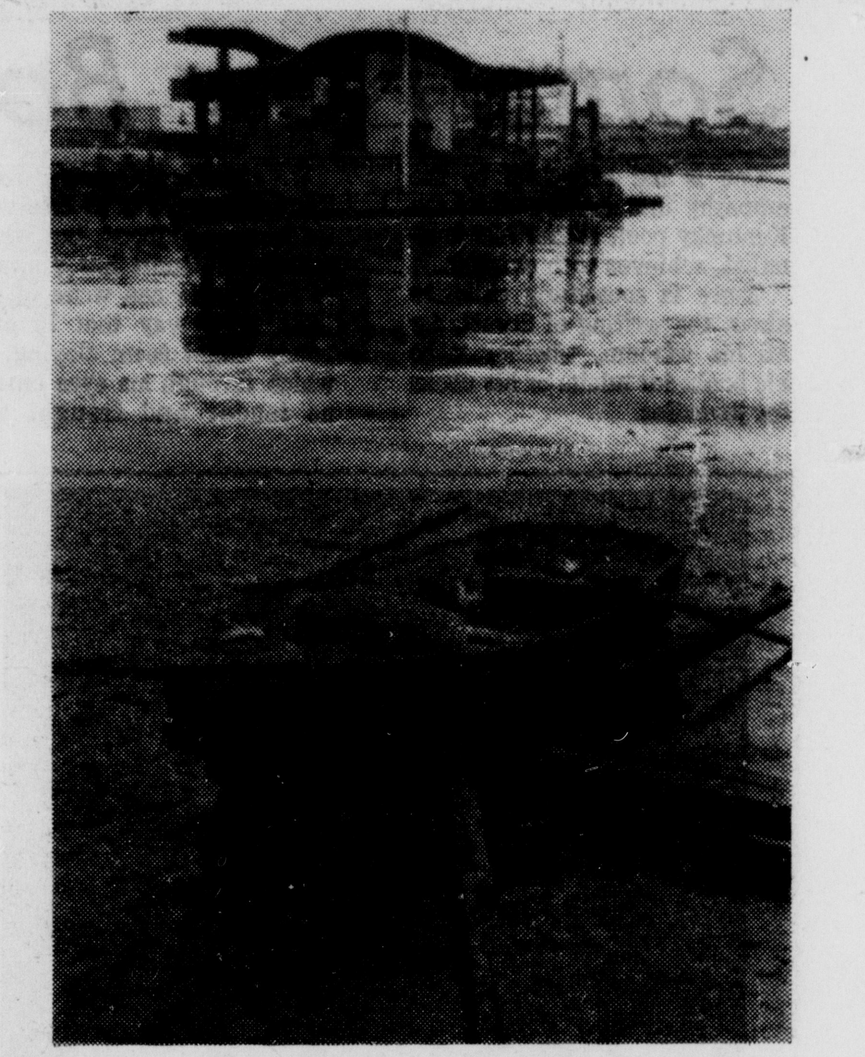
The fine portraits of Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas, the feeling of the French toward the American tourist, and the French views on art and music, life, love and clothes, all seen through the eyes of an American and expressed so that we can really understand the inner workings of a people with ways so often very different from our own.

She writes with a soft, tender hand, yet she pulls no punches. She writes equally well of Martin Luther King, the restoration of Versaille, and the French dislike of our entry into the Vietnam war. She explains impressions, newspapers, the stock market, clothes and the people of Paris, just like your great Aunt Susie might if it were her first trip there. For, though Miss Flanner has lived in Paris since 1921, she has lost none of her American viewpoint.

This is not a book to be read in one sitting, but to be savored, a few sections at a time. There is a complete index at the back, which adds immeasurably to the value of the book as a research source, for one could easily find anything needed to document a report.

Surely, the first volume of "Paris Journal," which won the National Book Award, could have been no better than this truly fine work.

Crisis At Santa Barbara — And What Led Up To Spill



THERE WAS NO fishing while a thick scum of heavy crude oil covered the waters of Santa Barbara's harbor when this United Press International photograph was taken in 1969. The story of the huge oil leak from an offshore Union Oil Co. drilling site is told by Los Angeles Time reporter Lee Dye, who covered the assignment for his newspaper, in his book "Blowout at Platform A."

By DON KEOWN

BLOWOUT AT PLATFORM A by Lee Dye: Doubleday, 231 pages, $5.95.

We still remember our first visit to Santa Barbara and the lasting impression made upon us by the beauty of its Riviera-like waterfront and harbor with its sparkling water and clean sands.

We recall, too, our disbelief and dismay when we first learned that huge, unsightly platforms had been erected off Santa Barbara's shores from which a number of major petroleum companies were proceeding to probe for oil.

We remember an uneasiness, even though friends in the petroleum industry assured us there was no danger of pollution to Santa Barbara's gem-like environment — other, of course, than the "sight pollution" already inflicted upon the view by the mere presence of the platforms. They were there, eyesores to be plainly seen, and could hardly be denied. But Americans have shown repeatedly an almost limitless ability to accept and adjust to ugliness, providing it is presented to them in the name of progress.

Then, on Jan. 28, 1969, it occurred. Something went wrong at Union Oil Co.'s Platform A, and millions of gallons of odorous, poisonous crude oil came boiling up from the ocean's floor. Neither industry nor government, it developed, was prepared to deal effectively with such a crisis. And so the release of the gooey mess was to continue for an unconscionably long period of time, at first as a continuous spill and then as periodic spurts.

It was an ecological disaster that was to mark the birth of a new awareness of how badly mankind has abused his environment, and a new movement to reverse that catastrophic trend.

The movement was born not just in the usually conservative community of Santa Barbara, but across the country, and even around the world. No longer was a small and lonely band of conservationists left to fight the battle alone while suffering the ridicule of their less sensitive and less farsighted fellow citizens.

This movement, given more lip-service than active support by government and more advertising ballyhoo than actual participation by much of big industry, has been limited in its successes. But there have been gains. And the impact of losses has been reduced.

It is this story that Lee Dye, a young Los Angeles Times reporter, previously with the San Jose Mercury and the San Diego Evening Tribune, tells in his book "Blowout at Platform A: The Crisis That Awakened a Nation."

The book is more than a recapitulation of the calamity at Santa Barbara. It is also an uncompromising capsule history of the petroleum industry from John D. Rockefeller and his wheeler-dealer tactics with his monolithic Standard Oil Co. down to the present day when a handful of major concerns and their millionaire principal stockholders and officers wield enormous political and economic influence and bask in the special privileges awarded them by their confederates and toadies in government and the Pentagon.

From these roots, Dye tells us, grew the philosophy that led ultimately to Santa Barbara's misfortune and to other mishaps elsewhere.

Then Secretary of Interior Walter Hickel was speaking for the petroleum industry when he said: "We must always go forward . . . to take care of the thirst of the population."

Dye suggests that it might be more than a wee bit stupid to press blindly forward, if one is standing on the edge of a precipice and facing the abyss.

He suggests, too, that before one does venture forward into untested territories, it might be wise to map some plans for unexpected eventualities and emergencies.

After the blowout at Platform A, he notes, the public discovered too late that "the industry was almost totally incapable of doing anything about the oil once it had been released into the channel." This, despite, the fact that "the industry knew there was a substantial chance of leakage."

Thanks to men like Lyndon B. Johnson, Russell Long, Robert Kerr, Everett Dirksen and Sam Rayburn, the petroleum giants not only were granted such special bonanzas as the notorious depletion allowances and import quotas, at taxpayers and consumers expense, but also were permitted to operate in hazardous circumstances without taking what seems now to be the most elemental of safety precautions.

Hickel, later to become somewhat of a hero with conservationists, acted with something less than courage and dispatch in the face of the Santa Barbara emergency, Dye also demonstrates.

After reviewing the buccaneering past of the petroleum industry, Dye asserts: "The industry is what it is today largely because of its past. Its game is to make money. Its tool is power. It has an abundance of each, and it uses both freely."

Yet, due in a large measure to the shock engendered by the Santa Barbara spill, there has been some erosion of that power, and big petroleum, at least to a degree, is on the defensive today. More and more voices, even in the U.S. Senate and in state legislatures, speak out critically. And Johnson, Rayburn, Dirksen, et al, are no longer present to defend the industry, or to close off debate.

This is not to say that the oil industry has been suddenly emasculated. It still commands fabulous wealth. And it does not hesitate to spend those monies on its own behalf, as it demonstrated in California in 1970 when it made huge contributions to help defeat Proposition 18 which would have permitted the expenditure of some state gasoline tax monies for mass transit and air pollution study purposes.

Thanks to such resources, foes outspent the friends of Proposition 18 by a 20 to 1 margin, thus defeating or distorting the democratic process.

The basic question, in Dye's mind, is not whether offshore oil exploration and drilling should be subjected to tighter controls and conducted with a greater sense of responsibility, but whether such should be undertaken at all.

His conclusion is that it should not. "No more leases should be sold," he writes. "The ocean should be preserved for those who will come this way long after we have passed from the picture." To those who think it impossible to poison an entire ocean, he answers that the same was once said of the Mississippi River, now referred to as "the colon of mid-America."

He rejects the contention of the oil industry and its political puppets that offshore production is essential to the national welfare and the national defense, citing such alternative fuel sources as geothermal steam, shale deposits, solar and atomic-energies, recycled wastes, etc. And, of course, there are the vast foreign oil fields now largely denied to us because of the import quotas that create a captive market for domestic oil.

"The nation's energy problems are not impossible to solve," Dye writes, "but this nation is not presently inclined to solve them."

Dye's book is a hard-hitting attack against a legitimate target — an industry with ample means to defend itself and with no hesitation about so doing. The Santa Barbara episode alone is testimony to the need for a closer watch upon these petroleum colossi and upon the politicians who too meekly do their bidding.

A PRAISEWORTHY project of Seattle's Superior Publishing Co. is the republication in facsimile of issues of Fly, the National Aeronautic Magazine, from November, 1908, through August, 1909.

The magazines reproduced are from the collection of Jerry M. Straub, are are presented exactly as they were except for a very slight reduction in size.

They constitute a tremendous bonanza for students of aviation and of the history of the early 20th Century, and are quite likely to attract an audience well beyond those confines with their "camp" appeal.

From those earliest years of aviation one can read how to build a gliding machine, all about the aero clubs, why ladies should be interested in ballooning, the story of the dirigibles, the data on man-lifting kites, the details of the Green aero motor, a description of the Curtiss Biplane, Hudson Maxim's forecasts of the role of the flying machine in war, biographies of pioneers of aeronautics, all complete with pictures. Plus advertisements of such products as the Steam Motor Journal, advertising balloons, the Gillette safety razor, the Howard watch, Wilbur's chocolates, the novel "Born Again" and the Fisk automobile.

It is an altogether fascinating trip back into another era. No price is quoted on the book, but you can bet it is more than the $1 a year's subscription to the magazine cost in 1908.

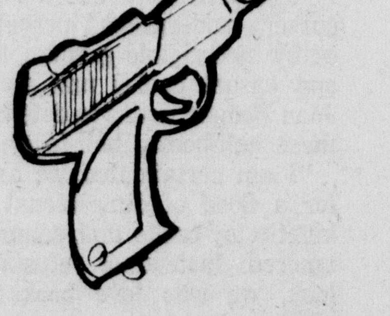
THE NEWEST cooperative effort of Ballantine Books and the Sierra Club is a softcover edition of Patricia Caulfield's "The Everglades," making that attractive book and urgent plea for conservation, complete with all the color photographs, available now for $3.95. It's a beautiful book, expousing a worthy cause.

NEW FROM Writer's Digest: "Cartoonist's Market," listing some 600 markets that purchase cartoons and detailing their terms and needs.

A GRIM reminder of the past is "Nazi Regalia" (Ballantine, $2.95) by Jack Pia, a softcover catalog with color illustrations of "souvenirs" from the terrible years when Adolf Hitler was inflicting his horrors upon mankind. It was also an era when much stock was put in uniforms and symbols. The book is for collectors and students of the period.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE EXLUSIVE MRS. POLLIFAX by Dorothy Gilman; Doubleday, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.



Emily Pollifax is, of course, the well intentioned but naive amateur spy introduced by Dorothy Gilman in two earlier novels and portrayed upon the motion picture screen by Rosalind Russell.

This time the indominitable Mrs. Pollifax, through her highly implausible connection with the CIA, undertakes a mission behind the Iron Curtain and into the Balkans to deliver passports to the underground.

The to-be-expected and anticipated complications are not long in developing.

It is good fun reading and another juicy screen role for comedienne Miss Russell.

Some New Books For The Juniors

One is not surprised by the empathy that Jesse Stuart, the Kentucky poet, author and journalist, achieves with children.

There is something childlike about the writing of Stuart, for all his wisdom, whether it be his books for adults or his books for juveniles.

We speak of a certain sensitivity that most of us lose when we leave childhood, but which, somehow, Stuart has managed to retain. He can write of subjects in a way that in other hands might seem cloying, but which through his eyes emerge as tender and fraught with meaning.

The quality is present in full measure in his "Come to My Tomorrowland" (Aurora, $4.95), a simple little story about a young girl afflicted with polio who finds an albino fawn, also lame, and nurses him back to health. From the animal the child, too draws inspiration and courage. Then comes the time when the game warden demands that Snowball be returned to the wilds. Joy is faced with yet another crisis.

It is a quite frankly sentimental story, but one suspects today's children can well use a little sentimentality. And no writer is more attune to nature and its wild things than Jesse Stuart.

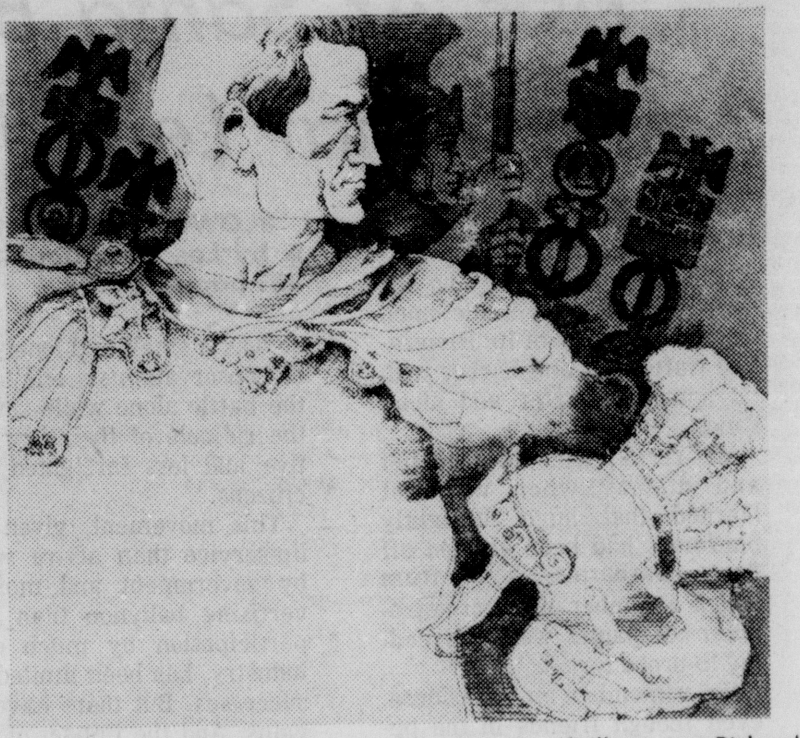
SOME OTHER new books for juniors:

Sophia Harvati Fenton attempts to lure the 9 to 11-year-olds (Holt, Rinehart, $3.50) into the world of ancient history with her "Ancient Rome" detailing how a small village grew into a city state and eventually an empire that ruled the western world. The author of earlier books in this "A Book to Begin On" series on Greece and Egypt, Miss Fenton tells her story of Rome simply and straightforwardly. But one suspects her strongest weapons are the illustrations by Richard Cuffari that have a strong, majestic quality that might well command the attention of otherwise dubious youngsters.

Another book about a fascinating foreign land, but this one dealing with more contemporary times and on the day-to-day living level is "My Village in Thailand" (Pantheon, $4.50). The two have been doing a series of "my village" books revealing the customs and living patterns of other peoples. Young Chavalit Khantasiri and his family of Bangkok are the subjects this time, and American children should find their very different way-of-life enchanting. Excellent, well printed photographs illustrate the book.

For youngsters with a leaning toward physiology "Controls in Your Body" (Lippincott, $3.95) offers an interesting explanation of the nervous system without seeming in any way "school bookish." Navin Sullivan, an English technical journalist with a degree in medicine, is the author and Anthony Ravielli the illustrator. To add zest for the young reader, Sullivan provides some simple experiments for the home or school. Well done.

For consistent high quality Harper & Row leads the pack among the publishers of suspense fiction for adults. Apparently it lavishes the same pride and care in its choice of thrillers for juveniles. "The House on the Brink" ($4.50) by the Englishman John Gordon is an outstanding example. A boy and a girl in the marshlands hunting King John's lost treasures and involving themselves in the secrets of a strange small town that place them in the gravest danger — what youngster could fail to respond to that kind of excitement? Gordon provides splendid atmosphere and a well-paced plot with meaningful characters.



THERE IS A HEROIC quality to the artwork of illustrator Richard Cuffari that fits perfectly with the subject matter of Sophia Harvati Fenton's book, "Ancient Rome: A Book to Begin With."

"MYSTERY OF the Maya Jade" (Lippincott, $4.95) by Elizabeth Honness parlays an exotic setting — Guatemala — with such mysterious goings-on as the theft of a museum piece and some adventures in an underground burial site. The proponents of the lively action in this tale are a young girl, Pam, traveling with her aunt, and a young boy, Toby, whose father is a working archaeologist. Miss Honness, a veteran writer of suspense novels for juniors, keeps it all deliciously thrilling while avoiding gore and mayhem.

On the other hand, "Me and Jim Luke" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Robbie Branscum may be a bit too realistic for impressionable youngsters. Two Southern lads find a body in the woods that involves them with the Klan and other dangers. Along with the taut suspense a romance between a doctor and a woman writer, friends of the boys, make this a book best appreciated by older boys and girls, say about 12 or 13. But realism, there is. And young Sammy John makes a spellbinding narrator.

C. Everard Palmer writes once again of Jamaica in his third novel, "The Sun Salutes You" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.95). Mike returns to Kendal with his new truck, determined to set up a haulage business. But Matt Southern wants no competition. The result is a battle of wits and wills. But Palmer, Jamaica-born and reared, keeps his tone light and his dialogue crisp, so that his story moves along at a fast and pleasing pace. This, too, is for the 12-year level, give or take a year or two.

"The Story of Sergei Prokofiev" (Lippincott, $4.50) by the musician and writer Helen K. Laufmann is a demonstration that biographies of the greats of the arts written for children can be made as palatable as the more popular stories of men of action and adventure. Mrs. Kaufmann tells the colorful story of the Russian composer in a lively, sprightly fashion. Photographs are sprinkled through the book as illustrations. Unfortunately, the publisher has given the book an unjacketed and rather forbidding cover that might turn off all prospective young readers except dedicated students of fine music.

"Iron-Tail" by George X. Sand (Scribner's, $4.95) is a conservation-slanted animal adventure story set in the Florida Everglades, with a young alligator as its central character. As Sand details the day-to-day existence of Iron-Tail, made hazardous by man and his many encroachments upon nature, he also provides a good picture of swamp ecology, its delicate balance, and the damage that can be done by unwarranted intrusions. For the 11 and 12-year-old level, it is one of the better juvenile novels catering to the new interest in the environment.

"Sir Addlepate and the Unicorn" (Doubleday, $3.95) by artist-illustrator Dahlov Ipcar is a fantasy picture story bright with color. Sir Addlepate sets out to find the unicorn desired by his fair maiden above all other things. But before the mission is accomplished he has been involved in a wild assortment of adventures with a varied cast of weird creatures. Imaginative children will enjoy the romp away from realism.

Chef Gilly's Cookbook— A French Cuisine Classic

FEAST OF FRANCE by Antoine Gilly; Crowell, 433 pages, $13.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

It may come as a surprise to some television viewers to learn that Julia Childs does not "own" the American market for books on French cooking. The latest challenger to her two prolific-selling works is this splendid volume by one of the most famous of all restaurateurs to practice French gastronomy for American palates, Antoine Gilly.

With the help of author and gourmet Jack Denton Scott, Chef Gilly has assembled what is probably the premiere cookbook of 1971.

It contains more than 300 recipes from hors d'oeuvres to desserts, the classics of his home land and the dishes he featured at his tremendously successful New York restaurants before retiring to Nice. While there is less of a tendency on his part to Americanize techniques and ingredients than exists in the innovative Mrs. Childs, Gilly's long career in America did cause him to make use of distinctively American staples and to apply French cooking methods to these.

This big, illustrated book, certain to enjoy a brisk Christmas trade, contains not only Gilly's most valued recipes, but also considerable insight into the theories and philosophies of French cooking.

On Nov. 6, at Stonehenge Inn in Ridgefield, Conn., Gilly will be presented the coveted Paulee de Meursault literary prize for this book. The occasion will be the annual American version of the traditional Paulee gathering at Meursault, France, celebrating the grape harvest and honoring the growers.

It is deserved recognition for not only one of the world's most famous chefs, but also the tutor of a very large proportion of the most talented men practicing French cuisine in America today. And now the author of a handsome and expertly-done cookbook whose delectable contents are likely to convert many to the long-held French belief that food deserves that little special flair and attention that the Gallic chefs accord it.

"Feast of France" is especially noteworthy for the attention it pays to that country's justly-famed peasant or country dishes along with haute cuisine from Paris and the other cities — and, of course, Chef Gilly's own inventions.

In Defense Of Pop-Ups

After admitting that "I have a sneaking yen for pop-up books . . . (which) constitute a sort of nursery underground perpetuated by incorrigible grandmothers and casual uncles and aunts," Joan Bodger writes in defense of these half-books, half-toys:

"I am certain that we are in for a flood of dimensional and kinetic toy-books that cannot be ignored. Instead of refusing to look, we who love books and children had better start taking these new developments seriously. We must set standards as rigorously as we have for conventional books, records and film tapes."

For Color In Winter Rely On The Annuals

Garden Page

In most sections of this country the winter landscape is either a drab brown or a snowy white.

Californians, however, by showing a little foresight in their planting, can enjoy spring-like color in their gardens in December, January and February.

Many shrubs and trees unfold their floral beauty during the cool weather months in Marin. But the best source of such "off-season" color is the annual flower that will reward you with bouquets at the time when gardeners in the East are huddling around their firesides and all outside is cold and dead.

AMONG THE most popular color bearers are Iceland Poppies, Caldendulas and Fairy Primroses, whose consistent performances account for their high ranking throughout the state.

Iceland Poppies produce exquisite flowers — the petals have a crepe-like texture and the blooms come in a wide range of cheery colors — to brighten any area of the garden. Use them in border situations or massed plantings. They must have good drainage, hence growing them in planter boxes is an excellent method to showcase the beauty of Iceland Poppies.

How much growing time the plants get in fall dictates the flowering period; so don't delay in setting-out the plants.

THIS IS TRUE, too, of Calendulas — often called the brightest of all winter-blooming flowers. Plant them immediately if you would enjoy the Calendulas' bright blooms before spring.

The colors of the large Calendula flowers are intense — especially in the hybrids. The traditional orange and yellow flowers have been enhanced to include shades of cream and gold, and vivid persimmon.

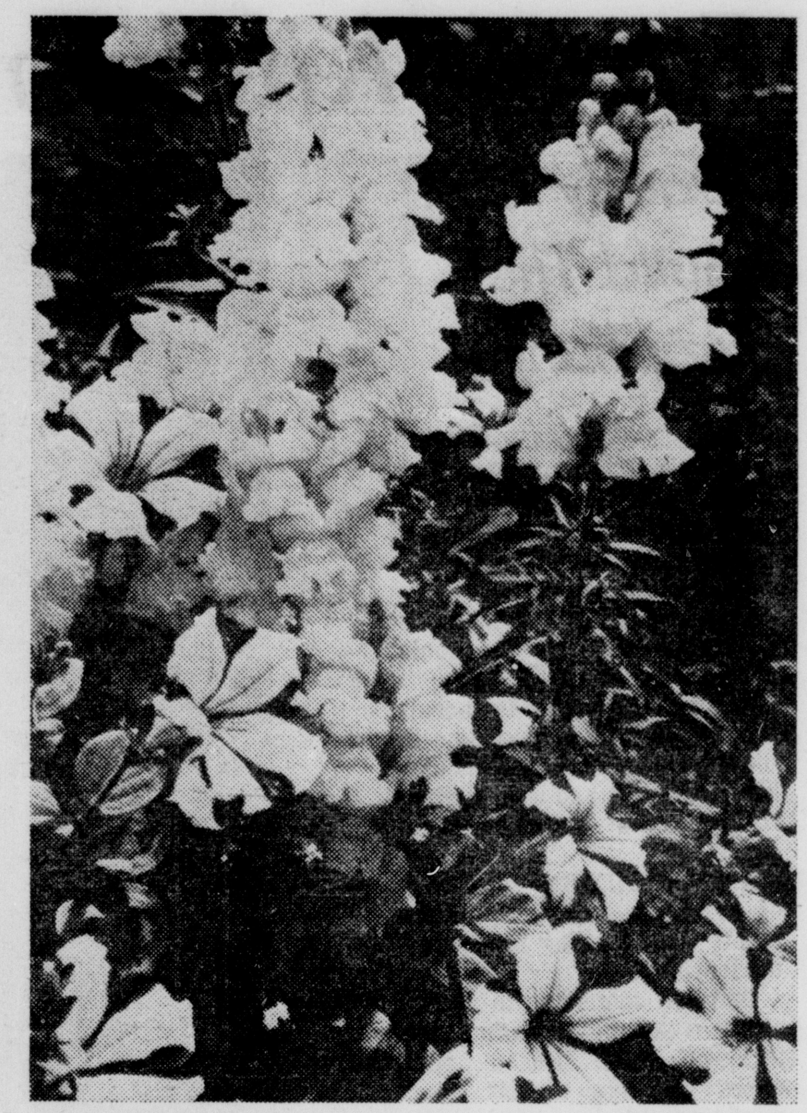
A flower bed of Calendulas is a neighborhood sensation; borders come alive with brightness, and random plantings are sparkling accents. Pots of blooming Calendulas displayed on the proch make unusual and colorful decorations.

FAIRY PRIMROSES introduce a different and pleasing dimension to the winter garden. What their blooms lack in brightness is made up for in charm and warmth. White, lavender and pink heads of color, borne above attractive mounds of crisp green foliage are a delightful addition to the late winter garden.

Plant them as an edging for a walk, as a border for a garden bed, or as fillers in-between existing shrubbery, and you'll discover the Fairy Primrose can hold its own in any company.

Some other annuals that can be planted now for winter cheer are the Snapdragons — dwarf, middle-size and tall —, Stocks, Pansies and Violas.

All will do a job for you. And do it when you need it most in your garden.



THE SNAPDRAGON is but one of the many annual flowers that can be planted to brighten the winter garden in Marin. But it is one of the best. The famous tall-growing Snapdragons have now been joined by dwarf types and a newer generation of intermediate-growers, so that these popular bloomers can be used in a wide variety of planting situations. Pictured is an intermediate-size Snapdragon, 18 to 24 inches tall, that has been used with other annuals to highlight a seasonal flower bed. Marin nurseries have "Snaps" for planting now.

Don't Overlook American Bulbs

When you mention spring-blooming flower bulbs most people immediately start thinking of Tulips and Hyacinths "imported from Holland."

So you might be surprised to learn that there are many more American-grown bulbs planted in our home gardens in this area than there are imported bulbs.

The truth of the matter is that here in the United States we produce some of the finest bulbs in the world and, believe it or not, many millions of these bulbs are exported to Holland each year!

In all fairness it should be stated that the best Tulips, Hyacinths, Crocus, and other miscellaneous bulbs still are imported. A complete fall-planting bulb garden should contain both American and imported bulbs for the most outstanding results.

MOST OF THE bulbs produced in the United States come from our fertile soils here on the West Coast. From Southern California comes the world famous "Tecolote" Giant Ranunculus, Anemones, Freesias, Sparaxis, and many other miscellaneous bulb items. Further north in the states of Washington and Oregon, you'll find millions of Daffodils, Dutch Iris and Lily bulbs harvested each fall.

Let's review these "MADE IN U.S.A." Fall bulbs and see how they will fit into your gardening plans.

From Southern California:

RANUNCULUS ARE the most popular of all fall-planted bulbs, both domestic and imported, in areas with mild winters such as Marin. There is no other bulb that will give you more for your money, as just one bulb can reward you with up to 70 huge double blooms.

It is interesting to note that several million "Tecolote" Ranunculus are exported to Holland and other foreign countries each year, which is proof of how truly outstanding they are.

Anemones are the perfect companions to Ranunculus and require the exact same care and conditions. They are an excellent cut flower and will bloom continously in the garden for over a six to eight week period.

Freesias and Sparaxis naturalize very easily in our gardens and get better and better year after year. Both provide glorious garden color and the fragrant Freesia is an outstanding cut-flower for the home.

Grown in the Northwest:

DAFFODILS ARE a favorite with almost every gardener because they are so easy to grow. Besides the popular all Yellow variety, King Alfred, there are several new and different types you should try. Four of the best new introductions are Better Times (yellow petals with a flame cup), Califlora GIANT (huge all-yellow trumpet variety with flowers up to twice the size of King Alfred), Binkie (a new "reverse bicolor" with yellow petals and a white cup), and Riotous (a full double all-yellow variety.)

Dutch Iris are the mainstay of the Northwest bulb crops.

In spite of the name, American grown Dutch Iris are far superior to those produced in Holland. In fact, many many millions are exported to Holland each year.

ONE OF THE reasons that Dutch Iris are so popular with the home gardener is that there are several varieties that produce various shades of blue flowers, and blue is a hard to find color in most plants. You can have continous show of blue "orchid-type" blooms in your garden all spring by planting these three varieties of Dutch Iris — Wedgewood (early-flowering sky blue), Ideal (mid-season blooming bright blue), and Blue Ribbon (late-flowering dark blue).

We've mentioned just a few of the many different types of spectacular bulbs items produced in the United States. So the next time you select bulbs for your garden, don't just purchase those with the "imported label." Look a little further and buy some American-grown bulbs.

You'll be glad you did.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Plant Sparaxis, Ixias, Dutch Iris and Freesias now. This foursome likes to go into the ground earlier than other spring-blooming bulbs.

✓Set-out Violas, Pansies, Calendulas and Iceland Poppies for bloom in fall and winter.

✓Dwarf Citrus can be put into tubs now, and used to decorate the sunny porch or entryway. Or you plant them in the garden where they will provide four-season enjoyment. Our local nurseries have the citrus varieties best for the area.

✓Choose potted Chrysanthemums, in festive fall colors, for displays indoors as well as accenting the garden.

✓Commerical soil conditioners are ideal for putting soil in a workable condition. They should be applied and worked-in before the rains start.

An Ideal Time To Plant Privacy

In planning and planting the garden for privacy, an effect of neatness and pleasing line of design can be achieved even while an effective screen is formed by plants.

The answer is to use those shrubs which excel as hedges and screens. Happily, for Marinites, there is no lack of such plant materials.

There are numerous shrubs to compliment any garden setting—and provide the desired degree of privacy. And, right now is an excellent time to set-out the plants.

There are many benefits to be derived by planting now.

THE CHIEF benefit, of course, is that you can enjoy the desired results much sooner than if you wait until spring to set-out the plants to create privacy in the garden. This is made possible because the plants become established before cold weather arrives. Even then, roots of the fall-planted specimens continue to develop and are mature enough to take advantage of the full growing season, next spring. This can mean added feet of branches on trees and with fall-planted shrubs can mean extra growth—when compared to spring-planted specimens, over a full growing season.

About the only plants which shouldn't be set-out now are the frost-tender ones. The evergreen shrubs for creating screens and privacy are basically a hardy lot, and should be planted now.

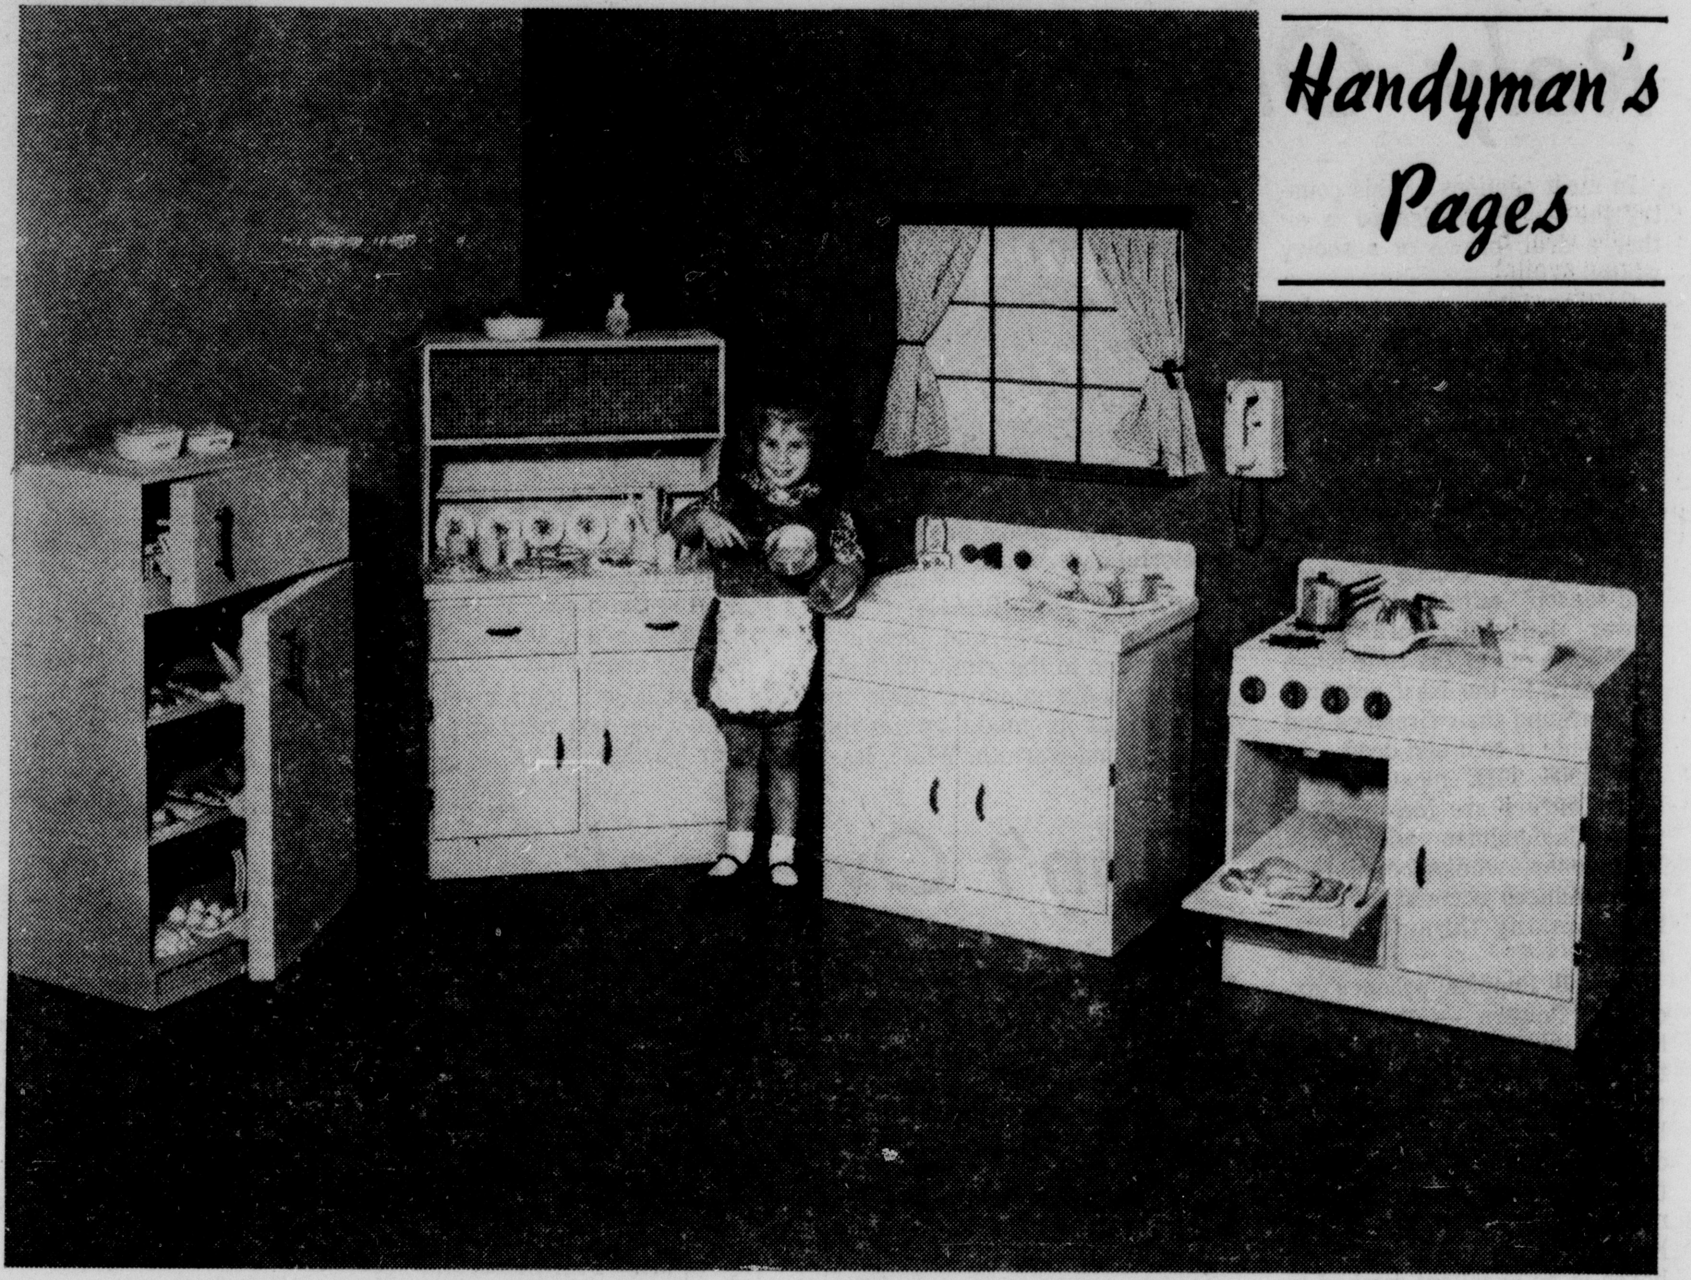
Boxwood and English Laurel are two traditional favorites for hedges and screens. For formal gardens they are outstanding; they can be clipped into any shape or form.

FASTER-GROWING choices include Carolina Cherry, Pittosporum and Xylosma. The latter is a spreading shrub, and its apple green foliage arches in attractive fashion. Carolina Cherry grows upright and semi-columnar, or oval.

For A Kitchen Just Like Mother Has

Handyman's Pages

Daddy Can Build The Appliances



DADDY CAN BRING a special sparkle to the eyes of his little darling this Christmas with the gift for her room of a set of kitchen appliances just like mother's. Refrigerator, cabinet, sink and range can all be built by the home handyman with the aid of Steve Ellingson's patterns. And, incidentally, it is one good way to keep little girls out from underfoot while mother is busy in her own kitchen.

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Children are great imitators.

Many a boy has developed a handiness with carpentry and woodworking tools in the workshop of his father.

And for small girls, mother's kitchen often holds the same fascination.

It is an opportunity to encourage the future homemaker in the development of good housekeeping habits and wise kitchen routines that should not be passed up.

AND THERE IS no surer way of teaching such accomplishments than making fun out of the learning.

Dad can contribute to wholesome trend by providing his little one with kitchen appliances that are almost exact duplicates of the models used by mother.

For instance, the refrigerator can have two doors, a freezer compartment, three shelves at the bottom and more shelves inside the doors — just like mother's indispensable appliance.

A DUTCH CABINET can have open-grooved shelves for display of dishes, along with drawers and doors for dinnerware and silver.

The sink can be equipped with plastic dishpan and simulated hot and cold water taps.

And a range can complete the kitchen equipment with its four burners and oven (complete with window) and storage for cookware.

All these, the home handyman can build. And his task will be greatly simplified if he has our patterns for these four child-sized appliances.

Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., and ask for Patterns No. 363.

You will receive detailed directions for the construction of all four pieces that can be built economically, using scrap pieces of wood for the most part.

The oven controls? They are made from surplus radio knobs.

YOUR HOME: Indoor-Outdoor Carpet Acceptance

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Two or three years ago it was mighty controversial to suggest a carpet in the garden, on the front steps or back porch. But after months and years of tramping over hotel and motel entry carpeting, supermarket flooring and sports palaces, the great bulk of the public no longer gets stirred up at the thought.

And although I personally haven't had an excuse to install carpet in the kitchen at home, I have always used a handsome, decorative area rug on the floor in front of the kitchen sink.

SO MY MIND and body are ready, even though my pocketbook isn't.

One of the latest developments in materials that make indoor-outdoor carpet practical is a backing product called Omalon. It's a patented carpet foundation made by Olin Corp., and because of its heat, moisture and mildew resistance it should hold up in most situations in or out of the house.

The manufacturers say it will work efficiently, even below grade level where moisture sometimes erodes fibers.

Olin does not make carpet, but the backing is used on famous brands such as Lee's Topside pattern shown at right. The upper surface of this carpet is a polypropylene loop, sheared to create a nice pile texture. The combination of the surface texture and the Omalon foundation, which is a high-density polymeric foam, give the floor covering that extra bit of cushion.

The springiness, according to Olin staffers, helps you to walk softer and allows you to get longer wear from the product.

THEY ALSO CLAIM that there will be no shrinking, even under moist atmospheric conditions.

When designers use indoor-outdoor carpeting they usually want to visually extend a space beyond the existing structural barrier. That works beautifully when floor-to-ceiling windows exist, or when a semienclosed porch or terrace is closely related to an interior room in the house.

But basement rooms, garage floors, the steps up to an elderly parent's apartment or house, the slippery area around a swimming pool — these are other possible locations for that heavy-duty carpeting.

Children's rooms offer the designing mother a challenge. Mother and son or daughter can carpet a wall as well as the floor and let the youngster tack things to it, nail steps and stairs to it, hang storage cubes, toys, tennis rackets — kick it — you name it. The carpeting will take the beating and absorb a good bit of the noise pollution, too.

YOU CAN "SOFT-SHOE" out of the house into the garden without a misstep, if you are traipsing on Lee's Topside indoor-outdoor floor covering. A new foundation called Omalon makes the carpeting both soft and durable.

Building And Enjoying A Home Greenhouse Needn't Be Costly

You Can Erect A Lean-To Version To Fit Your House Style And Space

Building and enjoying a greenhouse isn't a luxury for the idle rich, but an adventure in living available to home owners, with only slight budget stretching.

A well-built wood greenhouse, properly cared for, will serve a lifetime.

There are several styles and variations, including even-span attached or free-standing, breezeway, and lean-to. Some greenhouses are combined with lath houses or pavilions for outdoor living areas.

A CONNECTED greenhouse often becomes the most popular room in a house. Adjoining a family or living room through sliding glass doors, it can be a favorite spot to enjoy flowers and plants as well as an unusual place for entertaining or just relaxing while soaking up the sun.

A connected greenhouse with even spans of glass on both sides of the center beam offers the best growing conditions, but frequently a lean-to fits better because of limited space or house style.

The lean-to, located on a wall of the house or garage so that south, east and west rays of the sun are not cut off, is built of four-by-four and two-by-four-inch western wood framing lumber — cedar, fir or pine — treated with a preservative because of constant humid conditions.

LOWER PORTIONS of the walls are of tongue and groove wood siding stained or painted to complement the house exterior.

For greenhouse glazing, glass is always good, but plastic panels give light diffusion for plant growth, are easy to work with and hard to break.

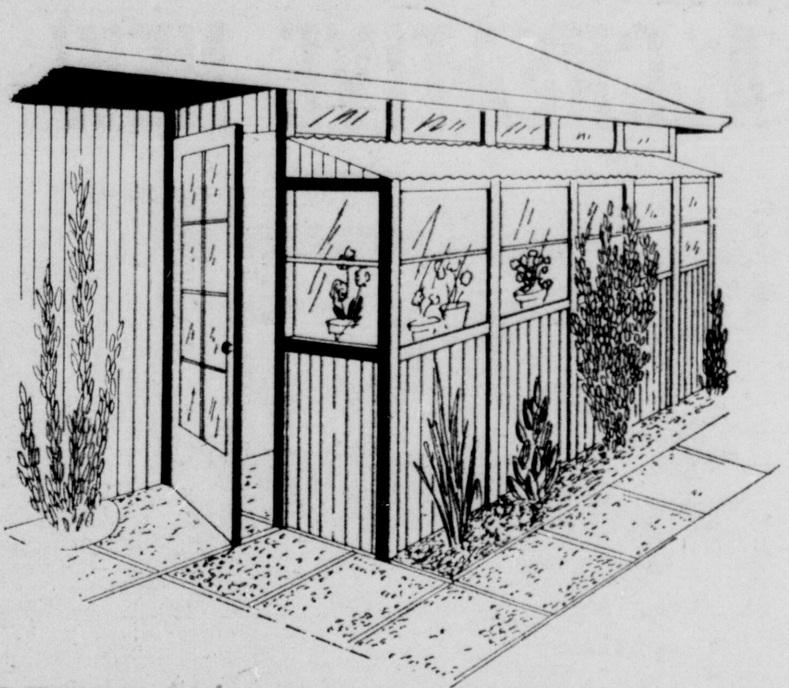
Hinged basement window sash can be used at the ends to assure good ventilation, important along with a heating unit and water supply. An outside door must be provided to move materials in and out.

PLANT BENCHES should be from 24 to 30 inches high, depending on height of plants grown and of the person tending them. They're built of one-by-six-inch western wood boards, with slight spacing for drainage, and two-by-four-inch legs and cross braces.

Benches ordinarily should be limited to three feet wide.

Space under benches can be used for storage of potting-soil blends.

When cabinets or work benches must be added to a greenhouse, they should be placed in the northwest corner to avoid shading any areas from the sun.



THE FRAMING of this lean-to greenhouse is four-by-four and two-by-four western wood treated with preservative because of constant humidity. Siding is tongue and groove cedar or fir. Hinged end windows give ventilation.

PRESIDIO CEREMONY

End Of A Long Career

By PAT ANGLE

When Command Sgt. Maj. Frank A. Carson first tried to enlist in the Army in 1933, he was informed there were no openings at that time and that his name would have to be put on a waiting list.

The personable Fairfax man laughingly recalls that things were a bit different in those predraft days. "The Army was very small, about 100,000 men, and there weren't always vacancies," he said. "For example, I had to wait 14 months before there was a vacancy and I could join."

Yesterday, in a ceremony at the Presidio of San Francisco, the 56-year-old Carson retired from the military after a career that spanned nearly four decades. His brass gleaming and four rows of medals decorating his uniform, Carson rode into the Presidio ceremony astride a horse, and bowed out of the Army with a newly awarded Legion of Merit as numerous high-ranking enlisted men watched. Only one officer took part in the ceremony.

The other day, Carson relaxed in the living room of his attractive home and looked back fondly on the Army. He said he has absolutely no regrets about the decision he made 37 years ago in an Oakland recruiting office.

Carson finds it almost impossible to describe adequately "the personal satisfaction that comes from serving your country."

"You can do a lot of things in life," he said. "You can work for a big corporation or something like that, but serving your country means you really accomplish something in life. It's the greatest feeling in life."

The Army has changed — and for the better — since Frank Carson enlisted at Fort McDowell on Angel Island in 1934 at the age of 19.

The pay these days is definitely better, he said, and so are the uniforms. When Carson joined, his base pay was $17.85 a month, he remembers, and the uniforms offered the ultimate in noncomfort, including standup collars, coarse wool material and elastic britches.

Most important, according to Carson, the Army of 1971 offers more constructive training and a greater variety of programs than the Army of 1934.

"The Army today is a good career for a young man or woman, particularly for the person who doesn't have an opportunity to go to college," he said. "It offers the world's best vocational training and greater opportunities to learn a trade or profession than you can find anywhere else."

Carson, who retired as senior enlisted man of the 13th Artillery Group (Air Defense) at Fort Scott in San Francisco, has been assigned to antiaircraft and air defense units throughout his career. In 1937 as a buck sergeant in Hawaii, he was a gun commander of the first type of antiaircraft artillery weapon used by the Army, a three-inch model 1971.

During World War II, he fought in the Solomon Islands and at Luzon with the 37th Division. He saw action in three campaigns during the Korean War with the 2nd Infantry Division.

Except for two tours in Korea and a year's hitch in Thule, Greenland ("like living on a different planet"), Carson has spent most of his recent years of service in the San Francisco area stationed at Forts Barry, Baker, Cronkhite and Scott.

He is happy to be with his family, which has called Marin home for the past 19 years, and said he found the separations from his wife, two daughters and son the hardest thing about military life.

In the past 30 years, initially as a first sergeant and then as a sergeant major, Carson has had responsibility for about 21,000 men. Now he would like to try something different.

Carson, whose warmth and genial personality belie the stereotyped image of a first sergeant, admitted his secret desire is to work as a chauffeur.

"Driving is very relaxing for me and, besides, as a chauffeur I won't be responsible for any groups of men," he explained with a laugh.

Until he finds the job he seeks, Carson will have plenty to keep him busy. His home at 15 Woodlane Drive is a microcosmic orchard, complete with 72 fruit trees, vegetables and flowers.

He has almost every kind of fruit that will grow in this area, from pomegranates to loquats, and berries of every description, including thornless blackberries.

Not only does Carson graft, plant, prune, spray and cultivate the trees, he also takes charge of their fruits. "I'm the jam maker in this house and I can up a storm when fruit season arrives," he said with a smile.

LAST MEDAL — The Legion of Merit is pinned to the uniform of Command Sgt. Maj. Frank A. Carson of Fairfax, who retired in ceremonies at the Presidio of San Francisco yesterday after a long military career. Brig. Gen. R. W. Fye awards the medal.

Orr To Demand Hearing

Fairfax Police Chief James R. Orr will demand an open hearing on the charges which led to his firing Thursday by City Administrator Robert E. Crowe, Orr's attorney revealed today.

Meanwhile, Mayor Cornelis Van Vliet has called a special meeting of the city council for 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Fairfax Women's Club, apparently to formalize Crowe's action — which was the upshot of three closed council sessions.

The official notice of the special meeting said only that it will be to discuss "personnel." But Crowe said yesterday, "I'm sure everybody knows what it will be about ... to confirm what already has been done."

Crowe predicted the council would convene in open session, go into executive session to discuss developments, and return to open session to take formal action.

The separate hearing, for which no date has been set, will be conducted by the city's five-man board of review, according to Leonard Shaw, Orr's attorney. Board members are Frank L. Lawrence, Freeman Blake, Hugh Gallagher, William T. Benson and Alfred F. Daubenfield.

Meanwhile, Shaw challenged whether the firing was even legal. The city code, he said, provides that dismissal must be by "the appointing authority" — in Orr's case, the council. Shaw reported that the notice of dismissal was signed only by Crowe, and gave no indication of any orders by the council — which reportedly had split 3-2 on whether to dismiss the chief, who had headed the department for nine years.

Shaw, former Marin deputy district attorney, added that on Monday, Chief Orr would exercise his right of response to the charges attached to the notice of dismissal. "Some of them are pretty vague and hard to answer properly," Shaw said.

Shaw said that after Orr's answer is prepared, both it and the city's charges will be made public. He said the list of allegations included all the matters reported previously in the Independent-Journal except the charge that Orr had failed to tell Crowe how to reach him during the chief's recent vaca-

Reagan Hits Court On Welfare 'Bungle'

Charge Of Holding Up Checks To Thousands

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has accused the state Supreme Court of "bungling interference" with California's infant welfare reform law and delaying aid checks to thousands of recipients.

Employing some of the angriest words he has spoken publicly against the judiciary, the governor yesterday denounced state and federal court welfare decisions this week as "hasty and uninformed."

Top administration officials called a news conference to announce that because of the confusion resulting from the rulings, seven counties withheld mailing welfare checks to recipients in the massive Aid to Families with Dependent Children program (AFDC).

State attorneys were dispatched to the Supreme Court to appeal for a clarification to overcome the delay in mailing the checks. The court did not act but indicated it may consider the issue Monday, welfare administrators said.

The administration identified the counties which withheld sending checks as Amador, Colusa, Kings, Plumas, Stanislaus, Yolo and parts of populous Los Angeles.

But in a move aimed at getting checks in the mail, state Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson late last night adopted an "emergency regulation" designed to give local directors the authority to issue AFDC payments.

The regulation, rushed to the secretary of state's office shortly before midnight, basically would allow the counties to make adjustments in a recipient's Oct. 15 check for any overpayment or underpayment in his Oct. 1 check.

Assistant Secretary of State H.P. Sullivan was summoned at his home and arrangements were made so the secretary of state's capitol office could be unlocked and the emergency document officially recorded. Telegrams were dispatched to county welfare directors informing them of the action.

"Further bungling interference by the courts regardless of intentions, or honest errors, regardless of how soon they are corrected, will simply prolong the discomfort of those they purport to be protecting and will add unnecessary costs to the program," Reagan declared.

The governor's bitter statement was distributed by his office in the wake of a state Supreme Court action Thursday intended to clarify an earlier decision which blocked implementation of a key provision of the new 1971 Welfare Reform Act.

The act, approved after inten-

Grand Juror Resigns In Protest Over Indictments In Breakout

By C.P. McCARTHY

A 27-year-old member of the Marin County Grand Jury resigned yesterday after he and two other jurors protested indictments returned in connection with the Aug. 21 breakout attempt at San Quentin Prison.

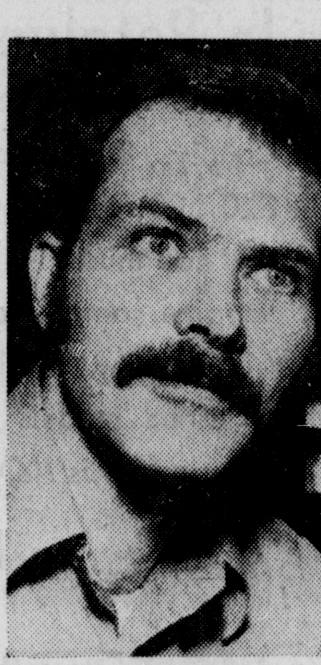
The juror, Gerald A. Hawes of San Rafael, said in letters of resignation to Samuel W. Gardiner, presiding judge of Marin Superior Court, and Milen C. Dempster, panel foreman:

"The incidents of the last few days have reinforced me in my decision to offer my resignation. Especially is that process of indictment vulnerable when the members of a jury who are ultimately responsible for the indictment are willing to surrender their independence to the public prosecutor."

Earlier yesterday the jury returned seven indictments sought by Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales in connection with the violence at San Quentin which left three guards and three inmates dead.

Hawes was one of three jurors who left the grand jury session in disgust following the jury's vote on the indictments. (It was incorrectly reported yesterday that Jurors Richard W. Beban of San Rafael, James D. Kilty of San Anselmo and Harold K. Graves Jr. of Mill Valley had left the session. Beban and Kilty did, but it was Hawes who accompanied them, not Graves.)

Hawes, a research analyst with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco, added in his letters of resignation that he had "serious doubts about the grand jury" and questioned "inequities and injustices perpetrated through the secret indicting process."



GERALD HAWES
Jurors 'surrender'

He charged that "the unwillingness of this jury to seek impartial legal advice during indicting sessions makes impossible a fair and just procedure which can mete out genuine justice."

Continued participation, he said, would be "tantamount to approval of the grand jury system and the judgments of this particular jury, some judgments and decisions which I consider to be not only fallacious but immoral."

Meanwhile, Beban said today he also was considering resigning. "Resignation is one of many tactics in the battle we're fighting," he said.

Beban said he was "very sorry" to hear of Hawes's action. "I think Mr. Hawes has a definite, deep commitment to justice and came to his decision as a matter of conscience," he said.

Jury foreman Dempster also expressed regret at the news. "My own personal comment is that if this is true, I regret it very deeply and feel that all of the members of the jury will regret it," he said.

"I consider Mr. Hawes a dedicated and intelligent man," Dempster said.

Judge Gardiner rejected Hawes's criticisms of the grand jury, saying "this whole treatment of the grand jury process is being overemphasized."

"The grand jury doesn't try anyone. It charges them ... some people seem to assume this is a trial, but it is not.

Bales, the district attorney, could not be reached for comment.

Indicted yesterday on murder and conspiracy charges were attorney Stephen Bingham, missing since Aug. 21, and six inmates.

Bingham is accused of smuggling a gun to Soledad Brother George Jackson, launching the escape attempt. Jackson was among those killed, prison officials saying he was shot from a prison tower as he ran toward a wall.

'SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE'

Mill Valley Art Festival Opens Annual Two-Day Run

The Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival opened its annual show today in Old Mill Park with "something for everyone," Independent-Journal art critic Ada Garfinkle reported.

The exhibit of fine arts painting and sculpture, photographs, and craft works will be open until 7 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. tomorrow.

Art-in-action displays for children as well as adults were scattered among the trees, along with the works of artists and craftsmen from places as far away as Santa Barbara.

The festival committee's prescreening of exhibitors' entry applications, though not their works, brought out "talents from very good to mediocre — and even some atrocious," Mrs. Garfinkle reported.

She noted as "remarkably good" the white-on-white high key photography by Santa Barbara Art Museum cameraman Wayne McCall, the close-up portraits by Mill Valley photographer Jonathan Perry of Mill Valley, the colored prints of wildflowers and mushrooms by Dolores Osterlund of San Francisco and the leather goods of Dan Martin and the bead-and-brass jewelry of Dorn Meisner.

Numerous husband and wife teams submitted entries, including the driftwood and ceramic hangings of Daniel O'Connor, accompanied by his wife Sandra's stoneware bird

Newton Attends Peking Reception

HONG KONG (UPI) — Huey Newton, a co-founder of the Black Panther Party, attended a national day reception in Peking yesterday, according to a New China News Agency (NCNA) report today.

Newton

Premier Chou En-lai also attended the reception, given by the cultural group under the state council and the People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries.

Newton was accompanied by two other Black Panther members, Miss Elaine Brown, Panther information officer, and Robert Bay, Newton's bodyguard.

The trio slipped quietly into China early this week after a stop in Hong Kong.

Newton is scheduled to go on trial Oct. 12 in Oakland, Calif., in connection with the slaying of an Oakland policeman. He is charged with voluntary manslaughter.

Stabbed To Death

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An administration official was stabbed to death yesterday in the new Executive Office Building near the White House. Police reported no suspects yet.

The victim, identified as Ritchie H. Reed, 30, of suburban Cheverly, Md., was found about 4 p.m. on the floor of a washroom in the building where he worked as director of economic resources for the Commission on Population Growth and the American Future.

Harassment

MOSCOW (UPI) — Britons in Moscow today reported incidents of harassment by the Soviets, including one in which a police officer prevented women from entering a nursery school to take their children home.

At the same time, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda published an article accusing Britain of carrying out extensive espionage activities against Soviet Union.

Closes Station

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (UPI)—The United States officially ended its military presence in Trinidad and Tobago yesterday by turning over its 932-acre missile tracking station to the local government.

Attending the ceremonies at the Chaguarmas station were Prime Minister Dr. Eric Williams and U. S. Ambassador J. Fife Symington. The major portion of the 12,000 acres which once comprised a U.S. naval base was handed over to Trinidad and Tobago in 1967.

Showdown Monday

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan and Democratic legislators, still deeply split over reform of taxation, plan to return to the bargaining table Monday for what shapes up as a showdown conference.

"Both sides have positions that are unacceptable to the other," Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti reported. "I suspect that Monday we'll know one way or the other if we're going to have tax reform."

No Show Capp

LONDON (UPI) — Cartoonist Al Capp said today he failed to appear in a Boston Municipal Court for a rendition hearing on morals charges because his lawyers told him it was "completely all right" to be absent.

Capp told United Press International he was in London for three days "because I have some business here." He said he did not know a warrant for his arrest had been issued Friday in Boston for his failure to appear.

"Oh good God," he said, "I conferred with all my lawyers and they said it was completely all right ... completely all right for me to leave."

Paintings Recovered

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Police announced today they had recovered intact the nine paintings worth more than $1 million stolen from a church on Wednesday.

A police spokesman said the paintings were found in a car during a routine search in connection with another crime. The driver of the car was arrested along with a second man.

The nine paintings stolen from St. Johns Church at Mechlin included a "Christ on the Cross" by Flemish Master Peter Paul Rubens.

Dumps Counter

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Senate has given up on an electronic vote-counting scoreboard which has cost roughly $168,000 since it was installed in 1967. It seldom has been used.

Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges said Friday the large board which hangs on the Senate wall will be removed by the company which leases it to the state.

The machine was installed before the 1967 legislative session at a cost of $118,000 and has cost $10,000 in maintenance each legislative session since.

'Flour' Sentence

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI)—U.S. District Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin Friday sentenced to four years in prison a man who arranged for a federal narcotics agent to buy 12 ounces of flour for $9,000. The undercover agent thought he had bought heroin.

Medicare Hospital Costs Up

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Starting Jan. 1, 20.5 million Medicare patients will have to pay a larger share of their hospital bills.

Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of the department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), ordered the step yesterday. He blamed rising hospital costs, which he said climbed 13 per cent in the Medicare program in 1970.

Starting next year, Medicare patients will have to pay the first $68 of their hospital bills — an increase of $8.

The increase was denounced by William R. Hutton, executive director of the 3 million member National Council of Senior Citizens, who described it as a "cruel blow to poor elderly people living on Social Security and welfare."

FREEZE ASKED

"If the President was really a compassionate man and he cared about old people, he would freeze the Medicare (hospital) deductibles and introduce legislation to remove them altogether," Hutton said.

Richardson said his order emphasized "the urgency of action to put a brake on hospital costs escalation."

The secretary said steps to curb rising hospital costs would be part of Phase II of President Nixon's economic stabilization program, which will follow the current 90-day wage-price freeze.

Richardson noted that about one-fifth of the more than 20 million persons enrolled in the Medicare program were hospitalized during the past year, at a cost of $800 for an average 12 days of treatment.

Patients in the program pay the average cost of the first day of hospital care —now $60.

UNTIL 61ST DAY

The rest is paid by the government until the 61st day. At that point, Medicare patients begin paying $15 a day, and this continues through the 90th day. The $15 fee will be increased to $17 Jan. 1.

Richardson said post-hospital treatment in nursing homes will increase $1 a day next year from the 21st through the 100th day, rising from $7.50 to $8.50 a day.

The law requires HEW to set Medicare hospital rates based on annual changes in hospital costs.

A spokesman said the Cost of Living Council, which administers the current wage-price freeze, was informed of the new Medicare charges but "not for their approval."

The Medicare program also provides optional doctor bill insurance for 19.7 million persons. The doctor bill premium required rose in July from $5.30 to $5.60 a month.

McCarthyism Charge At Nader

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., accused Ralph Nader today of using the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's tactics in seeking establishment of a consumer protection "tyrant" within government.

Holifield, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, responded in an interview, to Nader's charges that a consumer protection bill approved by the committee under Holifield's sponsorship was gutted of its most important provisions.

The California Democrat accused Nader aides of prompting a picket line around Holifield's Pico Rivera, Calif., office. He said Nader, guided by "amateurish idealism," lobbied him and other committee members endlessly, then seized headlines by criticizing any who disagreed with his proposals to strengthen the bill.

Holifield said a lobbying bill recently approved by the House Ethics Committee, on which Holifield serves, would require Nader and his aides to register as lobbyists. They now are exempt because they are not paid to lobby.

While the committee considered the bill in closed session Monday, Holifield said, an aide to Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., a Nader ally, shuttled in and out, keeping Nader posted and carrying the consumer advocate's instructions in to Rosenthal.

"I was personally lobbied by this man —both through phone calls at home and office visits —more than I've been lobbied by anyone on anything for 10 years," Holifield said.

"Nader's method of opposition is to continuously make derogatory charges against any person of prominance that comes within his rifle sights," Holifield said. "A new charge every day gives him a new headline.

"This is a time proven method of obtaining publicity, practiced at one time by Sen. Joe McCarthy ... Mr. Nader's cry of 'wolf, wolf' against anyone who disagrees with him will soon cease to cause alarm or attention."

Holifield defended his bill, which would create an independent federal agency to represent consumer interests in proceedings before other government agencies such as the Food and Drug Administration and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Amendments backed by Nader and Rosenthal would have empowered the agency to subpoena material and to participate in informal as well as formal proceedings of other government departments. The amendments narrowly were defeated by the committee and will be offered on the House floor.

"It's a good bill," Holifield said of the committee's version. "... It was not written by Mr. Nader or any other special interest advocate.

"Nader and Rosenthal wanted a super agency which could interfere with the procedures of other agencies and dominate them. They wanted a tyrant."

Asked to comment on Holifield's charges, Nader said "all of Proctor & Gamble's detergents wouldn't wash Chairman Holifield's mouth out."

"He can deal it out but he can't take it," Nader said. "He's been playing the White House's game, betraying his own party and running to Republicans on the committee for instructions from the White House.

"As a supposed big labor advocate, why does he worry about a picket line that tells the public what he's doing behind closed doors?"

Nader said his "lobbying" Holifield consisted of two visits to the congressman's office and one telephone call to his home.

"On lobbying, why doesn't Chairman Holifield tell the American people how much General Electric and Westinghouse have wined and dined him to curry his favor on atomic energy projects?" Nader said. Holifield formerly was chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee, and still is a member.

Deception Charge In Angela Fund

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A local church group invesitgating a $10,000 gift by a committee of the United Presbyterian Church to the Angela Davis Defense Fund asserts there was a deception in the way the proposal was presented for approval.

An official committee of the Presbytery of San Francisco has been investigating the controversial grant for the last three months and it took issue with the way the grant was reported by the Council on Church and Race.

The committee said yesterday the Council told the 103rd General Assembly the gift was to the "Marin County Black Defense Fund" when it was actually to the Angela Davis Defense Fund.

"We can only conclude that the Council on Church and Race was derelict in its duty in improperly and incorrectly reporting the $10,000 grant in such a way as to create the impression of apparent deception," the committee said.

The report was issued and the matter is now considered closed said the Rev. O'Linn Maguire.

After the grant to the jailed Miss Davis received publicity, thousands of church members protested and many quit the church. Later a group of black Presbyterian ministers reimbursed the church for the sum sent the Davis fund.

Push For Married Priests Is Gaining

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Roman Catholic Church hierarchy today appeared ready to accept a limited number of married priests, but only under terms already suggested by Pope Paul VI.

A key signal came yesterday when Cardinal John F. Dearden of Detroit said American bishops agreed the question was worth consideration.

Archbishop Maxim Hermaniuk of the Ukrainian rite in Winnipeg, Canada, said both celibate and married priests were authentic priests. An African cardinal warned that celibacy is more of an issue in African countries than anyone suspects.

But Cardinal Joseph Hoffner of Cologne, West Germany, who made the keynote speech yesterday, said no further examination of the celibacy issue was necessary for the time being.

Debate continues today.

The subject of celibacy emerged during full-scale dialogue on the priesthood yesterday with a dozen speakers at the third and largest Synod of Bishops alluding to it or mentioning it outright.

Thieu In Call For Vote Of Confidence

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu called on South Vietnamese voters today for an overwhelming vote of confidence in tomorrow's election in which he is the only candidate, to show the Communists "they will fail if they persist in their aggressions."

Thieu, in a 15-minute speech today delivered as head of state and not a candidate, said:

"Once again I am appealing to you as compatriots to go to the polls calmly Sunday and do your duty as citizens in a free and democratic way.

"We must make our national prestige bright to the world. We must make the Communists and the destructors fail by making the election of the nation successful. If we don't show that we are able to make the Communists fail in the aggressions, then we won't be able to win."

Thieu said, in the remarks taped earlier in the day, that the Communists had intensified their activities in efforts to curb voter turnout "but you have shown yourselves very courageous and deserving."

Actually, the Vietnamese military reported about 15 Communist-initiated incidents directly related to the election, about the normal level and considerably fewer than the 51 reported the day before the Aug. 29 National Assembly elections.

Thieu spent about an hour at the television station taping his speech.

He emerged from the station, smiling confidently and waving at newsmen. "See you tomorrow," he called as he left in his limousine.

In Saigon, three American Roman Catholic priests and a Jewish sociologist from Ohio chained themselves to the U. S. embassy gate to protest the war.

The election campaign ended officially at noon (midnight yesterday EDT) but demonstrations were reported in Hue and Da Nang where 30 high school students tried to barricade the main north-south highway through the city.

They carried red and blue banners that said "Against the Oct. 3 Election."

A dozen college students and a professor were arrested in Hue and six students were beaten during three separate demonstrations in the northern city.

In Saigon, security was tight with many restaurants and bars shut down. GIs were kept out of the capital.

In the war zone, U.S. and South Vietnamese army helicopters today airlifted 700 South Vietnamese paratroopers to the Cambodian border in a new allied counter-offensive to crush the eight-day-old North Vietnamese campaign northeast of Saigon.

South of Saigon, military sources said 18 South Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 64 more wounded when Communist guerrillas attacked an army outpost in the Mekong Delta before dawn today. They said 16 guerrillas were reported slain in the fighting near Kien Thien, 110 miles southwest of Saigon. The defenders called in U.S. and South Vietnamese air and artillery support during the clash.

In Long Khanh province, 40 miles east of Saigon,, elements of the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division and the South Vietnamese 18th Infantry Division reported boxing in a guerrilla force of undetermined size. The Americans reported killing two guerrillas while losing one of their own. The South Vietnamese claimed they killed nine of the Communists while suffering "light" casualties.

No Break In Strike At Ports

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

For the first time in American history, most of the docks on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts have been closed at the same time by striking longshoremen.

Coal miners from seven states were also off the job today bringing the total of striking miners and longshoremen to more than 140,000.

The strike yesterday by the 45,000 East Coast dockworkers represented by the International Longshoremen's Association appeared to be less serious than the three-month walkout by 15,000 Pacific Coast longshoremen.

A spokesman for the Southern Pacific Railroad said an embargo had been placed effective Friday on West Coast railroads carrying freight to East and Gulf Coast ports. A similar embargo may be extended nationwide, the Association of American Railroade said in Washington.

The U.S. Postal Service already has clamped an embargo on international bulk shipments.

President Nixon watched dock strike developments from the Key Biscayne, Fla., but gave no indication that he would invoke the Taft-Hartley act which could force the dockmen back on the job for another 80 days.

"We do not feel there is a national emergency in existence," White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said. "We do not intend to take action to interfere with negotiations at the present time."

The Pacific strike has left about 190 ships backed up along the West Coast.

Gulf Coast dockworkers — who voted earlier in the week to stay on the job —closed major ports in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., with their walkout. Workers in the Beaumont-Port Arthur, Tex., area also voted Friday to strike, but stayed on the job. Dockworkers also remained on the job at Houston, Galveson and Corpus Christi, Tex.

Bargaining continued between West Coast longshoremen and management, but East Coast shippers and dockworkers recessed their talks until Monday.

Among Marin County works in the show, Mrs. Garfinkle noted wood sculptures by Rick Knoll of San Rafael, unusual musical instruments and chess sets by Mark Hanchett of Mill Valley, and embossed stoneware by Geanne Ellner of Mill Valley.

The festival jury spent the opening hours of the show selecting the one piece that will be honored with the annual purchase award. The winner will be displayed in the Genesis Gallery in Mill Valley.

sive negotiations between Reagan and the legislature last summer, took effect Friday, but the court stayed a section which would raise grants to about 300,000 AFDC families and reduce grants for another 150,000.

Reagan asserted, "Due to hasty and uninformed court decisions in the last few days (including a feeble eleventh hour attempt by the state Supreme Court to correct its own error), the courts have succeeded in delaying welfare payments to thousands of needy recipients, preventing payments of deserved increases to thousands of others, and thoroughly confusing those responsible for administering the system at the state and county level as well as the public in general."

Acting on an action filed by the militant California Welfare Rights Organization, the state court stayed the important provision until it could study the issue further. The CWRO argued the section violated federal law.

The court on Thursday amended the action after questions arose over whether the ruling cast a doubt on the state's authority to make any welfare payments. The court ordered that temporarily at least AFDC families would receive the same level of support they had been receiving before yesterday.

ORR

tion. Crowe also said this was not among the complaints.

There are "lots of vague charges" about departmental operations and record keeping, Shaw said.

Although the specific charges against Orr have not been made public, they are known to include a claim that the chief failed to report alcohol purchase by juveniles from a Fairfax store to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and that Orr pulled a gun on a police cadet in the office two years ago.

City Atty. Wallace S. Myers, who will represent the city at any hearings, declined comment on the case.

Leap From Span Is Investigated

Sketchy reports that a man leaped off the Golden Gate Bridge shortly before dawn today were being investigated by the California Highway Patrol.

The patrol said a motorist told bridge toll-takers that he had seen a man leave a car on the span and leap over the railing. The witness's identity was not obtained by the toll attendant.

A car found on the bridge was found to have license plates that did not match its registration, the patrol said.

More Violence

BELFAST, Northern reland (UPI)—British troops wounded a sniper in battles with gunmen in Belfast during the night. The fighting capped a day of violence in the city which cost the life of another British soldier.

There were no reports of survivors among the 55 passengers and eight crewmen on the flight from London to Salzburg, Austria.

Spokesmen at BEA headquarters in London said most of those aboard the ill-fated plane were British. They said many were believed to be BEA airline personnel, including four pilots carrying out what was called a "routine checking flight."

In Salzburg, an airport spokesman said about 10 of the passengers were Austrians according to friends and relatives waiting for the plane.

The British-built Vanguard turboprop went down near the road between Deinze and Tielt in northwest Belgium, an airport official said. Deinze is about six miles from here.

12 Safety Tips For Bike Riders

With increased bicycle traffic accompanying the opening of the fall semester in local schools, the Independent-Journal offers this set of rules for safe riding:

1. Observe all traffic regulations — red and green lights, one-way streets, stop signs.
2. Keep to the right side and ride in a straight line. Always ride in single file.
3. Have white light on front and danger signal on rear for night riding.
4. Have satisfactory signaling device to warn of approach.
5. Give pedestrians the right of way. Avoid sidewalks — otherwise use extra care.
6. Look out for cars pulling out into traffic. Keep sharp lookout for sudden opening of auto doors.
7. Never hitch onto other vehicles, stunt or race in traffic.
8. Never carry other riders — carry no packages that obstruct vision or prevent proper control of cycle.
9. Be sure brakes are operating efficiently and keep the bicycle in perfect running condition.
10. Slow down at all street intersections and look to right and left before crossing.
11. Always use proper hand signals for turning and stopping.
12. Don't weave in or out of traffic or swerve from side to side.

Business Is Brisk On Passports

The San Rafael Post Office has been doing a brisk business in passports since it began providing the service late in May.

About 1,500 passport applications have been processed through the office, according to Angelo Bon.

Bon and Donald Howe have been designated by the Postmaster General to perform the passport service in Marin. In May, Congress passed legislation extending passport availability through the postal system. Before then, applicants had to file through county clerks' offices, federal courts, or State Department offices.

Bon said the San Rafael office also has processed many applications for passport amendments, such as changes in married name or addition of spouse or children to an individual's passport.

Most applicants receive their completed passports from the State Department within 5 to 10 days of applying at the Post Office, Bon said. Failure to bring proof of citizenship such as a birth certificate delays processing of some applications, he explained.

Similar passport service is available at the Santa Rosa Post Office, Bon said.

Ross Council Sets A Special Meeting

The Ross Town Council will meet in special session Monday at 8 p.m. at town hall to consider appropriating funds for replacement of a drainage line from the Ross Common to Corte Madera Creek.

About $3,500 is needed to replace the old line, which apparently has collapsed.

Vanishing Trolley

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—The last of Copenhagen's trolley lines, No. 5 going through the inner city, will give way to a bus line by the autumn of 1972.

MARINITE DEFEATED FOR DEMO POST

I-J Special Report

ONTARIO — Blanche Goldstein of Sacramento has been elected state women's chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, defeating Kathleen Hill of Mill Valley in a 69-28 vote by the executive committee.

Mrs. Goldstein succeeds Eleanor Fowle of Los Altos Hills, sister of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. She resigned last month for personal reasons.

Mrs. Goldstein was Northern California women's chairman for Cranston's 1968 campaign and last year's campaign by Sen. John V. Tunney.

Design For Bridge Back To Architect

An architect's design for a new Lagunitas Road bridge over Corte Madera Creek in Ross has been sent back to the drawing board by the Ross Town Council Flood Control Advisory board.

According to Town Engineer Roy Hoffman, the advisory board, meeting Thursday night, requested alternate designs to that submitted by architect Andrew J. Ring III of San Rafael.

Two "schools of thought" emerged Thursday night, he said, with some advisory board members urging that the bridge be designed to block the view of the future concrete creek channel and others supporting a more open design.

Ring's plan features viewing platforms on the sides and extensive landscaping.

The $100,000 bridge, financed by the State Department of Water Resources, will be constructed next year when flood control channel continues upstream.

While construction of the bridge will get outside financing, any amenities to it such as landscaping will be financed by local funds and are subject to local review.

The advisory board adjourned to Oct. 11 at 8 p.m. at town hall when it again will consider bridge design.

Planners Refuse Fairfax City Hall Remodeling Plan

The Fairfax Planning Commission has declined to endorse plans for city hall remodeling, saying details were incomplete.

Commission secretary Ernestine Healy said the group objected that the plans showed only the proposed addition to city hall, and not what would happen to the present firehouse, parking facilities and to the park area in the rear.

The commission, meeting Thursday night, said it would consider the plans when a complete development proposal is submitted, Mrs. Healy said.

The city council has budgeted $35,000 for the renovation work, which will include an 800-square-foot addition spanning a creek in the rear of the present structure.

Go-Ahead Given In LSD Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—California's Court of Appeal ruled Thursday that Alameda County can proceed with narcotics cases against three persons, including Augustus Owsley Stanley III, onetime LSD "king."

The court rejected the contention by Stanley's attorney that there was no probable cause for action.

Stanley, who narcotics agents say made $1 million manufacturing and selling LSD when that was still legal, was arrested with two others in 1970 and charged with possessing marijuana and other drugs.

Saigon Elections Have Distinct Flavor That Is All Vietnamese

SAIGON (UPI) — Like so many other developments in Vietnam over the past 10 years, nationwide elections in the midst of civil war are an American idea.

As with so many other American ideas, the Vietnamese have accepted it, and then gone ahead and done it their own way. They are doing it their own way tomorrow; when President Nguyen Van Thieu is running for a second four-year term as the only candidate.

South Vietnam also held presidential elections during the days of the late President Ngo Dinh Diem, killed in a coup in 1963. Those were perfunctory, rubber-stamp affairs.

In 1966, U.S. President Lyndon Baines Johnson met Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, then the Premier of South Vietnam, in Honolulu and urged him to call nationwide elections.

Ky somewhat bemusedly agreed, and the wheels began to roll. South Vietnam elected a constituent assembly in 1966, and the assembly drew up a presidential-style constitution, which went into effect April 1, 1967.

Local elections were held April 2 and June 12, presidential and senatorial elections Sept. 3, and lower house elections in October.

The two most active men in the current election campaign—Thieu, who is running a one-man race, and Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, who is vigorously denouncing him for dting so — were then on the same ticket.

Even then, however, there was no love lost between them. At the time the party slates were drawn up, Ky, having run the country for the past two years as chief of the military junta, confidently expected to be nominated for president.

The junta generals, mindful of Ky's growing power, and perhaps hoping to secure a more pliant front man, insisted on Thieu for president and Ky for vice president, on the military ticket.

But no matter. Ky was far more colorful and dynamic than Thieu, and during the preceding two years he had put his friends in positions of power around the country.

After the election, Thieu would be the front man, but Ky would continue to run the country. Or so the theory went, and a good many foreign political analysts agreed with it.

It did not turn out that way. Within a year, Thieu had maneuvered most of Ky's allies out of office. Eventually the two men split publicly.

Then, as now, the third man in the presidential equation, Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh, was squeezed out. Minh had led the coup that overthrew Diem and was perhaps the most popular politician in the country.

In this year's election, both Minh and Jy bowed out, accusing Thieu of rigging the result in advance. In 1967, the junta arranged for Minh who was in exiled in Thailand anyway, to be ruled off the ballot on grounds that his running mate had once been a French citizen.

In 1967 the Viet Cong broadcast orders to the citizenry to have nothing to do with the elections, but at that time allied officials conceded that five million of South Vietnam's 17 million people were under Communist control and would be unable to vote at all.

Of the six million eligible voters in areas considered outside Communist control, fully 83 per cent ignored Viet Cong orders and cast ballots.

They did so at some cost. In a series of grenade and machine-gun attacks on election officials and polling places, 190 people were killed in the final week of the election.

This year only about 100,000 South Vietnamese are still considered as living in Communist-controlled villages, but the Communists have given no specific voting instructions. And so far in the election period only eight deaths have been directly attributable to campaign and polling activities.

However, there is still a war on. In 1967 American battle deaths were running at 180 a week; the South Vietnamese figure was well over that. Today, U.S. combat deaths are only a tenth the 1967 rate but close to 300 south Vietnamese a week are being killed in action.

In 1967 there was more election activity. That year, there were no fewer than 11 candidates for president.

This year, three men entered the lists. Ky was ruled off the ballot on a technicality, Minh quit in disgust, Ky was allowed back on the ballot but refused to go along, and then there was one: President Thieu.

Four years ago, with the civilian vote split 10 ways, the Thieu-Ky ticket was expected to win and so it did, gaining not quite 35 per cent of the vote.

This was twice as much as the second-place candidate. Even so, the fact that he is a minority president always has bothered Thieu and may well be a factor in his decision to go ahead with a one-man race this time.

Then, as now, the opposition accused the incumbents of fraud. During the 1967 campaign the Vietnamese government was obliged to furnish the candidates with transportation. They got it. They said government helicopters were setting them down at remote landing pads far from any voters.

After the election, six of the 10 defeated candidates organized a "front for the struggle for democracy" to get the results nullified.

They put together enough evidence to recommend canceling the results. But the committee's findings were overruled by the full assembly.

How State's Washington Contingent Voted Recently

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — Detention camps were abolished, the military draft law was extended, and federal power to move against job discrimination was strengthened as a result of key showdown votes in the House and Senate in recent weeks.

Following are descriptions of these and other major votes, the final results and breakdowns by party, and how Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, and Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, and California's two Democratic Senators, Alan Cranston and John V. Tunney, voted:

Detention Camps — HR234, Sept. 14, an amendment in the House to prohibit detention of persons on the basis of race but not to restrict the President's wartime powers of detention. This amendment was an attempt to forestall total repeal of the 1950 Emergency Detention Act. Defeated 124-272. Democrats 62-171, Republicans 62-101. Mailliard — no; Clausen — yes. (Mailliard and Clausen then voted for repeal on final passage, which was approved 356-49.)

Equal Employment — HR 1746, Sept. 16, an amendment in the House to authorize the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to go to court on behalf of aggrieved persons who believe they were victims of job discrimination. This amendment replaced a proposal for tougher enforcement powers that would have permitted the EEOC to issue "cease and desist" orders against employers and unions. Those voting "no" favored tougher powers. Passed 200-194. Democrats 69-164, Republicans 131-30. Mailliard — yes; Clausen — yes. (Both then voted for the EEOC bill on final passage.)

Legal Services — S 2007, Sept. 9, a substitute amendment to the bill in the Senate extending OEO programs for two more years. The amendment attempted to weaken the bill by stipulating that the proposed legal services corporation could not take criminal cases and all directors would be appointed by the President. Defeated 28-34. Democrats 12-26, Republicans 16-8. Cranston — no; Tunney — no.

Environment — HR 8687 (military procurement), Sept. 13, an amendment in the Senate to bar expenditure of funds authorized for three aircraft production programs until final studies are completed on the impact of the programs on the environment. Defeated 21-55. Democrats 16-23, Republicans 5-32. Cranston — yes; Tunney — absent but announced in favor.

Draft Extension — HR 6531, Sept. 17, a motion in the Senate to table the House-Senate conference report which would extend the draft two years and raise military pay, and which contained a watered-down version of Mansfield's Vietnam withdrawal amendment. Tabling would have delayed final action on the draft extension law several more months. Defeated 36-47. Democrats 25-18. Republicans 11-29. Cranston — yes; Tunney — yes.

Draft Extension — HR 6531, Sept. 21, a cloture vote in the Senate to end the filibuster delaying a vote on passage of the draft bill. Cloture was agreed to by a vote of 61-30. Democrats 23-26, Republicans 38-4. Cranston — no; Tunney — no. (Both Senators then voted against passage of the conference report, which passed 55-30. Democrats 23-23, Republicans 32-7.)

Cart Lifts Used To Haul The Booty

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)— Thieves who broke into a warehouse stacked with goods because of the West coast dock strike stole an estimated $75,000 to $100,000 worth of merchandise using two of the company's for lifts to cart the booty out of the building.

The thieves took Christmas toys, radios and objects as large as motorcycles.

OUT OF the bush comes the safari suit, from Dimitri of Italy, a New York custom tailor. Dimitri turned the suit into a superbly tailored outfit for casual wear in town and country, by men or women. It's beige wool gabardine with saddlebag pockets and a signature belted waist. Designer Piero Dimitri is considered a fashion leader in New York for his handmade "ready-to-wear" styles.

BACK TO CLASSICS

A Bit Of 1946 In Dimitri Styles

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dimitri of Italy, the only New York custom tailor to follow the Italian tradition of putting on his own big fashion show each year, returned to classic shapes and fabrics for his big extravaganza at the Plaza Hotel this year.

They happen to be the classic shapes and fabrics of 1946 and may remind you of a Ralph Bellamy movie but Piero Dimitri sets fashions and you may be sure that soon enough everyone else will follow his lead. Oddly, though advanced, they are not too far away from current fashions.

Dimitri has estimated these shows cost him as much as $30,000 to produce and says he puts them on simply because "I love fashion." This time he used the show to introduce his Fall-into-Spring collection of what he calls ready-to-wear clothing.

They aren't exactly what other people call ready-to-wear since his are made by hand in his New York workrooms and a suit, for example, will run from $285 to $325. Topcoats are also mildly expensive, running $285 to $300. The custom stuff is considerably more.

DIMITRI IS the master of shape and the waists of his suits and coats have a nipped in look. Other features of the suits are roped shoulders, cuffs on the pants which are slightly pleated, and extremely wide lapels.

Topcoats and overcoats run two inches below the knee and are fitted. There are lots of wraps around belts. Dimitri also has brought back the raglan sleeve and has given such coats shape for the first time by using a high armhole and a fitted body.

Since he is a custom tailor and makes lots of suits for women, many of the things in his show were shown for both men and women. One of these was a classic safari suit with two big patch pockets on the jacket, and pants which tuck into calfhigh military boots. One was in tan gabardine with a wide leather belt and a big rectangular buckle.

"And this is going to be fantastic," he said, showing a wool satin jacket and jeans in the style made famous years ago by Levi Strauss. They are to wear to cocktail parties by couples who do not want to wear denim. The jacket is short, like an Eisenhower jacket, or like a denim cowboy jacket if you prefer.

Dimitri shows fur for the first time this year and like the cloth garments the coats were fitted. One was in a beige nutria with a half belt in the back and a long center vent. Coats with similar shape came in soft black leather and heavy sueded cowhide.

SOME OF the outstanding things made for the show included:

—A country suit in a caramel and grape houndstooth pattern with a big grape color windowpane overplaid, two button, single breasted and, of course, shaped. The pants hung straight and were made with a wide waistband.

—Blazers were made with pleated backs, an appliqued half belt in the back and shown with pleated, cuffless trousers. The blazers in leather and suede were tailored like the cloth coats. One in antelope was soft as a kidskin glove and came in navy blue with gold buttons.

—A suit for the beach or the country was shown in a combination of fiocco and cotton in a soft gray-blue basket weave with tiny flecks of white like snowflakes. It was made with a wrap around belt and no buttons and can be worn with or without a shirt. The same design was in Irish linen for the summer.

—Raincoats had a military look. One was in cotton, like a heavy denim, made with two bellow pockets, a huge military collar, epaulets and a wrap around belt. Another was in wool denim, new this year. A coat in black nappa leather was very shaped in his "graphic" design which features two vertical welded seams fore and aft to emphasize the slimness.

—A spring coat was in Irish tweed woven in a tiny herringbone pattern in pale gray with huge windowpane overchecks — white horizontal stripes and vertical black stripes. This was a four button double breasted with a wraparound belt.

—Colors were spectacular and ran from grape through plum, raspberry and purple. A grape colored coat was in his graphic design with a zippered front. Another bright color combination was a three piece suit in a soft combination of navy, dusty rose and gray but with cardinal red horizontal stripes and electric blue vertical stripes forming a big overplaid.

Woman's Career Is Looking Up

STUTTGART, Ark. (UPI) — Sharon Boswell, 24, decided one way to move upward in her job was to start climbing for real. So, now she shinnies up telephone poles doing line repairs.

Miss Roswell is the first female lineman with General Telephone Co. of the Southwest and her employers think also may be the first one to fill this job category in any telephone company.

Miss Roswell, who'd worked as an operator and clerk for General Telephone for three years, said she had decided "that eventually I'd like to specialize in repairing switchboards and installing telephones for businesses."

"THE LINEMAN'S job, which pays more than my clerical one, looked like it would take me a big step toward my goal," she said.

As a member of the line crew of the Stuttgart area, Miss Roswell does the rugged work of climbing poles, lifting heavy objects, and operatin construction equipment in all kinds of weather.

She spends a substantial portion of her time on the telephone poles, about 20 feet up, stringing lines and repairing.

Like others in the crew, Miss Roswell wears the lineman's traditional "badge" of the job —the steel-spurred "climbers" which she plunges into the wooden poles to step skyward. The climbers, or "hook", are belted to her heavy work boots.

Other essential accessories include sturdy trousers, long sleeved shirt or jacket, work gloves with wide cuffs, a wide "body belt" for carrying tools, a strong nylon safety strap which she loops around the pole, and a safety helmet which covers her short blonde hair. Quite a lot of trappings for a girl who's five feet, eight inches and 122 pounds.

Before joining the regular crew, she attended the company's three-week training school for linemen in Texarkana, Tex.

"I didn't realize that being a female lineman was so unusual until I went to the training school in Texarkana," she said. "On the first day, our instructor kissed me on the cheek and told the class: 'This is the first time I've ever kissed a lineman.'"

Drugs Promise Relief For Symptoms Of Menopause

There is help for American women to overcome symptoms of the menopause, says David M. Rorik in a special issue of McCall's magazine titled, "The Underated Joys of Being Over Thirty."

Hormonal-replacement therapy, the first phase of a two-pronged attack which doctors believe can virtually dispel the symptoms attached to menopause, is working personal miracles for many women, says Rorvik. It eases the vascular disorders (hot flashes), prevents loss of tissue elasticity, wrinkling and osteoporosis, often the cause of backaches, brittle bones and "shrinking" common to many women after menopause.

There is general agreement among medical experts that the therapy is beneficial, though difference of opinion exists about how and when to use the drugs, which must be administered under strict medical supervision.

Dr. Maxwell Roland, of French Polyclinic and Medical School, New York, one of the leading researchers in the field says, "It is my prediction that we are approaching the day when the average woman of 45 will get oral cyclic replacement therapy for the rest of her life . . . in many cases this medication will maintain (her) in a premenopausal condition for the rest of her life."

On the question of hormone therapy and its cancer inducing potential Dr. Roland says, "In 35 years of study there has never been a reported case of cancer linked to the ingestion of estrogen."

According to the article, the other half of a successful battle against menopause symptoms must deal with a change in society's attitude towards a woman past her child-bearing years, permitting her to separate her biology from her psychology.

"A woman's reproductive status is still symbolic to her. It's loss causes her to devaluate herself as a person . . . particularly if she's had no other role than wife and mother," says Dr. Roland.

Empathy And Discussion Needed To Cure Those Common Scolds

DEAR SUE AND HELEN:

My best friend and I don't smoke, drink or take drugs. Contrary to some beliefs, the farthest we would ever go with a guy is necking.

Yet we're getting the reputation of "tramps" because of our nosy neighbors, who live between our two houses, and down the street.

Like I was baby-sitting. A boy came by, and I ran out to tell him "get lost" as I couldn't have company, and I happened to kiss him goodbye. By the time the story went from the kids to their friends to the friends' parents who are our nosy neighbors, it went like this: I talked and necked out front for an hour while the "poor little kids" were scared and crying in the house all alone!

Another time my friend met a kooky guy with a car that sounded like an airplane engine. He fell for her hard, and would roar up our street at 2 a.m., I guess just to let her know he was thinking about her. One night he did this about 12 times, so Anne really told him off next day, but she got grounded because the neighbors complained. (She understood and accepted it, but the gossips never stopped talking.)

All these things add up to us being the big topic of conversation on the block. We're getting known as "those wild kids," just because boys like us. And this is affecting our parents who used to be very understanding. They're beginning not to trust us, just because of gossip. What can we do? — ME AND ANNE

DEAR ME AND ANNE:

Nosy neighbors are like the common cold: there's no sure cure for them but if you try several medicines and take good care of yourselves, they eventually stop bothering you. — SUE

HELEN'S ADDITIONS
DEAR M. AND A.:

The medicines should include:

1. A good dose of discussion, with your parents and perhaps your nosy neighbors, to lower temperatures all around.

2. Several capsules of empathy. Let them know you understand why gossip makes parents edgy — for it can hurt not only your reputations, but theirs as well.

3. A shot of appreciation: for putting up with you.

From there on, Sue's last suggestion: "take good care of yourselves" should complete the cure. If it doesn't then those neighbors are "common scolds" and deserve to be ignored. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm excited about my first year of high school, but I'm also the only teenage girl in the whole world with such stubborn parents. I've even begged on my knees, but they won't let me wear pants to school. Our dress code has been revised so even teachers can wear pants suits, but my folks won't listen.

The kids mock me for always wearing dresses, especially since I'm kind of bowlegged and look dumb in them. — Help! — L.D.

DEAR L.:

If begging on bended knee hasn't swayed your folks, I may not have much luck either, but here goes:

DEAR PARENTS OF L.D.:

Teenagers need to feel "with it" and pants are definitely "it" at school these days. What's more, they're comfortable, warmer, usually less expensive (they save on nylons too), and, in case this is an issue, not nearly so sexy as short skirts. Please relent! — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE:

Couldn't have said it better myself, Mom. I'll only add: "C'mon, Parents of L.D., give a little. You'll get a lot of good vibes in return. — SUE

District federated clubs, including those in Marin County, will set up booths to display arts and crafts made by members.

Avoid Carts If Doctor Orders Some Exercise

If the doctor has told you to get some exercise out on the golf course, you had better not be caught climbing into an electric cart, says Dr. Albert H. Domm, head of the medical department of an insurance company.

"Don't use a cart unless your doctor has specifically told you to," he says. "If you are playing golf for exercise, take a whack at the ball and then go hiking after it," Dr. Domm recommends.

"This business of hopping into a golf cart and riding out after the ball doesn't do a thing for your physical condition."

The Marin County Unit of the American Cancer Society has an original selection of Christmas cards for sale, with proceeds donated to cancer research, education and services. The cards are designed especially for the Marin unit by artists Jane Oka and Carolyn Shaffer of the Marin Society of Artists. They are on display at the unit office, 18 Mary Street, San Rafael.

New Cape Pattern Is Perfect For Use With Double Knit Wool

By EUNICE FARMER

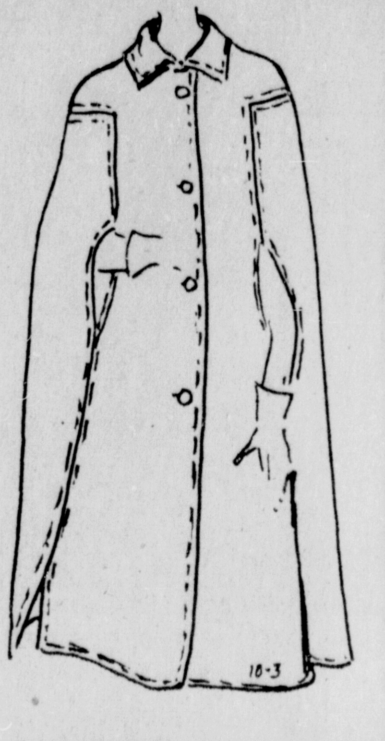
DEAR EUNICE,

I have finally found one of those wonderful double knits that weigh about 20 ounces that you spoke about in your column and would very much like to make a cape with it. The knit capes I have seen don't hang nice and straight. They are so full and uncomfortable to wear because they never stay in place. It there a cape pattern that would be suitable for this fabric as well as close fitting for comfort?

MRS. M.H.B.

DEAR MRS. M.H.B.:

This year's patterns have turned up one of the most beautiful capes I have seen in many years. It has all the new lines, yet fits close to the body and would be perfect for the knit you describe.



Since your cape will be unlined because of the weight of the fabric, the top stitching of all seams, including the collar and front edges, will keep all seams flat, reducing the bulk as well as adding an attractive detail to your garment. Notice the new dropped shoulder, beautifully executed with its cut and fit.

I feel the armhole slits are positioned perfectly. However, should you need more freedom for your arms, you may always keep the slit open a little higher. If you do this, be sure to remember to cut the extension for the armhole facing a little higher also.

If this is your first attempt with a cape, I can't recommend this one highly enough. The lines are so simple that this will become a classic instead of a fad.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Victor Wiltrock, Halbur, Iowa, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion.

"When you are stitching a sash or belt, or tie that must be turned after it has been stitched, sew about 3 inches with the right sides together. Stop, clip the corners of excess fabric and start pulling the right side out as far as you have stitched. As you continue stitching, stop occasionally and continue to pull out the part that has been stitched. When you are finished, the tie will be already turned and ready to press."

DEAR EUNICE,

I love to make bound buttonholes your way. But I must admit that when my neighbor and I tried them, we came up with tiny, beautiful welts and a great finished buttonhole. When I went home and tried the same thing on my sewing machine, the welts slipped around and I couldn't keep them even, I gave up in despair. Why would something like this work better on her machine than on mine? They are both good sewing machines.

MRS. S.G.

DEAR MRS. S.G.:

With no more information than you sent me, I can only guess the reason. Are you by any chance using the presser foot for the zig-zag stitch? If so, the spacing in the center of the foot is too wide, there is too much play in the fabric and not enough pressure at the point of stitching to hold the tiny strips in place.

It's surprising to me that many of the new sewing machines only come with one presser foot. You must try to obtain one that has unequal widths on each side of the center. One side is wider to keep the fabric in place because it extends clear up to the needle. Then there is just a narrow space removed for the needle, and the other edge again stabalizes the fabric. See if you can't obtain the original type of foot for your machine. The type that was used before anyone ever heard of a zig-zag stitching sewing machine.

DEAR EUNICE,

What is a single knit fabric? All I have heard of in the past are double knits.

MRS. T.B.

DEAR MRS. T.B.:

Single knits are much lighter weight and have returned because of the softness of the new designs in clothing. One of the most cmmmon is the wool jersey which many of you will remember from years ago.

You will find the single knits in the matte jerseys, and they can appear in wool, polyester, silk, or any other combination of fibers. They are usually made in an unconstructed manner and look best when there is a shirt type sleeve, blouson waistline, soft, and full skirts.

With these garments, it is best to wear a slip. If you want to line them, use a separate tube type lining that is only attached at the waistline, armhole, or neckline depending on the design.

Set-in sleeves take perhaps more skill than any other operation in dressmaking. Eunice Farmer's booklet "All About Sleeves" gives detailed instructions on how to make professional looking sleeves. To obtain your booklet send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Russian Noblewoman Looks Back On Life

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

LOS ANGELES (UI) —Born a Russian aristocrat, Kyra Petrovskaya has been a concert singer, an actress, a soldier in the Red Army, a war nurse, a farm wife, a lecturer, and an author, as well as twice widowed and twice divorced.

Now the wife of psychiatrist George J. Wayne and the mother of a premed student, she sat in her rambling Bel-Air mansion here and mused about what her life would be like if she had not come to this country as an American war bride.

"If I had stayed in Russia," she said, "I probably would have had a few more husbands, a couple more decorations, and by now instead of playing Juliet, I'd be playing Juliet's mother."

Mrs. Wayne was a well-known performer when World War II interrupted her stage career and she became a military officer and field nurse during the siege of Leningrad.

She was shocked and hurt when she was unable to resume her acting career in America after the war.

"I WOULD GO to read for parts and they were so cold to me," she said. "They said I didn't look the part or my accent was wrong.

"In Russia, the theater is permanent employment for actors and actresses. It is almost like going to an office everyday. You begin by playing Juliet, then as you grow older you play her mother, and finally you play her nurse. If you start in the theater, you died in the theater.

"I was brought up to think of the theater as a temple, and to venerate actresses. "I thought it was terrible that actors here were out of work and had to jerk sodas.

"I wondered how could it be that they didn't need me, when I had talent that had been proven. It was a great shock to me and for the first five years Iwas very miserable."

Although she played some roles on "Playhouse 90" and did some guest appearances on television shows, Mrs. Wayne decided she would find a new career.

She took to the lecture circuit to support her small son, traveling for several weeks at a time and speaking about life in the Soviet Union

After an appearance on the "Groucho Marx" show she was contacted by a publisher who thought she should write a book about her experiences.

"I told him I happened to have 14 chapters already written," she said with a laugh.

Her autobiographical "Kyra" was a bestseller. Since then she has written "Kyra's Secrets of Russian Cooking," and 'The Quest for the Golden Fleece," about mythology.

Her new book, "Shurik," which tells how Mrs. Wayne temporarily adopted an oprhaned boy during the siege of Leningrad, has been selected by Saturday Review as one of the season's top 15 books for young people.

The author never has returned to the U.S.S.R.

"My husband and son have been there, and my husband thinks it's silly for me to be afraid to go back there. But according to Soviet law, I am still a Soviet citizen. He says they have no reason to detain me, but I know them better than he does. They do not recognize my American citizenship, so why take chances?"

She admits to nostalgia when she sees Russian ballet.

"And some time ago UCLA (where her husband is on the faculty) asked me to give a party for a group of visiting Russian theater people," she said.

"They knew their hostess was to be someone named Petrovskaya, and they wondered, could it be our Kyra from our theater? When they got here, they thought I was my own daughter.

"In the United States we take such good care of ourselves, with good diet and good make-up, that we look much younger than we should," she said.

'JESUS CHRIST SUPERSTAR'

Marinite Says Tour Lot Of Hard Work

By GEORGE NEVIN

Singing the female lead in the road show version of a hit rock musical has elements of glamor and excitement, but it's mostly a case of long hours of traveling and boredom and a lot of work—hard work.

After thee months criss-crossing the country with the cast of "Jesus Christ Superstar," playing one-and-two-night stands from Boston to Miami to San Jose, Linda Nichols paused at her parents' house in Marinwood yesterday and reflected on the often grueling tour.

"It's mostly a case of travel, get there, do a show and travel again," said the 21-year-old Miss Nichols. "There's something about traveling that takes a lot out of us all."

She will be singing the role of Mary Magdelene in the concert version of the rock opera tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Oakland Coliseum. Then it's off to Portland, Seattle, Hawaii and back across the U.S. to Chicago.

Despite the routine of singing the same set of songs night after night in town after town, Miss Nichols never gets tired of performing. "Each night is different, and even though I know every note in every song no two performances are ever the same."

A good audience can lift the huge cast (which includes a 32-piece orchestra, a six-member rock band, 18 chorus members and the four principal singers) out of the doldrums and "really turn us on," the brown-haired, brown-eyed Miss Nichols said with animation.

The whirlwind tour, which Miss Nichols sees continuing for another two years ("As long as we can get bookings") ,has been her first real taste of a performer's life, although when she was a music major at Eastern New Mexico University three years ago, she and a group of fellow students went on a six-week tour of Iceland, Greenland, Newfoundland and Labrador with a USO troupe.

"That was nothing, though, compared to this," said Miss Nichols with a laugh. "It was so much easier."

Up until four months ago the singer was living in Los Angeles with her husband, David Nichols, whom she met and married while in college.

"A friend called me one day and told me she'd just auditioned for 'Jesus Christ Superstar,' " she recalled, "so I went down and did the same. I was called back for another audition, then another, and finally I was flown to New York."

Miss Nichols landed a part in the 18-member chorus and also served as understudy to Yvonne Elliman, who had the part of Mary Magdelene at first. After a month Miss Elliman left the road show for the same part in a Broadway version of the opera (which opens Oct. 12) and Miss Nichols took over the lead role.

Miss Nichols said "Jesus Christ Superstar" closely follows the Bible in telling the story of Christ but uses colloquial terms. Often, she said, nuns and clergymen would attend the show and most of them appeared to enjoy it.

"While I was in the chorus I used to scan the audience for priests and nuns and watch their reactions. They seemed to like it pretty much," she said.

Surprisingly, many audiences had their share of middle-aged and even elderly member, most of whom looked as though they enjoyed the performance, too, she said. "once a group of people in wheelchairs came up to us after a show and told us how good they thought we were."

Despite her enthusiasm for the show ("The music is good and the lyrics are great"), Miss Nichols doesn't think she'll stick it out if the present tour goes on for two year, as she expects it will.

Instead, she hopes to land the role of Mary in a Los Angeles version of the rock opera if one is produced.

"We're all watching what happens on Broadway. If that show is a hit other ones will open in Los Angeles and London," she said.

Miss Nichols calls her fellow performers "great people" and considers everyone part of a close, though big, family.

"When we first got together I loved them all, then as we got to know each other I started hating them all, and then I got over that and loved them again," she mused. "One girl had to go to New York for a while and when she got back she said she couldn't believe she would but she had missed us all terribly."

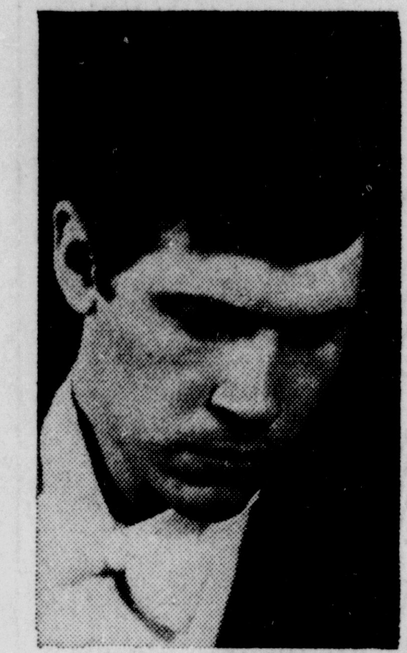
She considers her first real professional role "sort of a rest. If I like it I'll continue in music." What she really wants to do is record her own compositions and those of friends.

"I'm not making any plans, though," she said, wrinkling her face into a grin. "In this business you don't plan too far ahead."

After the first exhausting month on tour, Miss Nichols said she began to get stronger and now has caught her second wind.

"Being home even for only a few days helps, too," she said, waving her hand to indicate the townhouse at 168 Roundtree Boulevard where her father, Mark Falcone, a revenue officer for Marin County, and her mother live.

"My parents drove down to San Jose to get me after the last show and I feel better after just one day of eating home cooking," she said. "I just hate eating in restaurants."



CLASSICAL GUITAR — Phillip de Fremery, former student of Andres Segovia and Oscar Ghiglia, will present a recital of classical guitar works by Dowland, Bach, Villa-Lobos and Albeniz at 8 p.m. tomorrow at St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross.

No Drastic Increase In Security Planned

No drastic increase in security is planned for the Marin Civic Center Tuesday when both Angela Davis and six San Quentin inmates, charged in connection with last month's prison violence, will make court appearances at the same time.

Security is beefed up whenever Miss Davis appears in court, and Sheriff's Lt. Ronald Retana said yesterday a similar security setup would be in effect Tuesday.

He declined to discuss details of that setup or how many extra men would be on duty.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said, however, he thought the dual court appearances would multiply security problems "substantially," and added it is possible persons entering either courtroom may be searched at one point, with the entire area cordoned off.

But neither Retana nor Maloney said they expected trouble when Miss Davis and the inmates make morning appearances in superior court.

Among the San Quentin inmates indicted yesterday was Fleeta Drumgo, one of the so-called Soledad Brothers whose most recent court appearances in San Francisco have been disruptive.

In addition to the court sessions Tuesday, a Ban the Bomb march is planned on the board of supervisors chambers in the adjoining administration building in protest of a planned nuclear test on Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain.

Maloney was unaware how many persons might attend the court appearances, but added that he didn't think the nature of Miss Davis's court session was such to attract a large crowd.

The session is for hearing of a motion for suppression of certain evidence in her case.

The six inmates are to be arraigned on charges of murder, conspiracy and assault stemming from the alleged escape attempt Aug. 21 in which six persons were killed.

Man Is Serious From Accident

A Greenbrae man was hospitalized yesterday after he suffered multiple injuries in an auto-motorcycle accident, Marin General Hospital officials reported.

Timothy Kraus, 23, of 461 Via Hidalgo, Apt. 13, was admitted at 12:46 p.m. with multiple fractures, cuts and bruises. He was reported in serious condition today.

Details of the accident were unavailable.

Belvedere To Study Dog Control Issue

Dog control will be discussed by the Belvedere City Council when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the community center.

The council also will consider a recommendation that radar control of speeding on San Rafael Avenue be continued, according to City Mgr. William L. Cavalli.

Pair Arrested For Paint Over Statue

NEW YORK (UPI) — A university instructor and a student were arrested Friday on charges they dumped a can of red paint over a statue of Theodore Roosevelt outside the American Museum of Natural History.

Charged with criminal mischief were Mark Dornstreich, 30, an instructor at Ruters, and James McCarthy, 19, of Norristown, Pa.

Four Hurt In Car Crash

Two Sonoma County teenagers were hospitalized and two others treated for injuries suffered in an automobile accident in the Petaluma area last night, Hillcrest Hospital officials reported.

Police in the Southern Sonoma area had no details of the wreck, however.

Linda Carlson, 16, of Santa Rosa, with an injured left ankle, and Gene Calli, 20, of 319 Meacham Road, Petaluma, with internal injuries, both were reported in good condition today in Hillcrest Hospital and Sonoma County Community Hospital, respectively.

Treated at Hillcrest were Timothy Torre, 16, of 8791 Cypress Avenue, Cotati, cut left eye, and Dan Capella, 16, of 3642 Roblar Road, Petaluma, bruised arm.

FAIR GROUNDS TAKE SHAPE

Landscapers are working feverishly to get thousands of plants in place before the Marin County Fair opens next Friday at its new site at the Civic Center adjacent to the Veterans Memorial Building. Green turf is being rolled out for instant lawn, two huge tents are up and last minute preparations are underway at the site next to a picturesque lagoon. The fair, successor to the old Marin Art and Garden Fair, will run through Oct. 11.

Divorce Rate Shows Decrease

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—Divorces in California, as expected, decreased in the first six months of 1971, says the State Health Department.

About 51,900 "dissolution of marriage" decrees were granted, compared with about 56,200 during the same period of 1970.

The reduction was anticipated because 1970 figures reflected a big jump when the minimum waiting period for a final judgment was decreased from one year to six months.

26 Bus Deaths

LIMA (UPI)—Twenty-six persons were killed and 20 were injured Friday when a bus with 50 passengers plunged over a cliff near Puqui, 240 miles southeast of Lima. Police said they had no further details of the accident.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Improper Trump Play Plus Finesse Attempt Dooms South

Earlier in the week we were talking about a 90-day freeze on finesses. Now, the finesse has many peaceful uses, and no sound statesman will ban it completely for all players. Perhaps we will have to issue ration books, and bridge players would have to tear out a stamp and turn it in if they want to take a finesse. A device of that nature might have saved South in today's hand.

WITH ACE

South won the first heart trick with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps and then led the jack of clubs for a finesse. East won with the queen of clubs and thoughtfully cashed the king of diamonds. Then he led another diamond to remove the last trump from the dummy.

South couldn't understand what had gone wrong. He had already lost a club and a diamond, and he still had to lose one more trick in each of those suits. Down one.

You may point out that South lost his contract by drawing three rounds of trumps, not by taking the club finesse. But South drew trumps because he relied on an eventual club finesse to bring the contract home. If he had known that a branch of the government would step in to prevent him from finessing, he would have played the trumps properly.

PROPER PLAY

The proper play is to win the first heart in the dummy, and then lead a diamond at once without touching the trumps at all. West wins the diamond and returns a trump (as good a defense as any). South wins, ruffs a diamond in dummy, gets to his hand with a trump and ruffs his last diamond in dummy.

RETURNS TO HAND

Now South returns to his hand with the ace of hearts (saved for this purpose) and draws a third round of trumps. The contract is now secure, and South can take out his ration book and pay a stamp to try a club finesse if he wants to play for an overtrick.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - A J 9 8 7 2
♥ - A 6
♦ - J 6 5
♣ - J 4.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade or pass.

This is a borderline decision, and you should do whatever your temperament or the nature of your partner dictates. The jack of diamonds and the jack of clubs are not worth very much; if you traded them for the queen of spades or the queen of hearts, the hand would be a much better opening bid.

New Bolinas Fire District Director

Middleton, who lives on Horseshoe Hill, was chosen at a special meeting of the board Thursday. He replaces Harvey Crotts, who resigned for reasons of health.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON GREB

Guess who was born today and became famous.

1. Do you know a small man in major league baseball who consistently outscores big men? Today's top birthday celebrity (155 pounds, 5'10") is in the record books because in 1962, as a Los Angeles Dodger, he surprised everybody by grabbing 104 stolen bases to challenge, if not surpass, Ty Cobb's old mark: (A) Willie Davis; (B) Tommy Davis; (C) Maury Wills.

2. Another little man shook up the British Empire when, after earning a law degree, he was treated as an inferior in South Africa. It so upset this deeply spiritual man that he started a non-violent civil rights movement, suffered imprisonment many times, and finally became the founding father of a fully independent nation: (A) Mohandas Gandhi; (B) Sun Yat-sen; (C) Jomo Kenyatta.

3. This English writer is so talented that two universities awarded him honorary doctor's degrees. Are you able to guess his name from such book titles as "The Ministry of Fear" and movies like "The Third Man"? (A) C.P. Snow; (B) Graham Greene; (C) Evelyn Waugh.

4. Can you identify one of America's funniest comedians by his real first name, Julius? Probably not, because only his nickname has been on theater marquees, advertising the many hit films he made with his brothers, "Animal Crackers," "Horsefeathers," and "A Night at the Opera": (A) Jack Warner; (B) Dick Smothers; (C) Groucho Marx.

THE LAST SUNDAY IN SURREY

Rev. Barton Sarjeant of Christ Episcopal Church, Sausalito, will end a six-month stay in England Oct. 10 when he conducts his last service at Saint Martin's Parish Church, East Horsley, Leatherhead, Surrey. The church was built over a period of several hundred years with the tower dating from the 11th Century, the nave constructed in the 12th Century and the high altar finished in the 13th Century. Rev. Charles Craft, rector of Saint Martin's, has been in Sausalito for the six months taking Reverend Sarjeant's place. Reverend Sarjeant and his wife, Beverly, and two children will be honored by the English parish tomorrow with a harvest supper after Evensong. During their stay in Sausalito the Crafts visited their daughter, Caroline, who now lives in California.

ANNUAL REPORT

Editor Terms '71 As 'Year Of Indecision' In Churches

PHILADELPHIA (LC) — A veteran Lutheran editor characterized 1971 as a "year of indecision" in the churches when "much was discussed, but little or nothing was decided."

According to Dr. Albert P. Stauderman of Philadelphia, executive editor of The Lutheran, twice-monthly magazine of the Lutheran Church in America, "It was a bad year, compared to the previous ones, and not a good year either . . ."

Dr. Stauderman presented his yearly review of religious developments at the 58th annual meeting of the Lutheran Editors' and Managers' Association, attended by some 60 members from the LCA, the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

It marked the 27th presentation of news highlights in religion at the association's sessions, the first nine by Dr. G. Elson Ruff, editor of The Lutheran, and the last 18 by Dr. Stauderman, who commented that now he "might as well try for 20."

Dr. Stauderman described 1971 as a "year of revised priorities . . . local church rather than national. Denomination rather than council. Confessional unity rather than ecumenism. Evangelism rather than social activism. Conciliation rather than brinkmanship."

As the best example of the latter he cited President Nixon's proposed visit to China and the about-face of the United States on mainland China's admission to the United Nations.

When such membership was suggested by the Faith and Order Conference at Cleveland in 1958 sponsored by the National Council of Churches, he noted, there was a loud outcry and the NCC was smeared with charges of being Communist.

"Now it's a policy of a conservative U.S. administration," he said.

In listing some of the events of the year, Dr. Stauderman observed that there was "no really big story" and "some surprising omissions."

Notably, he added, "the race issue has cooled off, not because of achievements but because the races are so polarized they don't conflict any more; campus unrest has ended or gone underground, welfare reform is exactly where it was a year ago, and there's nothing new on sex, either!"

Lutherans "tentatively regrouped," according to Dr. Stauderman, as the ALC and the LCA moved closer together with unified activities in parish education, world missions and theological training. By "a strange coincidence," he noted, the LCA's proposed new structure "will just about parallel" the ALC's.

28-7 VICTORY

Terra Linda Whips Tam

By RON LENT

After Dick Rodrigo's wife, Doris, gave birth to an eight-pound potential halfback earlier in the day, the Terra Linda High School assistant football coach watched his team thump visiting Tamalpais High School, 28-7 at San Rafael High last night.

Quarterback Kevin Donohoe tallied twice to trigger the Trojan's opening Marin County Athletic League win, but rival head coaches Don Lucas of Terra Linda and Mike Davlin of Tam agreed that "gifts also played a role in the outcome."

"I can only shake my head when thinking about (cornerback Pat) Locey's interception for us being turned into a touchdown for them" with nine seconds left before the half, Davlin said.

Though disappointed in walking off second best on the scoreboard for the third consecutive game, Davlin remained composed while recalling the heart stopping events.

Sporting a 14-0 advantage, the Blue and Gold were battling the clock during six-play, 77-yard march. On second and 10, a harried Donohoe fired an errant pass into Locey's waiting arms. After Locey caught the ball, Trojan end Wes Emerson jarred the pigskin loose; flanker John Buckley quickly pounced on it in the end zone for a Trojan score.

"If you take that one away from us and the 60-yard (screen pass and) run (from Donohoe to fullback Mike Sabel) which set up our first touchdown after the opening kickoff, it might have been 7-7 at halftime," Lucas commented following the game.

As is his wont, Lucas was not outwardly pleased with the victor's performance, other than the final score. "Our pass blocking broke down," he explained, "and we'll have to work on execution."

While they are at it, the Trojan staff might conjure a tag for Rodrigo's unnamed boy, his third budding Terra Linda gridder, circa 1987.

Like Rodrigo, Davlin is also building for the future, though not necessarily in the same manner.

To start with, he has All-League middle guard Herb Wade. The junior stickout, returning after a week's absence due to a kidney infection, played at linebacker for the first time. He had a tough time there but so did his colleagues, although linebacker Tim Nowell and cornerback Alvin Price, both juniors, donated outstanding contributions.

The pair are expected to return next fall, while Trojan quarterback Donohoe packs his strong right arm off to college, much to Davlin's relief. In addition to maneuvering for 12 points, he passed for 222 yards.

The Trojan defense proved superior in containing Tam's elusive backfield. The visiting Indians trotted out three quarterbacks, including first-time starter Tim Nowell, Mark Dawson and Pat Locey, plus a plethora of runners.

The rushers featured Tom Collins, appearing for the first time this year after suffering a shoulder dislocation, Price, Don Parker and Clifford Hall. The quartet logged nearly equal time but no points.

This talented foursome posed many difficulties for the Terra Linda defense spearheaded by Steve Withers; conversely, the Trojan stoppers proved perplexing for the Tam field generals.

When not deposited on the hard turf, Locey showed he could scramble like Donohoe; Nowell displayed throwing distance comparable to Donohoe;

San Rafael Loses First Game, 13-12

A third period penalty nullified San Rafael High School's go-ahead touchdown and the visiting Bulldogs dropped their first football game in three outings, a 13-12 decision to Homestead High School in Sunnyvale last night.

Quarterback Dirk Gansloser hit wingback Dave Urquhart with a 35-yard scoring strike, but an official spotted an ineligible Bulldog receiver downfield, thus precluding the six-pointer.

"That could have iced the game," Bulldog coach Bob Muster said today, "but you never know."

He explained, "we were simply outhit. They came right at us like we expected. But they are big and execute very well." Homestead has a ball-control attack featuring the field generalship of quarterback Dave Ralston and the running of flankerback Mike Morrison.

The pair were shut off inside, but winning coach Mort Vandenberghe, an erstwhile Ukiah area coach, adjusted his strategy, enabling the pair to skirt the ends in the second half.

The circling of the flanks worked well, providing the hosts steered clear of lanky Bulldog defensive end Duke Bessee. "He played a good game all around, and so did Urquhart."

Other than this pair, Muster chose to reserve comments on individuals "until we view the films Monday."

Meanwhile, Muster will mull

Firm Blasts False Turf Injury Call

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Monsanto Co., the leading producer of synthetic turf, has assailed demands by the National Football League Players Association for a moratorium on further synthetic turf installations in stadiums.

A Monsanto spokesman said Friday a charge by the association that "there has been an alarming rise in player injuries on account of the increased use of the artificial surfaces" is "irresponsible and completely without basis in fact."

"Prior to the introduction of AstroTurf, Monsanto did extensive laboratory testing to determine the best design and to provide performance characteristics acceptable to the users," the company said in a statement.

"These tests involved shock absorbency, traction, drainage, durability and other factors."

"We further learned that responsible, independent groups such as the NCAA, staffed by team trainers, physicians and orthopedic surgeons, were conducting much broader surveys," Monsanto said.

49er, Raider Ticket Hikes Investigated

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Fans of the Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers could be in for a cash bonus soon.

It was revealed Friday that the federal government is investigating ticket price hikes made by the two teams to learn if they violated President Nixon's wage-price freeze.

The 49ers boosted admission prices by a dollar per contest to their approximately 40,000 season ticket holders and the Raiders raised prices 50 cents per game to their approximately 50,000 season ticket holders.

Half of the 49er hike was an excise tax that goes to the city to help pay off the cost of remodeling the team's new home in Candlestick Park and therefore could be legal.

It was revealed here Friday that the Office of Emergency Preparedness is checking into the Bay Area teams' price situation.

The Atlanta Falcons had to abandon a proposed ticket price hike and have filed suit on grounds that the price hikes were made prior to the Aug. 15 wage-price freeze.

Rain Washes Out Playoff Opener Of Orioles, A's

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Rain and wet grounds today forced a one-day postponement of the opening of the American League championship series between the Baltimore Orioles and Oakland Athletics.

The postponement was announced about two and one-half hours before the scheduled 1 p.m. EDT start of the game. There had been an almost steady drizzle, developing at times into showers, since shortly after midnight.

The first two games of the best-of-five series were rescheduled for Sunday and Monday in Baltimore.

Dave McNally, the Orioles' 21-game winner, and Vida Blue, Oakland's 24-game winner, had been scheduled to pitch the opener.

American Leauge president Joe Cronin made the decision to postpone the game. It was the first rainout since the playoffs began three years ago.

Cronin said there would be no travel day before the series resumes in Oakland. The first game there will be on Tuesday, as scheduled.

Both the Orioles and the Oakland A's had to cancel workouts Friday because of the rain, remnants of Hurricane Ginger, which pelted the tarp-covered field although it cleared up late in the day.

The Orioles aready have had 14 rainouts this season and wound up playing a 158-game schedule because four other rained out games —including a July 29 contest when Blue was scheduled to pitch —were never replayed.

But Blue did pitch against the Orioles twice early in the season and he beat them, 1-0, and 2-1, on a pair of four-hitters enroute to his glittering 24-8 record that made him the sensation of the baseball season.

The long season seemed to take its toll on the 22-year-old lefthander and he was 1-2 the final month of the season after owning a 23-6 mark on Aug. 29. He also wasn't in any mood Friday for speculating on whether he thought he could beat the Orioles again.

"I'll just go out and pitch," Blue said in the Oakland dressing room Friday, "I'll throw the ball and if they hit it, they do, and if they don't, they don't."

Blue then said, "don't start asking me questions because I'm not going to answer them. I'm going back to the hotel and get some rest." When asked by a group of reporters why he wouldn't talk, Blue said, "my reasons, Vida Blue's reasons." Asked if he was uptight, Blue said, "What's uptight?"

However, Manager Dick Williams insists that Blue's arm is sound and he's regained the form he showed earlier in the season. "Velocity-wise, he's not as fast as he was at the first of the year but knowledge-wise and control-wise, he's much better," Williams says.

Sal Bando, the club's third baseman, admits the team had "some doubts" about Blue in mid-September. "He wasn't throwing the ball as hard as he was before. Guys were getting hits off him who couldn't touch him before. They were even getting hits off him with two strikes," Bando said.

But Bando said Blue flashed his old form when he pitched 12 scoreless innings in his last two starts and he said, "you'll see him throwing hard against the Orioles."

Williams estimated that Blue threw the fast ball 95 per cent of the time early in the season but throws it 85 per cent now because, "he's getting his breaking stuff over."

If the A's — 0 0 13-10 under the dog in the best of five series — are to have realistic chance, it's considered a must for Blue to win the opening game. In the nine games the club played without Blue, Baltimore had a 7-2 edge.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver will start lefthander Dave McNally, 21-5, despite a 36-day stint on the disabled list with bad elbows, against the A's. Even though McNally has reached the 20 victory mark for four consecutive years, he's been overshadowed by Blue this season.

If rain doesn't foul up things, it'll be Mike Cuellar against Jim Hunter on Sunday with Monday a travel day. The series is scheduled to resume in Oakland on Tuesday with Jim Palmer against Chuck Dobson.

The winner will host the first two games of the world series next weekend.

Laver Ends Lutz' Giant-Killing Spree

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Bob Lutz' giant-killing spree in men's singles at the $50,000 Redwood Bank International Open has been brought to an abrupt halt by redheaded Rod Laver.

But it took considerable effort by the top-seeded Australian to beat the unranked Lutz 7-6, 2-6, 6-4 in Friday's quarterfinals at the Berkeley Tennis Club. A day earlier, Lutz had cut down fifth-seeded Jan Kodes and he was aiming for another upset over Laver.

But the Aussie ace rose to the occasion and garnered a point when he needed one by either a rocket serve, deft volley or pinpoint placement.

"I was quite confident going into the match," said Lutz. "I've been playing better than I've ever played in my life. But, unfortunately, Rod also was at the top of his game."

Arthur Ashe, the sixth seed, used a devastating backhand to score a mild upset over second-seeded Cliff Drysdale 6-2, 6-2. Ashe's booming volley off the backhand forced poor passing shots by Drysdale.

Laver met Tom Okker of the Netherlands today in one semifinal match while Ashe and Australia's Ken Rosewall tangled in the other. The winners play for the singles title Sunday.

Okker defeated Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Tex., 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 while the fourth-seeded Rosewall eliminated Marty Riessen in easy fashion 6-1, 6-3.

$9 Million Offer For The Indians

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A group headed by former Cleveland third baseman Al Rosen and industrialist George Steinbrenner have offered to buy the Indians for $9 million, it was reported today.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer said the Steinbrenner-Rosen group made the offer to Indians owner Vernon Stouffer.

Steinbrenner denied he had made any firm offer, the Plain Dealer said, but did admit he has talked over the situation with Indians owner Vernon Stouffer.

"All I can say is that I have an interest in seeing the ball club stay in Cleveland," said Steinbrenner. "I have been a close friend of Mr. Stouffer's for a long time. I have the highest regard for him."

Seattle Tips Winless Warriors

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—Lenny Wilkens sank two free throws with three seconds left to clinch a 104-100 come-from-behind victory for unbeaten Seattle over winless Golden State in the first game of a National Basketball Association pre-season doubleheader Friday night.

Portland and Milwaukee played in the second game.

Golden State, led by Jim Barnett's 13 points, moved to a 57-45 halftime bulge and increased it to 19 points, 75-56 with four minutes left in the third quarter.

However, Spencer Haywood, the game's high scorer with 26, sparked Seattle's comeback with nine points as the Sonics outscored the Warriors 19-7 to move within seven at the quarter's end.

The surge continued into the fourth quarter with the Sonics going ahead to stay midway through the final period.

Dick Snyder added 21 for Seattle while Cazzie Russell was high for Golden State with 20. Nate Thurmond scored 18 for the Warriors.

Three Teams Tied In Prep Soccer Loop

Terra Linda, Redwood and Tamalpais high schools, all with a win and a tie, shared the Marin County Athletic League soccer leadership after the opening week.

In MCAL action yesterday, Terra Linda moved into a first place tie with a 1-0 triumph over Novato on the loser's field. Other results: host Redwood drubbed Marin Catholic 4-2; visiting Drake and San Rafael battled to a scoreless deadlock; while invading Tamalpais and San Marin played to a 2-2 standoff.

Kurt Erlandson scored Terra Linda's lone goal. Schariar Sarabi of Redwood and Dave Stacey of Marin Catholic were landed for fine play.

On Tuesday at 4 p.m., San Rafael visits Marin Catholic; San Marin is at Novato; Tamalpais treks to Drake; and Terra Linda hosts Redwood.

Pirates Favored To Take Series

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Giants, after a day to get over their scary western victory, were favored to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates today in the opening game of the National League playoffs with Giant Gaylord Perry pitching against Pirate Steve Blass.

However, the well-rested Pirates, runaway winners of the N. L. East, were slight favorites at 5-6 to win the best-three-of-five playoffs and a berth in the World Series starting a week from today.

One thing all the experts were predicting was that there will be plenty of slugging in the showdown that starts at Candlestick Park at 1 p.m. PDT (4 p.m. EDT)

"I'll tell you one thing," said Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh, "Ain't nobody gonna be pitching any shutouts in this series with the bunch of hitters we've both got."

The Giants, however, will probably be missing their top slugger, Bobby Bonds, when they take the field. Rightfielder Bonds, who led the Giants in homers win 33 and runs-batted in with 102, missed the final game of the season Thursday night because of a pulled muscle in his side and Giant manager Charlie Fox wasn't about to take chances by returning him to the lineup too soon. "I don't want Bobby to play today if his side still hurts," said Fox. "I'd rather he took an extra day off and then came back healthy."

Dave Kingman, who filled in for Bonds Thursday and slammed an important two-run homer for the Golden Gate team in its clinching 5-1 victory over the San Diego Padres, will get the call in right field again.

"Kingman showed he can play under pressure, and I don't think we lose much with him in there in Bonds' place," said Fox.

Righthanders Perry (16-12) and Blass (15-8) get their starting assignments in the opening game with plenty of rest. Despite the Giants' wild scramble to stave off the onrushing Los Angeles Dodgers in the closing weeks of the season, Fox was able to keep his staff from getting jumbled and weary. Perry goes into this opener off three days rest and Blass has had five days rest.

The belief is that if the Giants had clinched their division as early as the Pirates clinched in the East, Fox would have preferred to have Juan Marichal pitch the opening game of the playoffs. However, in a nip-and-tuck race Fox maneuvered so that Marichal would be able to pitch the last game of the season if the division pennant came down to that one game—that's exactly what happened, and Fox's strategy paid off as Marichal won the big one with a five hitter.

Now Fox plans to have John Cumberland pitch the second game of the playoffs and have Marichal ready with three days rest when the playoffs, after a day off Monday, switch to Pittsburgh for the third game on Tuesday. For the Pirates, Murtaugh has 19-game winner Dock Ellis, starting pitcher in this year's All-Star game, ready for the second, and ex-Cardinal Nelson Briles to oppose Marichal in the third.

49ers Take On Eagles Sunday

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — With a new-found running attack, the San Francisco 49ers look for their second straight road victory Sunday against the winless Philadelphia Eagles. The game will be televised by CBS (Channels 5 and 10) beginning at 10 a.m.

Vic Washington, playing his first season in the National Football Conference after a couple of years in Canadian football, is giving the 49ers some ground speed which they have lacked in recent years.

Washington sprinted for 82 yards in San Francisco's win over the Saints last week to help the 49ers amass 194 rushing yards. That's the most for a 49er team since 1968 when they ran for 248 yards against Atlanta.

Coach Dick Nolan says he will start Washington ahead of Doug Cunningham while Ken Willard operates out of the fullback slot behind quarterback John Brodie.

Cornerback Bruce Taylor of the 49ers has been limping with a hamstring pull this week and may see limited duty against the Eagles who have lost their first two games to Cincinnati and Dallas.

In case Taylor can't make the opening whistle, Nolan will go with second-year man Mike Simpson. On the defensive line, veteran tackle Charlie Krueger will start ahead of Stan Hindman. Krueger has recovered from minor pre-season surgery on his knee.

Philadelphia quarterbacks Pete Liske and Rick Arrington have been intercepted 10 times so far this season. They usually try to hit Ben Hawkins, Harold Jackson and Gary Ballman. Hawkins has had some outstanding games in the past against the 49ers.

Running back Tom Woodeshick, a nine-year pro, is nursing a knee injury but may go against San Francisco.

Judging from past scores, Nolan isn't taking the Eagles too lightly. Each of their last three meetings in 1966, 1967 and 1969 have been decided by one point.

San Francisco enjoys a 6-2-1 lead over the Eastern Division Eagles in their cross-country series.

The Eagles defense got a boost this week with the return to action of middle linebacker Tim Rossovich. He will start his first game since a preseason knee injury put him on the shelf.

Sacramento Road Trip For Sonoma

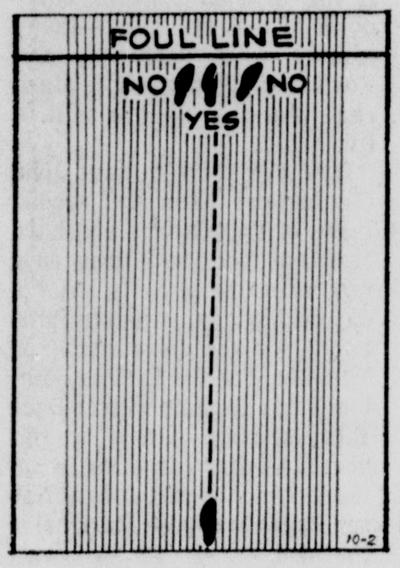
The Sonoma State College footballers, 1-1, visit Sacramento State, 0-2, tonight at 8 o'clock on the Hornet Field in a Far Western Conference contest. This game marks the first varsity meeting between the two schools.

The Rohnert Park team faces a victory-hungry opponent which features a balanced passing-running attack. All-FWC split end Chris Bowman, who prepped at Terra Linda High, heads the attack unit with seven catches for 139 yards and two scores. Dave Sobolewski and Jim Holmes alternate at quarterback.

The hosts top runner is blockbusting fullback Larry Crawford. The 6-foot, 220-pounder has chalked up 117 yards in two games.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



Making your approach in a straight line is important in attaining accuracy. If you drift one way or the other, your accuracy will suffer. Should you think you're drifting, practice-roll a few balls and check to see that your left foot is on the same board at the finish as it was at the start.

Orange Crate Derby On Tap In Novato

The San Rafael and Novato Jaycees will sponsor an Orange Crate Derby tomorrow in Novato starting with 9 a.m. registration for children 10-15 years-old for the right to compete in the state finals at Pleasant Hill Oct. 10.

Safety checks and trial runs will be held at 10 a.m., an hour before eliminations start.

The Derby car construction is left to the imagination of the individual, according to Novato race chairman Tom Senior. However, the vehicles cannot exceed seven feet in length and four feet in width, nor can the combined weight of car and driver surpass 250-pounds.

Winners will be determined by a double-elimination racing schedule on a Novato course near the San Carlos Way and San Marin Drive intersection.

Henry Fires 297 Game

Ed Henry, San Rafael plumber, rolled 11 straight strikes Thursday night before missing on his last shot in the North Bay Classic League at Country Club Bowl, San Rafael.

His light hit left the 2-4-5 to give him a 297 game, high score of the past week's bowling in Marin County. Henry, who rolled games of 214 and 209 for a 720 series, also rolled a 657 series to tie for top honors at Greenbrae Lanes.

Top scores of the week:

The Redwood junior varsity and frosh footballers registered wins this week.

The Frosh scored a 24-0 triumph over visiting Petaluma Junior High School Firday, after the Larkspur-based junior varsity dumped invading Drake 25-12 on Thursday.

The Giant yearlings who won nine straight over a two-year span, got a three touchdown past performance from Eddie Anderson.

San Rafael Driver In Sprint Car Race

Rich Scettrini of San Rafael will be driving car number 99 tonight, the Western Plating Co. Special, in the sprint car races at Petaluma Speedway.

Time trials begin at 7 p.m. and racing at 8 o'clock on the Petaluma oval. Scettrini, in his first year of sprint car racing, ranks 10th in the association standings.

TROJANS

and Dawson punted with the same efficiency as Donohoe.

Alas, the trio combined could not equal the four touchdown drives the Trojan quarterback engineered. In the opening 12-minute period, Donohoe took his team 73 yards in seven calls for the first score following the opening kickoff. The big play was a 60 yard screen pass from Donohoe to Sabel on the first sequence from scrimmage. Donohoe capped it with a two-yard journey around left end.

The Trojans crossed the goal line twice in the second period with Sabel blasting over from a yard out to climax a six-play, 68-yard drive; and Buckley fell on Locey's fumble across paydirt, seconds prior to the intermission.

Afterwards, Davlin mused, "what can I say... we gave them the fits" — and Terra Linda unwrapped its third victory prize.

SANDY KOUFAX PITCHED HIS LAST VICTORY FOR THE DODGERS WHEN HE BEAT PHILADELPHIA 6-3 FOR HIS 27TH TRIUMPH OF THE YEAR. IT WAS THE SECOND STRAIGHT SEASON HE CLINCHED THE FLAG FOR LOS ANGELES ON THIS DAY.

Brooks' Glove Headed For Hall Of Fame

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The glove all-star Baltimore third baseman Brooks Robinson has used the last three years will be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. after this season.

Ken Smith, director of the Hall of Fame, will pick up the glove after the playoffs or the world series, depending on when Robinson is through with it.

"It'll hold up for the playoffs and the world series," said Robinson, who has won 11 Golden Glove Awards and has appeared in 15 consecutive all-star games.

Robinson said he got the glove three years ago from outfielder Dave May, who has since been traded to Milwaukee.

"I gave him two gloves for one," Robinson said. "It felt good when it was new — just the right size and it wasn't too big."

"It was put out by Rawlings and is called the Pro Model. It doesn't have any name autograph in it, like Marty Marion or Joe Doaks," he explained.

Robinson holds a major league record with nine years as the leading fielder. He holds two other major league and three league records for third basemen.

Marin Soccermen Lose To Ohlone

College of Marin's soccer team lost to Ohlone College, 2-1 yesterday on the Stephenson High School field in Fremont, with Joe Navarro, formerly of Drake High School, scoring Marin's lone goal.

Next game for Marin will be Friday at 3:15 p.m. in Kentfield against DeAnza College of Cupertino.

Miami Crushes Baylor, 41-15; Irish Are Next

MIAMI (UPI) — For the moment, the Miami Hurricanes don't want to think about Notre Dame next week. They are savoring a 41-15 victory over the Baylor Bears Friday night and Chuck Foreman's 50-yard run in the second period.

Foreman, a lanky halfback from Frederick, Md., had put the Hurricanes ahead in the fateful second quarter with a one-yard scoring run and a 15-yard touchdown pass to flanker Bill Perkins.

Miami got the ball again after giving up a two-point safety when kicker Mike Burke saw a centered ball sail over his head and downed it in the end zone.

Suddenly it was fourth down with one yard to go at exact midfield and only 27-seconds left before halftime. Miami quarterback John Hornie brook, a shifty option ball handler, pitched out to Foreman around the right end. The 201-pound runner broke a tackle at the line of scrimmage and went all the way, leaving Baylor bodies sprawled on the artificial Orange Bowl turf in his twisting wake.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

A Key Game For Redskins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Dallas-Washington drama tomorrow might be titled, "After The Fall." One of the teams will fall from grace — the special grace of the unbeaten.

Dallas is 2-0 and the Redskins are off to the same quick start under new head coach George Allen. There's always the possibility of a tie of course, but ties don't count in the final standings. This is an early-season situation that calls for a big win and each will be trying for that when they clash in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas. First place in the Eastern Division of the National Conference is at stake.

In other NFC contests, Sunday, Detroit (1-1) is a 7 point choice over Atlanta; Chicago (2-0), one of the four remaining unbeaten teams in pro football, finds itself a fourpoint underdog to Los Angeles (0-1-1); San Francisco (1-1) is a 14 1-2 point choice over Philadelphia (0-2) and St. Louis (1-1) figures nine points better than the New York Giants (11).

In the AFC, it will be a battle of veteran quarterbacks John Unitas and Earl Morrall against rookie Jim Plunkett as Baltimore (1-1) and New England (1-1) tangle at Foxboro, Mass. The Colts are picked by 10 1-2.

Also, Pittsburgh (1-1) is given a two-point edge at home over San Diego (1-1); Miami (1-0-1) is seen as eight better than the New York Jets (0-2) and Kansas City (1-1) is tabbed by 6 1-2 over Denver, (0-1-1-).

In inter-conference tilts, Minnesota (1-1) is favored by 14 1-2 over Buffalo; Houston (0-2) by 10 over New Orleans (1-1) and Cincinnati (1-1) by 1 over Green Bay (1-1).

Oakland (1-1) is given a chance to hand Cleveland (2-0) its first loss in an AFC clash on national television (ABC-9:00 p.m. EDT) Monday night that winds down the third week of the season. The Raiders are picked by three.

The Washington defense, which has limited its first two opponents to a total of 20 points —a conference low—will be severely tested by a Dallas offense that has scored a total of 91 points in its first two victories, including 42 last week against Philadelphia.

The Cowboys also have a couple of other streaks going for them. They've won 15 of their last 16 games since the 10th game of last season and have taken the last six contests with the Redskins.

Washington, on the other hand, is seeking to win its first three games of a saason for the first time since 1947. And Dallas is 0-3 against teams coached by George Allen, who defeated the Cowboys while mentor of the Los Angeles Rams.

All of these fancy figures won't mean much once the real hitting starts, however.

By that time, it will all get a lot more basic. Can Billy Kilmer, who had a fine game in the 'Skins' 30-3 rout of the Giants last week, pass accurately against that awesome Dallas defense that intercepted seven Philadelphia passes? Can Larry Brown, bothered by a hand injury, be an effective runner? Is Roger Staubach sufficiently recovered from the mild concussion he suffered in last week's game? Who will win the aerial showdown between Cowboy defenders Herb Adderley, Mel Renfro, Cornell Green and Charley Waters and Redskin receivers Charley Taylor (two TD catches against the Giants), Roy Jefferson and Jerry Smith?

It's early in the year, true. But this one may settle a lot. It could make clear just how strong Allen's outfit of tagalongs is going to be. Or it could prove even more clearly that the Cowboys of coach Tom Landrey are finally moving with precision toward the greatness that has eluded them for so long.

Ali Signs To Fight Big Buster Mathis

NEW YORK (UPI)—They might have to dub it "The Suet Struggle" when Muhammad Ali faces Buster Mathis in a 12-round bout at the Houston Astrodome Nov. 17.

The 29-year-old Ali weighed a less-than-svelte 220 1-2 when he disposed of former sparring partner Jimmy Ellis in the 12th round of his last fight, on July 26, also at the Astrodome. The former heavyweight champion had to wear special high-waist trunks to help hide an ungainly roll never seen in his "floatlike-a-butterfly-sting-like-a-bee' days.

Mathis, 27, has not fought since he lost a 12-round decision to Jerry Quarry in March, 1969. The 1964 AAU champion tended toward a blubbery 230 in his active days.

The pair signed for the fight at a mid-town Manhattan hotel Friday.

Ali was guaranteed $300,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts by Top Rank Inc., while Mathis will receive 15 per cent.

Jimmy Iselin, president of Peers Management, which oversees Mathis' career, was confident that the $200,000 his organization put up towards Ali's guarantee will pay dividends in the future.

Ali was to have fought young Mac Foster in Tokyo on Nov. 29. Presumably, the fight with Mathis rules that one out. The Tokyo match reportedly has run into financial problems and difficulty in securing permission from the Japanese Boxing Federation for it to be held.

Ali has insisted that he will have three more fights, including the one with Mathis, in his tuneup campaign for a rematch with Joe Frazier and a chance to regain the title he lost over 15 torrid rounds to the undefeated Philadelphia slugger last March. The rematch is expected to be held next spring in Los Angeles.

Mathis was knocked out in 11 rounds by Frazier on March 4, 1968, in a fight billed as the "Heavyweight Championship of New York State."

In his only other fight against a ranking heavyweight, Mathis outpointed George Chuvalo in a 12-rounder prior to the Quarry bout.

Mrs. Gunter Is Upset Victor

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Sixth-seeded Nancy Richey Gunter of San Angelo, Tex., upset third-seeded Francoise Durr of France Friday in the $18,000 Virginia Slims Thunderbird Tennis tournament.

Mrs. Gunter ousted Miss Durr 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

The tournament's No. 2 seed, Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, defeated Leslie Hunt of Australia 6-2, 6-2, and Kerry Melville of Australia defeated Judy Dalton, also of Australia 6-1, 6-3.

The tournament continues through Sunday.

Behr Says Rivers Fight Not Over

I-J Special Report

BERKELEY — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, fresh from the Senate defeat of his "wild rivers" legislation, today warned conservationists they "haven't even fielded a team" in their battle to save California from pollution and exploitation.

Of 240 air and water pollution measures introduced in the Legislature last year, he told a University of California conference, "only 85 of the more insignificant ones became law."

This year, with 513 such measures introduced, the proportion of fatalities will be even greater, he predicted.

Among those already dead were ones to protect the coastline, ban nonrecyclable containers, phosphates, persistent pesticides, lead in gasoline, the Southern Crossing bridge on San Francisco Bay, billboards on scenic highways, and to preserve the Eel, Klamath and Trinity rivers as wild and free-flowing of dams — Behr's own bill killed Thursday.

The senator, in his speech prepared for the conference, said "the sad fact is that in California today most 'environmental' laws are still being written by the lobbyists for the anitconservation interests."

Behr spoke on "The Greening of California — An Environmental Outlook." The conference sponsored by the University Extension was entitled "From Goldenstate to Superstate: California since the Second World War."

"The picture of who's got the clout in Sacramento is a little clearer," Behr said, when you find that just the oil, automobile and timber lobbyists outmanned conservationist lobbyists 27 to 6, and outspent them 10 to 1.

Behr suggested several steps to effective conservationist action in Sacramento, among them: organize with groups outside the conservation movement, and communicate with legislators as a member of a group, not as an individual.

Come equipped with the facts. Too many conservationists are long on zeal and indignation, but short on facts.

Explain environmental problems calmly and patiently to a legislator.

Get to committee members before hearings. "They are seldom convinced by oratory, and are more often irritated at having to sit through it."

Let your legislator know you are prepared to flex political muscles at campaign in his behalf.

"The conservationist must be willing to put his money where his platitudes are, and pay part of the price of the war on pollution."

Fight pressure with pressure. Organize a "pollution lobby" with men who know how to lobby, keep the pressure on, get the message across, "and summon the troops when they are needed."

Indicate support through telegrams, letters, petitions and Capitol visits.

Behr insisted that government "will respond to responsible pressure."

He cautioned conservationists that "there are no total or lasting victories.

"It is naive to think, for example, that San Francisco Bay was ever saved. The bay was never saved; it was merely reprieved, and it is constantly threatened by pollution, bay fill, ambitious dreams of port planners, and greatest threat of all, the Baldwin Channel (to Stockton)."

Vocational Nurses Vote To Affiliate

Vocational nurses at Marin General Hospital have voted to affiliate with the California Licensed Vocational Nurses' Association, an association spokesman said yesterday.

James W. Andrews, a representative for the Oakland-based association, said Thursday's vote was 28 for and 15 against. He said affiliation required a majority vote (26) of the total number of vocational nurses (52), even though all nurses didn't vote.

The vote came, [illegible] said, as two Bay Area unions continue efforts to organize all hospital workers at Marin General. He named those two unions as the Hospital and Institutional Workers Union and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes.

Andrews said his association was approached earlier this year by vocational nurses who did not wish to lose professional identity by being included in a larger union.

Andrews said the next step is to meet with hospital officials to work out a "memorandum of agreement."

"Utilization of LVNs (licensed vocational nurses) will be one of the first items we will discuss," he said.

In the past, he explained, vocational nurses at Marin General have expressed concern that responsibilities assigned them did not reflect their level of training.

He said a vocational nurse can perform nearly all duties that registered nurses are regularly assigned.

Gun Wielding Burglars Are Surprised

Two gun-wielding burglars were surprised yesterday while rifling a Sausalito residence when the owners of the home showed up, Sausalito police reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Ty Tolomei of 120 Filbert Street returned home about 4 a.m. and heard a noise upstairs. The couple reported two black men, both wearing ski masks and holding guns, started down the stairs toward them.

Mr. and Mrs. Tolomei locked themselves in a downstairs bedroom, according to police, who said the two men fled from the residence through a kitchen door and went into the hills.

Nothing appeared to be missing from the home, but police discovered clothing, firearms, money and jewelry rapped in a bedspread in one bedroom. Officers said they found two guns and two ski masks in the hills behind the residence.

Push For Aqueduct Funds Hit

For at least the next two weeks, the Marin Municipal Water District will not be allowed to urge a "yes" vote on Proposition B, the Nov. 2 ballot measure asking voter permission to participate in financing the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct.

Superior Court Judge E. Warren McGuire yesterday issued a temporary injunction against the water district and its directors until 10 a.m. on Oct. 14, when the district must appear to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent.

The judge acted on the request of Huey D. Johnson of Mill Valley, western regional director of the Nature Conservancy, who contends that the water district has no right to use funds collected from water users to advocate passage of water bonds or to urge a "yes" vote on Proposition B.

Johnson's action was filed yesterday by attorney Douglas P. Ferguson of Mill Valley.

Not only is Johnson trying to stop the water district from campaigning in favor of Proposition B, but he also is asking return of public funds spent on the passage of Proposition H last November. The measure authorized the district to issue $11.5 million in bonds to improve water facilities.

Johnson claims the water district spent at least $19,500 for brochures and advertising for the 1970 bond campaign. The expenditures were illegal, he contended.

Besides recovery of the $19,500, Johnson seeks a civil penalty against the district of $3,000 for violating the requirement to report campaign expenses, and an injunction against further spending to advocate passage of Proposition B next month.

$2,350 In New Watches Stolen

Burglars who broke into two freight shipping offices stole $2,350 in new wristwatches, San Rafael police reported yesterday.

The break-ins were at the Pacific Motor Trucking and Railway Express Agency offices, both at 35 Jordan Street, Wednesday night or early Thursday. Two cases of watches consigned to a San Rafael jeweler and an electric adding machine were stolen from the express agency. Nothing was taken from the truck lines office, police said.

The skin of the beaver was often used as money in early Canada.

WEEK'S BUSINESS

Traders worried about the chaotic world monetary situation, the unanswered questions about phase two of President Nixon's economic program, and a drop in the government's s index of leading economic indicators in August.

A strike by east and gulf coast longshoremen at the weekend also made traders a little nervous, although there was widespread belief Nixon would invoke the Taft-Hartley Act before things got out of hand.

For the week, the NYSE common stock index registered a gain of 0.40 to 54.66. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index rose 0.78 to 98.93, while the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 4.67 to 893.98. Advances topped declines, 851 to 788 among 1,851 issues crossing the tape.

Volume for the five days aggregated 56,965,120 shares, down from 61,173,880 shares a week earlier, and also well below the 72,245,038 shares traded during the year ago period.

A University of Michigan survey on consumer buying intentions also had bearish implications for Wall Street, but like everything else it, too, had little impact on stocks, as bargain hunters bid up the recently depressed stock market.

According to the University's Survey Research Center, American people generally back Nixon's wage-price freeze but are quite pessimistic about its achieving any early success in slowing inflation or reducing unemployment.

A more cheery item for investors was a statement by Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans that phase two of Nixon's economic policy must "restore the profit-making potential of business" so it can expand and create more jobs. This tended to encourage traders because there had been concern recently that the administration would bow to pressure from labor groups for an excess profits tax.

As for the stock market's outlook, Stanley Schwartz, a general partner of Oppenheimer & Co., said "the long term trend is up." He said the economy continues to improve but many people are taking a wait and see attitude.

"A lot of the nation's business has not felt the effects of the improved economy," Schwartz concluded, "and as a result there is considerable caution around." Robert H. Parks, vice president and director of economic research for duPont Glore Forgan, said "overwhelming evidence will be forthcoming which will help to convince investors that the United States economy is in a sustained recovery."

Queen's Cousin Officially Opens British Week Events

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Princess Alexandra of England, the chic, blue-eyed blonde cousin of Queen Elizabeth, got British Week festivities started Friday with the usual pomp and circumstances.

Then she ducked out for a beer.

The Princess told a large crowd of invited guests at City Hall, "I hope as a result of this week the bonds of friendship as well as those of trade will be further strengthened between our two countries."

A red carpet was rolled all the way from the sidewalk to the top of the staircase at City Hall as a couple of hundred civic leaders sat underneath the rotunda for the opening of the nine-day British trade promotion event, the first ever held in the United States.

The Princess, wearing an over-the-knee dress of a coral-persimmon color, and her husband later visited a just-opened British pub in Union Square.

Her husband, the Honorable Angus Ogilvy, moved behind the bar and poured a few draughts of British beer.

"Look, I've got a new profession," he told his wife who had a small sip of beer which she said she doesn't like much.

The royal couple also visited the $1.25 million "Treasurers of the City of London" exhibit at City Hall where the 34-year-old princess chatted with children and other visitors.

She told one woman: "This is such a lovely city. I think I'll retire here."

But Princesses don't retire and have to carry on in the best British tradition.

Her Royal Highness had a full day, including the opening of the British "model rooms" display at Union Square, a visit to the City of London Pavilion at Civic Center, and finally the English-Speaking Union banquet.

Today's highlights turn from royal beauty to royal military might—17th century style—when the Hon. Artillery Company of Pikemen and Musketeers demonstrate drill movements.

She will be in attendance tonight when the 15th annual San Francisco Film Festival gets going at the Palace of Fine Arts theater.

In its early years, the festival openings were marked by incidents of pie-throwing, scantily clad starlets upstaging the movies, misplaced reels and other mishaps. But last year's event went smoothly.

The film shown will be "The Go-Between."

Reagan Assails Demos On Officer Protection

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan today promised a convention of California Republicans that as long as he is governor those who attack peace officers will be treated as violent criminals and not political revolutionaries.

He also criticized the Democratic-controlled Legislature for not passing the peace officer protection measures he requested in January.

"Since I asked for those laws," the governor said, "sixteen law enforcement and corrections employees have been killed in the line of duty. How many brave men must die before our opponents face reality?"

The measures generally would toughen penalties for assaulting peace officers or even advocating it.

"Sabotage and bombings and arson are not political crimes," Reagan said. "They are criminal acts of violence. And so long as I have anything to say about the matter, they will be treated as criminal acts."

"Killing a policeman is murder whether the bullet is fired by a bank robber or a self-proclaimed revolutionary martyr."

In a highly partisan speech prepared for the Republican State Central Committee's fall convention, Reagan also condemned Democratic reapportionment, "Gerrymandering", which he said has "cheated" Mexican-Americans.

And he criticized anti-poverty attorneys who are challenging California's new welfare reform act in the courts.

Reagan strongly endorsed President Nixon's foreign and domestic policies, which recently have been assailed from both the right and the left by some California Republicans.

Delegates were told by U. S. Attorney Genral Mitchell Friday night that Nixon plans "startling" new foreign and domestic "initiatives" between now and the 1972 election. Mitchell also accused Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Vance Hartke, D-Ind., of "gutter politics" in recent criticisms of Nixon's Vietnam policies.

Reagan led a sharp GOP attack on Democratic reapportioning. The legislature next week is scheduled to begin debating the reapportionment of legislative and congressional districts.

"The Democratic gerrymander 10 years ago deliberately deprived our fine citizens of Mexican descent of their rightful share of legislative representation —even though they are California's largest ethnic minority community," Reagan said.

Republican state chairman, Putnam Livermore, charged on Friday that Democrats are "stirring up a typical brand of reapportionment brew" that is "odoriferous."

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Culture In Marin? Well, Door Is Open

"CULTURE HAS FINALLY come to Marin," someone remarked to state Sen. Peter Behr during intermission at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building on opening night.

Metropolitan Opera star Dorothy Kirsten had already sung her first number. The Marin Symphony Orchestra had already played the world permiere of a newly composed symphonic suite.

The comment which reached Behr's ears sounded like a statement of the obvious.

"Not really," he responded. "We have only the facility which will make it possible for culture to come to Marin."

THE SAN FRANCISCO Symphony has increased the number of its concerts scheduled in Marin for the coming season to four.

After two decades, the Marin Symphony Guild has been revitalized as the Marin Symphony Association and is preparing a long calendar of events for the new season, mostly centered at the new auditorium.

A Marin Concert Association has just been organized and foresees a schedule of four or five fall and winter events, beginning with Frula, the Yugoslavian folk dancers, Nov. 22.

The Family Service League will sponsor its a.m. series of six lectures and musical programs, starting Oct. 15.

Marin Civic Ballet and Actors Playhouse of Marin also have productions scheduled at the new auditorium.

THE MARIN SYMPHONY Orchestra, 85 professional and non-professional musicians under the baton of Sandor Salgo, never sounded so fine as in the new auditorium. Some thought they "played over their heads" on opening night, as the sports writers might say. Others, including I-J music critic Maybelle Speckmann, believe the Marin Symphony has long been just as good, but never before played in a place where the acoustics enabled listeners to hear how good it really was.

Either way, those who have faithfully supported the growth and development of Marin Symphony for the past 20 years can be justly proud of what their efforts finally have produced.

Marin Symphony has three concerts scheduled for the season ahead — Nov. 23, March 7, and April 11. The Marin Symphony Association also sponsors two performances of the Marin Youth Orchestra and a concert by Orchestra Piccola, both conducted by Hugo Rinaldi.

THE MARIN SYMPHONY Association is conducting its annual membership drive and season ticket sale.

Tickets for the four Marin concerts of the San Francisco Symphony are already on sale, as are tickets for the a.m. series of six lectures and music programs.

To supplement Senator Behr's remarks, one might say that culture is presently knocking on Marin's door.

If we wish to welcome culture to Marin, we need only open the door (of the ticket office).

Tickets for all these events are now available in one place, for the first time. A box office is open at the Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center where tickets for any and all auditorium events are obtainable.

IF YOU WISH to see the contemporary cultural scene in Marin in full perspective, you must look beyond the new auditorium building.

Dominican College in San Rafael is the site of a never-ending procession of musical and cultural presentations.

San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo is "home" for the Kensington Trio which presents periodic dinner concerts.

The Art and Garden Center in Ross is "home" for the Ross Valley Players, whose newest offering, "The Girl in the Freudian Slip" will open Oct. 22. Art shows are displayed there periodically.

Mill Valley's Bach-to-Mozart group presents its candlelight concerts at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley.

Today marked the opening of Mill Valley's 15th annual fall art festival. It will be open all day again tomorrow from 10 a.m. till dusk in Old Mill Park. The work of more than 200 artists and craftsmen is on display.

College of Marin periodically offers top musical, dramatic and artistic events.

Unfortunately, Festival Theater apparently has died for lack of support and it is said that this season may be the last for Marin Shakespeare Festival.

It is to be hoped that these latter two are not foreshadows of what's ahead culturally for Marin.

Let us hope that everything now in the planning and selling stage is successful and thereby encourages more and better performing arts presentations in the future.

—Jack Craemer

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to the Petaluma Board of Education for pushing a study of year-around school scheduling — an obvious way to teach more children in the same number of classrooms.

BRICKBAT to the Office of Emergency Preparedness for its series of contradictory rulings on who is affected by the President's wage freeze. OEP's inability to make up its mind puts many people — school teachers, particularly — in the position of not knowing from day to day what their pay is to be.

BOUQUETS to parks supervisor Scott Tilden and the San Rafael Beautification Committee for their plan to retain a memory of the old courthouse by incorporating its Fifth Avenue entrance into a "mini-park" at the southeastern highway entrance to San Rafael.

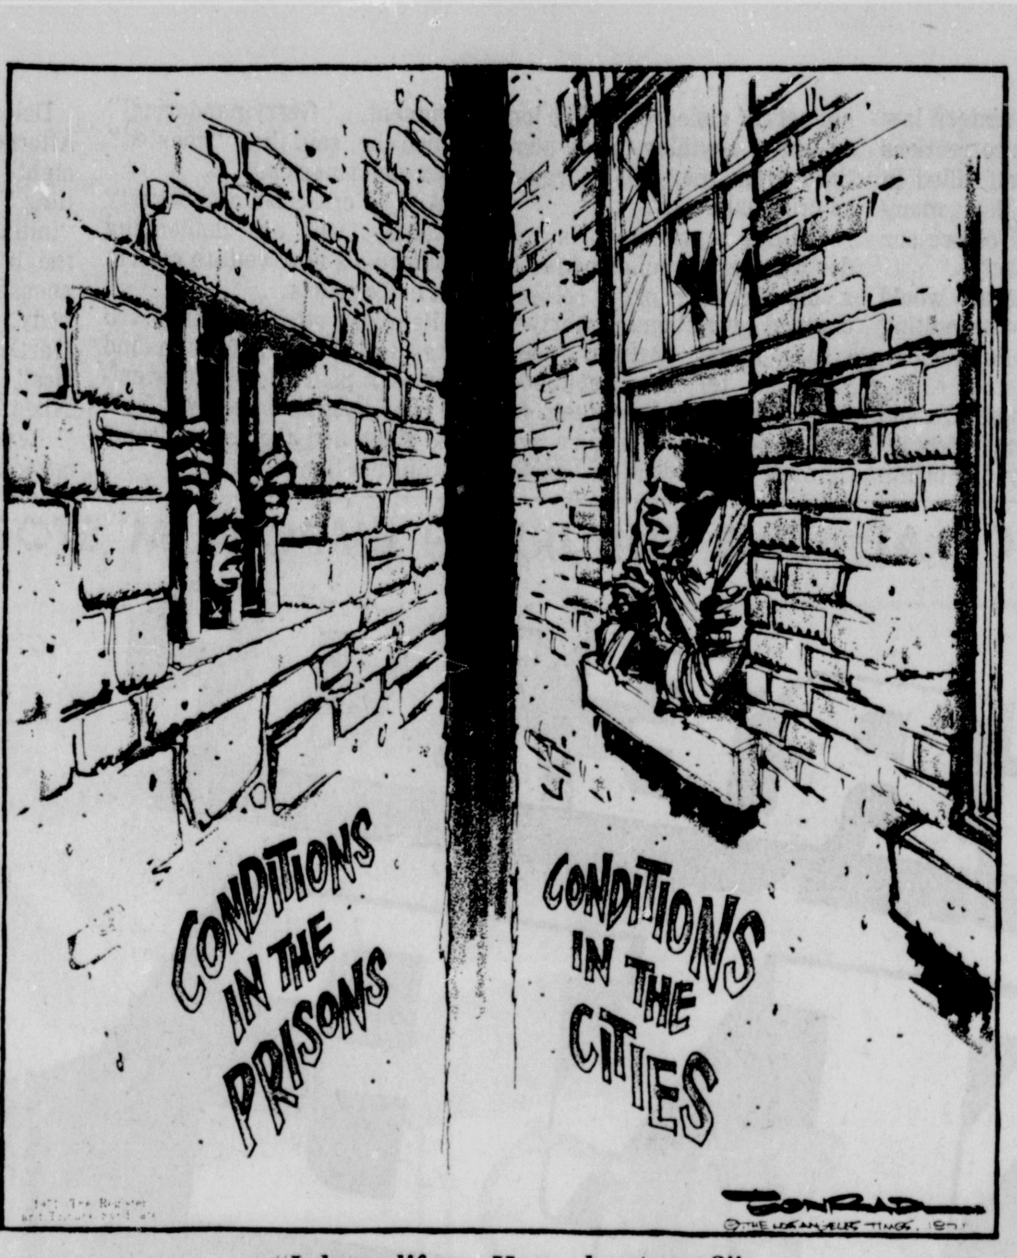
WORTH SAYING AGAIN

If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we should find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm all hostility. — Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.



"I drew life. . .How about you?"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Water District's Request Escalates

On Oct. 26, 1970, you wrote in an editorial supporting Measure H — the $11,500,000 Marin Municipal Water District bond issue that:

"If we thought this $4 million portion of the bond issue (for Marin Aqueduct II, State 1, from Novato to Hamilton AFB) represented merely a downpayment on eventual outby of $60 million or more, we should be very reticent to endorse it."

Now, less than a year later, the Marin Municipal Water District has called a referendum (Measure B) for water approval of a contract with the Sonoma County Water Agency, totalling $23,800,000 ($45,308,000, including interest) for the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct and $11,500,000 ($23,000,000 including interest) for a share of the Army Corps of Engineers Warm Springs Dam. According to County Counsel Doug Maloney, those figures are only estimates, not limitations.

On top of that, MMWD plans call for outlays of $22,110,000 ($41,926,000, including interest) for the Marin Aqueduct which will carry water from the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct terminus in Petaluma to points within the District.

Moreover, planned in-district improvements, including amounts approved last year, but not yet spent, total $33,620,000 ($66,797,000, including interest).

Grand estimated total over $177,000,000!

Who pays for this? We all do. "Very preliminary" reports from Stone and Youngberg, MMWD financial consultants, indicate a total rate increase from 1970-78 of 67.65 per cent (for a lower rate increase plus an ad valorem property tax rate reaching 32 cents per $100 of assessed valuation by 1977). Of course, even higher water bills and taxes would be in store beyond 1978.

TOM THORNER
Kentfield.

Still 'Marvelous Marin' In Letters Column

I've always believed that to find out what kind of community you live in, there's no better way than to read the letters column. "What Our Readers Say" yesterday (Sept. 28) seems to confirm this.

First, we have a lady who asks you to do better because she is "antagonized" by (would you believe it?) four comic strips. Although I agree with her that two of them are personally unamusing, I'm sure she would find it easier to turn the page than for you to terminate your contracts with the suppliers.

Second, a Mr. Pontius . . . a seemingly self-proclaimed expert on the U.S. Constitution, froths about the horror of a citizen of the United States possibly feeling he was a part of a greater whole. After professing to know what was in the minds of the Founding Fathers when they wrote our constitution, the gentleman interprets the Pledge of Allegiance as making one a resident of San Anselmo, and Marin County. He then goes on to interpret the law as to the rights of citizens to vote anything into the Constitution. I may be mistaken, but I did not think the San Anselmans were proposing a constitutional amendment, and I do believe there is such a thing as "dual citizenship" under the laws of the U.S.A. As far as I know, the most generally cited interdiction concerns loss of citizenship as a result of bearing arms in the service of another nation. So I think Mr. Pontius was in his turn "unfair" to Mr. Skewes-Cox (neither of whom I know) and to those citizens of San Anselmo who have forsaken provincialism.

Third, fourth and fifth, however, lowered my adrenalin level back to normal. Mrs. Child has a novel (if probably unfruitful) suggestion to Max Friedman about the question of the future fate of the Town and Country Club acreage in Fairfax. The acting director of the Arab League office in San Francisco makes an even-tempered (if probably unilateral) rebuttal to the statements of the two young Palestinians now living in Marin. And Mr. Jerry Friedman from Point Reyes Station enlightens the rest of us on one of the permitted uses of national parks (in this case, dairying).

So, on balance, I guess, it's still Marvelous Marin. Three-out-of-five really ain't so bad!

Latest Anti-Defamation League Is Simply Wild About Harry

WASHINGTON — I received a call from a guy last week who claimed he was president of the Harry Anti-Defamation League. He said, "You wrote an article last week in which you used the name Harry to make fun of a TV football situation. For years now radio, television and newspaper writers have been holding up the name Harry to ridicule and derision, and we Harrys have banned together to do something about it."

"Now wait a minute, sir," I protested. "I do not always use Harry when I need a fall guy. Sometimes I use George, other times Arnie and quite often I use Henry."

"That's what I mean," Harry said. "Why don't you ever make fun of the Steves or Jims or Jacks or Bills?"

"There is nothing funny about a Steve, a Jim, a Jack or a Bill," I answered frankly. "The image just isn't right. If I call my guy Chuck or Jack, my reader is going to expect him to punch someone in the nose. But if I call him Harry or Fred or Louie, the reader is going to expect him to be punched in the nose. It's as simple as that."

"BUT WHY SHOULD this be? We Harrys and Mortons and Arnies and Chesters have a right to live too."

"I didn't make the rules," I protested. "A long time ago there must have been a Harry who slipped on a banana peel. From then on, any time a writer needed a name for someone who was going to get all fouled up, he used Harry."

"Well, we Harrys don't like it," Harry said. "It's bad enough that people are always making fun of Harry, but it's even worse when they make him the guy who commits the crime on a TV show."

"I don't know why you take offense at that," I said. "Everyone knows that if a Harry doesn't have two left feet, he probably has criminal instincts."

"Yeah, but why does a Harry always have to be one of Rocco's boys or Frank's henchmen? Why can't he be the leader of the mob?"

"PEOPLE JUST DON'T think of Harry as a leader," I said. "Writers know this. If they have to come up with a name for a gang leader they would rather go with Red or Dusty or Phil. You just can't see a Harry being the brains behind a bank job. As a matter of fact, it's more likely that he's the guy to make the fatal error so everyone gets caught."

"You see? All your prejudices about Harrys are coming through. Those of us who are not public jokes are stool pigeons."

"Not necessarily," I said. "Max is more liable to rat on the gang than Harry."

"WE AREN'T TAKING IT any more," Harry said. "From now on every time we see a Harry presented in a bad light on television, we're going to call the sponsor and tell him that everyone in this country named Harry is going to boycott his product. And we also intend to cancel our subscriptions to any newspaper that holds up a Harry to derision."

"Frankly, sir . . . " I began.

"The name's Harry," he said angrily.

"Harry, then," I said. "I think you're being oversensitive. If your name was Hubert or Alfred or even Bert you might have a case. But I only use Harry when I'm looking for a minor schnook. If I'm looking for a real hopeless case I'll never use Harry."

"Who do you use then?"

"Marvin."

Phantom Fighters Give Rogers Only Middle East 'Blue Chip'

WASHINGTON — Sec. of State William P. Rogers' meeting with the foreign ministers of Israel and the Arab states in New York will present a position sure to arouse familiar passions. Despite reports to the contrary, the present intention is to hold firm against repeated Israeli requests for numbers of Phantom fighter-bombers.

The decision is based on the conviction that the balance of military power continues to be in Israel's favor for all the extensive weaponry the Soviet Union has given Egypt. The latest supersonic fighters and the most-advanced ground-to-air defensive missiles are part of the weaponry, along with 15,000 Russian technicians and pilots.

Within the State Department the words of Israel's own leaders are taken to support the conviction. In June Prime Minister Golda Meir told the kneeset that "during the past year the United States has expressed in deeds its understanding of the need to maintain the military balance between Israel and the Arab states." Of the Rogers' peace initiative, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said on Aug. 12, "We gained not only the cease-fire, which still continues, but an increase of defensive strength at a rate such as we had not known until then."

AN ARTICLE OF FAITH in the present determination to leave the arms balance unchanged is that Egypt's President Anwar El-Sadat means peace. He wants to improve the lot of his own people. Therefore, military adventures and even bigger military spending are ruled out. If the Sadat rhetoric is now and then bellicose, policymakers write it off as just that — rhetoric for the Arab world.

Back of the Rogers stand at the U.N. is the belief there is still a change for an interim settlement that will see the opening of the Suez Canal. This would be taken by both sides as a first step toward a final compromise agreement. The frank appraisal is that the odds are against it. But, with the fuel for still another war piled up in the Middle East, hope persists.

The present decision on the Phantoms will increasingly get into domestic politics as 1972 draws nearer. Support for Israel has long been a political staple, with the Democrats traditionally pushing for all-out help. A great deal of Democratic campaign money comes from wealthy Jews on the liberal-Democratic side of the fence.

In Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson's presidential campaign, on the verge of public avowal, championship of Israel is a major theme. He relates this to the threat of the Soviet Union and the big Russian military buildup in the Mediterranean. The senator proposes a $500 million credit to Israel to buy arms.

An objective look at Rogers' bargaining position, as he tries once again in face-to-face confrontations to bring off the peace initiative, raises serious doubts. How do you bargain in such a tough game without impressive bargaining counters? The Phantoms could conceivably be such a counter.

WITH SO MUCH AT STAKE, Rogers might say to Israel, "Yes, we will let you have the Phantoms if you accept the terms of an interim settlement. Let the Egyptians cross the canal with flags flying and take a position whether it be "X" or "Y" yards or miles on the Israeli-held side. And there is no point in arguing about the distance the Egyptians would move, since we propose to put a neutral force between the two sides."

Offering nothing tangible, Rogers is asking the Israelis to give up what they have — part of what they won in the six-day war in 1967 — without a quid pro quo. That is not bargaining. It is a wistful belief that virtue must triumph where it has never triumphed before.

Positions are hardening. By unanimous vote of the U.N. Security Council, including the United States and the Soviet Union, Israel was called on to change policies on housing and population that confirm Israeli expansion in the old city of Jerusalem, united by the triumph over Jordan in the 1967 war. Israel promptly let it be known that it would ignore such a demand that included a call for a U.N. investigative mission.

No one would deny Rogers an "E" for effort. If he is given one of the vacancies on the supreme court, as is rumored, his successor will confront a perilous Middle East deadlock.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Spying Widely Accepted; Russ Just Overdid It

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

If not the world's oldest profession, then spying must be close to it.

And even in this age of automation and electronics, the individual still plays a prominent role in the business of one nation spying upon another —so prominent indeed that it takes a story like Britain's ouster of 105 Russians at one fell swoop even to raise an eyebrow.

SO RECOGNIZED is the spy's role in international affairs that no one even gets very indignant about it.

For example, last April Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told newspaper editors meeting in Washington of the "major and vital" role U.S. intelligence would have to play in any agreement reached in the U.S.-Soviet SALT talks on limitation of strategic weapons.

He said the United States could undertake such an accord "only if it has adequate intelligence to assure itself that the Soviets are living up to their part."

So far as is known the Russians made no protest to this slur upon their gentlemanly conduct.

THE BRITISH CASE involved a certain amount of usual British sportsmanship. The Russians' mushrooming spy activities in Britain were said to have been known also to the Labor government of Prime Minister Harold Wilson which preceded the present Conservative government under Edward Heath.

The British had suggested to the Russians in a quiet way several times that they should cut back on their spying. Heath apparently acted only after the Russians seemed to indicate spying was among their international privileges.

It was a large figure, as a matter of fact, comprising approximately 20 per cent of all the Russians in Britain, diplomatic, business, tourist or what have you. On an internatinal scale, it almost took the spy business out of the individual category and placed it in mass production.

SO WELL ESTABLISHED is the spy business that Russian indignation over the British action must be taken simply as part of the act.

In 1970 the Soviets awarded a military medal and the Order of Lenin to George Blake, a double agent who escaped in 1966 from Britain's Wormwood Scrubs prison. The awards cited his "selfless activity."

Electronic spying is so commonplace as to be taken for granted.

For example, electronic devices litter the ocean floors reporting the passage of potential enemy submarines. American and Soviet spy-in-the-sky satellites regularly photograph each others' and Communist China's military and nuclear installations.

Russian trawlers report on the U.S. Apollo space program.

DESPITE THE ALMOST open nature of international spying, it is rare that a real international incident develops.

One such came in the U-2 incident of 1960 when the Russians shot down the spy plane piloted by Francis Gary Powers. It broke up a Big Four summit meeting in Paris and prevented a visit by President Eisenhower to the Soviet Union.

President Nixon's administration is taking no chances that a similar incident might prevent his own scheduled visit to Communist China.

The United States has let it be known that flights by U.S. drone spy planes over China have been halted.

Instrumental In Shaping The Politics In The Far East

EISAKU SATO
'God's on my side'

SATO

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's Prime Minister Eisaku Sato is very much like the country he leads —modern and westernized but preserving some ties with the old way.

Perhaps this is part of his political secret that has kept him in office for a longer consecutive term —six years and 10 months — than any prime minister since Japan adopted cabinet government in 1885.

Or perhaps his success goes back to his own summation of his life: "I am ambitious."

Sato has traveled extensively in Europe and America, plays golf, eats Western food and sips Scotch sparingly. But at home with his wife, Hiroko (she is a cousin and it was an old-style marriage arranged by clan elders to keep the property intact), he prefers Japanese dishes, particularly those he remembers from his childhood.

HE IS A conservative man who dresses accordingly and has made his job his hobby, working six-day weeks with few vacations.

That childhood was spent in rural Yamaguchi Province on Japan's main island of Honshu, where he was born March 27, 1901, one of three sons of a small town brewer of rice wine.

His oldest brother, Ichiro, was a vice admiral in the Japanese Navy when Japan's defeat in World War II ended his career. His middle brother, Nobusuke — who adopted his wife's surname of Kishi — was prime minister for two-and-a-half years before student rioting drove him from office in 1961.

Eisaku Sato, the youngest brother, did not begin his career in politics. After winning a law degree at the Imperial University of Tokyo he entered the ministry of railroads as a junior executive and held a top-level job during World War II.

AFTER THE WAR Sato switched to politics and by 1948 was secretary general in Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida's cabinet. In 1949 he was elected to Parliament from his home province, a seat he has held ever since.

Sato became prime minister in November 1964, and his policies continued to encourage Japan's rapid economic growth. A political conservative, he has worked under the theory that the Japanese may be nudged — but certainly not pushed — into change. He has maintained his party's traditional ties with big business and has been pro-American in foreign policy.

"I have the gods on my side," he once told a visitor in speaking of his career, but the gods weren't on the job in 1969 when Mrs. Sato told a magazine writer her husband, in the early days of their marriage, had beaten her and gone out with geishas.

She later explained that "beaten" was too harsh a term for the fact that her husband had impatiently struck her, and that in the old days the geisha party was normal entertainment for a young man.

MRS. SATO has done much to humanize the image of her patient husband, who tries to cautiously influence, rather than dynamically lead, the Japanese.

"Eisaku is not an interesting person," she said once. "When I look at his sleeping face I cannot help feel pathos for his introverted character."

Sato's political enemies see little pathos in the prime minister.

INDIRA GANDHI
Born to the job

GANDHI

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Indira Priyadarshini Gandhi is a widowed grandmother of 54 with a silver streak through her black hair —and a steel trap mind in the pragmatic art of backroom politics.

India's prime minister prefers to ask rather than order, to allow programs to languish sometimes rather than be aggressive —but when she moves to solidify her grip on political power she can be ruthless and effective.

She comes naturally by her competence in political matters, since she was the only child of Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister and a world statesman until his death in 1964.

SHE WAS named to head the government on Jan. 24, 1966, after the death of Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, and according to many accounts elder Congress Party leaders selected her believing she would be both popular and easy to manipulate. They have learned better.

Mrs. Gandhi's political schooling began early with a famous series of letters her father wrote her from a British jail. At age 13 she organized a children's group with 6,000 members to aid the independence movement.

She completed her education at Oxford University and married a young lawyer, Feroze Gandhi (no relation to Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi). She herself was jailed for nine months during that period of struggle for independence from Britain.

WHEN INDEPENDENCE came in 1947 Mrs. Gandhi, her husband and their two sons moved in with her widowed father so she could serve as Nehru's official hostess and trusted political aide. The move resulted in the breakup of her marriage within a few years, and Gandhi died in 1960.

Mrs. Gandhi openly entered politics in 1958, and a year later she was elected president of the Congress Party.

A clue to coming events came a year after Mrs. Gandhi became prime minister. Asked if she thought the Congress Party was hampered by old and ineffective leadership, she replied: "The workers in the field are fine, but we need fresh people at the middle and the top."

IN 1968 SHE moved against her chief party rival, deputy prime minister and finance minister Moraji Desai, and documents leaked out backing charges that Desai's son had become wealthy through business deals while serving as his father's private secretary.

The ministry that leaked the charges was controlled by Mrs. Gandhi's closest friend —who was dropped in a later purge.

A battle for party leadership raged and when the dust settled in November, 1969, there were two parliamentary groups — Desai and other older leaders had 64 "Old" Congress supporters in parliament while Mrs. Gandhi had 227 "New" or Ruling Congress supporters and controlled party machinery. She consolidated her power this year by unexpectedly calling an election, catching her opponents in disarray and emerging with 350 out of 521 parliamentary seats.

MRS. GANDHI draws a veil over her private life, but she appears wholely devoted to politics. She has been known to leaf through a western fashion magazine while on a trip abroad and, while her government formally opposes alcohol, she occasionally sips a sherry.

MAO TSE-TUNG
Man in the shadows

MAO

HONG KONG (UPI) — If, when he travels to Peking, President Nixon meets Mao Tse-tung, he will be meeting a man who probably will know a lot more about him than the President will know about his host.

For all his many years of power and world renown, for all the reverence paid him by more than 700 million Chinese, Mao Tse-tung remains a shadowy figure to the world.

Because of the semi-seclusion in which the Communist Party chairman has now lived for so long, rumors are continually being floated about his health. On several occasions in recent years he has been reported gravely ill, on his death bed. Less than two weeks ago reports circulated the world that he had died. On that occasion, as previously, Peking's spokesmen said he was in good health. The last time he was seen in public was Aug. 7 when he met with Gen. Ne Win, chairman of Burma's revolutionary council.

MAO HAS, over the years, generally appeared at major national functions, such as the Oct. 1 National Day celebrations, waving the smiling in response to the incessatn chanting of "Mao chushi wansui!" (long live Mao) from the rostrum of Peking's Tien An Men (Gate of Heavenly Peace) Square, where he proclaimed the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949. This year's celebration was reported canceled, one of the factors that prompted the rumors Mao might be seriously ill, or even dead.

Except for such appearances, the Chinese public, despite the excessive adulation they give him, rarely sees him.

Mao's history, exploits, accomplishments and political beliefs are well known enough; they are on the record. What sort of a man he is, is more of a puzzle.

Through the years, some sort of image has emerged. He has been described as a chain smoker, to the extent this is said to have given him a cough and worsened what was already not too good a speaking voice. His language, in private, is described as "very down to earth, salty, sometimes downright dirty" to quote one early colleague.

HE IS SAID to like, and to still drink copiously in defiance of doctors' orders, the powerful (over 100 proof) Chinese mao tai wine. Even in his late years — he is 77 — he is said to exercise regularly. He is reported to take long walks daily and still to do alot of swimming (he has swum the Yangtze, China's largest river, several times).

He is described as a voracious reader as well as prolific writer. In dealing with associates he is said to be firm, demanding, and to speak with a "peasant's bluntness." He has always been described as a tremendously hard worker who even today often works through the night until dawn.

Mao was born in December, 1893, the son of a rice farmer, in the village of Shao Shan in the south-central province of Hunan. He apparently knew severe poverty and is said to have been treated harshly as a child by a father who beat him often. Even then, however, it is said he was an avid reader, both of Chinese classics and Western works. He attended school in his native Hunan (where his teachers, too, were said to be very ready with beatings). A rebellious youth by temperament, he was in his teens when he left his native village but not before, according to some accounts, he joined the local revolutionary forces supporting Sun Yat-sen in the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty. This was in 1911, when he was 18.

FORA TIME young Mao worked as an assistant librarian in Peking University, also keeping up his own readingand studies. In July, 1921, he became one of the 12 founding members of the Communist Party of China, and from then onward he was dedicated to the revolutionary cause, concentrating from the very start on building a power base among the peasants.

This historic Communist "Long March" that was to lead him and followers eventually to the defeat of the Nationalist government forces led by Chiang Kai-shek began in October, 1934. The roundabout march, taken to break out of encirclement by the Nationalists and harried by their forces all along the way, took nearly a year and covered almost 6,000 miles.

Mao's forces fought the Japanese in World War II and then turned their power against Chiang in a civil war that lasted from late 1946 until Communist victory in 1949. For 10 years till 1959 Mao was head of state as well as party chairman, but he appeared to lose none of his power when he gave up the former position.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK
Last of Big Five

CHIANG

TAIPEI (UPI) — President Chiang Kai-shek has been a leading actor in the turbulent history of China for nearly half a century and he is the last survivor of the Big Five leaders of World War II.

He will be 84 on Oct. 31, leading an aloof life on his Taiwan stronghold, watching his hopes for return to the Chinese mainland disappear amid the realities of world politics.

It is all very different from when Chiang was born to a farming family in Chikow, Fenghwa district, Chekiang Province. His parents named him Chiang Chung-cheng, but he later changed his given name to Kai-shek, which means "rock hard."

A TEACHER described him as a proud and humorless boy, wandering away in deep thought as his classmates played. He was married at age 14 to a bride his mother chose, in the traditional Chinese way, and whom he divorced later in life.

He grew to young manhood under the corrupt Manchu dynasty.

Despite this, in 1906 he was admitted to Paoting Military Academy and because of his brilliant record there was chosen for advanced study in Japan. Upon graduation in 1909 he became a member of the Japanese army.

It was in Japan that he met Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who was to become China's first president. When revolution broke out at home in 1911 he left immediately to join the successful fight.

SUN DIED in 1925 and the Republican government was foreign-dominated. Although Chiang and the Communists were mutually suspicious, they remained united long enough to stage the successful 1926-27 revolt. A Communist who helped organize the countryside for Chiang's Kuomintang Army was Mao Tse-tung. In 1927, when Chiang turned against the Communists, one of those marked for death — and who escaped — was Chou Enlai.

Chiang's break with the Communists won him support among foreigners and wealthy Chinese but his power held only in Central China. Elsewhere local warlords ruled.

Chiang was determined to crush the Communists but never succeeded, although he inflicted heavy losses and in 1933 forced them out of their Kiangsi stronghold for the "long march" to barren Shensi province in northwest China where they began building a new power base.

WHEN JAPAN invaded Manchuria in 1931, Chiang continued to concentrate his efforts on defeating the Communists, saying: "Japan is a disease of the skin, Communism is a disease of the heart."

In 1937 the Japanese, whose intelligence reported Chiang and the Communists might settle their differences long enough to unite against the foreign enemy, began the real invasion of China. It wasn't until Japan's surrender in 1945 that the Kuomintang and the Communists were completely free to battle it out. Chiang lost and was driven from the mainland to Taiwan in 1949, proclaiming his intention to return.

He has lived on Taiwan ever since,

PRESIDENT SUHARTO
An iron will

SUHARTO

JAKARTA (UPI)—President Suharto of Indonesia has been called "the smiling general" because of his quick grin and quiet manner —but behind the smile lie personal shyness and an iron will on public matters.

There is nothing flashy or charismatic about soft-spoken Suharto, nothing to remind Indonesians of the man he succeeded, Sukarno. Suharto was a relatively obscure major general in the army strategic reserves when he first came into the public spotlight on the morning of Oct. 1, 1965.

Communist assassins had killed six top army generals in an attempted coup d'etat. Finding himself senior in command, Suharto acted with speed and skill to abort the coup and so impressed the Indonesian Congress they voted for him to gradually replace Sukarno.

ONE OF THE myths about Suharto is that he escaped assassination because a soothsayer had warned him to be out of Jakarta that night. And it is true that Suharto, like many Javanese Moslems, believes in mysticism and — reports say — does consult a soothsayer. But he has denied the story, explaining:

"On the night of September 30 I actually went to see my ailing youngest son in the military hospital. All other reports are mere thumbsucking. I left the hospital about midnight, returned straight home and went to bed."

He speculates that the Communists spared him "because they probably considered me a minor officer who could be handled later." There was little in his public record to warn the Communists of their mistake.

SUHARTO WAS born June 8, 1921 in the central Javan village of Kemusu Argamulja, the son of a landless peasant. He attended school sporadically — those run by the Dutch, then the Japanese — but was little affected by western culture.

After a brief career as a bank clerk, at 19 he joined the Indonesian army, then sponsored by the Dutch. During World War II he served in the forces recruited by the Japanese, and after the war joined the war for independence from the Dutch.

He rose quickly and steadily in the army hierarchy after independence, but he remained aloof from the corruption that riddled the Sukarno regime. To this day he avoids ostentation.

He has one wife, Hartinah, and three sons and three daughters. Fishing is his great love and he enjoys swimming, hunting and bicycle riding.

FERDINAND E. MARCOS
The hero of Bataan

MARCOS

MANILA (UPI)—"Basically he is a scholar, not a politician, an introvert, not a handshaker."

That is how a biographer described Ferdinand E. Marcos, sixth president of the Philippine Republic —but in contradiction Marcos is the first Philippine president to win reelection since independence in 1946.

He is a firm friend of the United States, and the man who eased the rigid anti-Communist laws of his country. He is married to a former beauty queen and his spectacular background includes being convicted of murder and being his nation's most decorated war hero.

MARCOS WAS born on Sept. 11, 1917, in Sarrat in the province of Ilocos Norte on Luzon Island, the son of an educator-turned politician who taught his four children, "Don't start a fight unless you can win it."

Both parents —particularly Marcos' teacher-mother — stressed the importance of reading and scholarship; at the same time Marcos and his brothers learned boxing, hiking in mountains and jungles, marksmanship, hunting and swimming.

In 1939, at the age of 22, Marcos was accused of the murder of a local politician who had defeated his father in an election. He completed his schooling at the University of the Philippines while out on bail under police guard, and passed his bar examinations. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to 17 years and 4 months imprisonment. Refusing a presidential pardon and although not yet formally sworn in as a lawyer, Marcos argued his own appeal before the Supreme Court and won acquittal.

DURING WORLD WAR II he was wounded five times, won 22 decorations including the U.S. Distinguished Service Cross which Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur pinned on, commenting that without Marcos, Bataan might have fallento the Japanese three months earlier than it did.

Marcos was a fast-rising young lawyer in 1949 when he first ran for the Philippine Congress, telling his followers in his home province that if they elected him, they would also be electing a future president.

He fulfilled the prophecy at noon on Dec. 30, 1965, when he was sworn in as president. He was reelected in 1969, advocating "free and mature" relations with the United States and closer ties with neighboring Asian countries.

Hungarian Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, who once said, "A dead cardinal may be worth more to the cause of freedom than a live one," emerged, alive, from the U.S. embassy in Budapest.

The Hungarian primate's departure and flight to the Vatican Tuesday ended 15 years of self-imposed refuge from the Hungarian government, which had kept an unmarked car parked daily outside the embassy to take the 79-year-old prelate back to jail if he stepped outside.

For 26 years, Mindszenty had fought the Communists who took over Hungary. Twenty-three of those years he spent in jail or at the embassy accused by the government of treason.

THE GOVERNMENT had told him he could leave the embassy and the country — but never return. That was a condition Mindszenty could not accept until Pope Paul VI ordered him to leave, "to make the hardest sacrifice of your life." Mindszenty did, saying, "I accept what will be perhaps the heaviest cross of my life."

In London, the British Foreign Office identified the Soviet agent who defected and provided information which led to the expulsion of 105 Soviets on charges of engaging in espionage and plotting sabotage. The agent, the British said, was Oleg Lyalin, an obscure member of the Soviet trade delegation, who in August had been charged with drunken driving.

North Vietnamese troops mounted a major offensive which allied commanders said was aimed at trying to embarrass President Nguyen Van Thieu only days before the South Vietnamese election in which Thieu is the only candidate. Allied forces quickly rushed thousands of reinforcements to the area 80 miles northwest of Saigon along the Cambodian border to stall the drive. Massive U.S. air support accompanied the counteroffensive against three North Vietnamese divisions.

THE UNITED STATES' two-China policy received another setback in the United Nations when Canada and Iceland gave strong indications they would vote against the U.S. plan and instead support a move to allow only Communist China a seat in the body.

American Trade In The Far East Has Skyrocketed During The Past Decade

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Far East, more familiar to most Americans as a battleground than a market place, has become a major American trading partner.

Trade officials expect U.S. exports to Asian nations to reach a record $10 billion this year. But because American imports from the Far East outweigh exports, the trade relationship is proving to be a sweet and sour experience.

Still famed for their highly prized silks and spices, Asian nations also serve as primary producers of raw materials for the manufacturing plants of developed nations. In return they buy American agricultural goods and basic machinery for their own industrialization.

ALTHOUGH MOST Americans remember Asia only as the scene of three major wars in as many decades, American trade with the area has increased sharply in the past six years, jumping 23 per cent in 1970 alone, according to Commerce Department officials.

The officials appear confident Asian markets for American goods will continue to expand, although not at the pace of 1970. That makes the Asian market increasingly important to American businessmen and farmers.

In fact, once American involvement in the Vietnam War is ended, Washington officials hope that American businessmen will replace soldiers as the major U.S. image in Asia.

On the other hand, American consumers have only to recall the number of "made in Japan" or "made in Hong Kong" labels on goods they have bought to realize the impact that Asian imports have had on the U.S. economy.

JAPAN HAS proven to be both the hero and the villain in the American trade position in Asia. Japan is the greatest American market in Asia and its greatest trade rival at the same time.

Largely because Japanese exports to the American market are 28 per cent ahead of last year's rate —with Tokyo doing virtually nothing to halt the pace — "the 1971 deficit with Japan will be well over $2 billion," a Commerce Department official told UPI recently.

This was one of the major factors that caused President Nixon to announce his dramatic economic shift, including a 10 per cent import surcharge which some officials concede was aimed primarily at Japanese exports.

Trade problems have become so sensitive between Washington and Tokyo, in fact, that some officials here fear a trade war could erupt.

In mid-September, Nixon emphasized during an impromptu press conference in his oval office that "friendship and alliance" between Japan and the United States was indispensable because both countries "inevitably are going to be economic competitors."

NIXON ALSO recognized that Japan produces more goods than the whole of Southeast Asia, including mainland China, combined, and stressed the need to "reduce the tensions" between Washington and Tokyo on economic matters.

The two imponderables in the Asian trade scene are what effect the import surcharge will have on Asian exports to the United States and general world trade policy reform, and how big a market mainland China will prove to be for American and Japanese goods in the future.

Officials in Washington say it is too early even to speculate on either point.

Second only to Canada in world importance as an American market, Japan unquestionably is the greatest U.S. trading partner in Asia. Purchasing enormous tons of American coal, lumber, chemicals, soybeans, aircraft and corn, Japan alone accounts for more than half of all American exports to Asia.

IN RETURN, Japan ships to the United States iron and steel products, textiles and clothing, and the pianos, television and radio sets, stereos, cameras, and automobiles that have become so familiar to American consumers.

According to Commerce and State Department officials, Japan imported a staggering $5.56 billion worth of American goods in 1970, and sent $5.95 billion worth of their goods to the United States.

That is five times the amount of imports and 10 times the exports to the United States by Australia, America's second largest trading partner in the Pacific.

Sausalito Chosen As Site For Programs

Students from the Marin City Learning Center who desire to participate in federally-funded remedial math and reading programs will have to attend the special classes in Sausalito schools, the Sausalito School District Board has ruled.

Earlier this month the district learned it would have to provide the federal programs to children who attend the learning center, a private school in Marin City.

In voting to hire 10 aides and a community worker for the federal Title One program Thursday night, the board, by a 3-1 vote, agreed the Title One services would be available and administered only in the district. No aides or services would be provided at the learning center itself, the board decided. Fifteen children at the center are eligible for the federal program.

The dissenting vote was cast by Trustee Jerry L. Whitcomb, who objected to the restriction.

Trustee Robert A. Thompson told the Independent-Journal that representatives of the state Department of Compensatory Education, which oversees administration of the federal funds, had informed the district Thursday that the state prefers that the funds be used "directly by and at public schools in our district. This is the district's preference, too, because we cannot properly oversee administration of the funds if part of the program is held at the learning center."

Thompson Thursday night reiterated an earlier suggestion that some of the federal money could be used to bus youngsters from the learning center to the school district to participate in the program. If money was needed for busing, he asked Supt. Lawrence A. Lindberg if the number of aides could be reduced at a later date. The superintendent said that would be possible.

Thompson also warned the Title One Advisory Committee (a group of parents and staff members which will work to set up the federal program) not to present the board with a plan which calls for aides or services at the learning center. "If they do, we are not going to approve it," he said.

The board voted to hire the following aides, one of whom will be chosen community worker, for the Title One program: Gloria Sweeney, Flora White, Jackie Harris, Rachel Hinton, Evelyn Magee, Ruby Myles, Georgia Payton, Catherine Johnson, Marjorie Blakemore, Heather Douglas and Dolores Talley.

Two aides, dismissed last week by the board because of their involvement with the Marin City Learning Center, were re-employed Thursday night by the board.

In reversing its decision to fire aides Hazel Curry and Jackie Harris, the board acted on the advice of County Counsel Richard V. Godino who said the dismissals were, in his opinion, not legal.

The women, who are both members of the board of the learning center were fired by the board for what it termed "conflict of interest."

Knifepoint Assault Of Woman, 25

A 25-year-old woman was kidnapped and raped at knifepoint in Sausalito Thursday night by a man who stopped to ask her for directions, then forced her into his vehicle.

Detective William G. Palmini said the woman told police she was walking on Bulkley Avenue toward the downtown area about 9:20 p.m. when a silver grey auto pulled up beside her. When she approached the driver's side of the vehicle to answer a question about directions, she said the man grabbed her by the neck and placed a six-inch knife against her throat.

She reported he then forced her into the car, threatening to kill her if she did not do as he said.

According to the victim, the man directed her to lie on the floorboard of the car's front seat with a coat over her head. She said he drove to a secluded area, forced her to disrobe and sexually assaulted her.

Afterward, he allowed her to dress, then drove her to the Spencer Avenue off ramp from Highway 101 and let her out, she reported.

The woman sought assistance from the nearby Sausalito Fire Station No. 2 and notified police who took her to Marin General Hospital for treatment.

Palmini said her assailant was described as a Negro in his 20s, with an Afro hair style and a mustache. The detective said she also described the man as 5 feet, 8 inches tall, about 160 pounds, wearing blue levis and a rust-colored, short sleeved sweater.

Burglars Unbolt, Cart Off Huge Saw

A heavy, electric-powered masonry saw was unbolted from its stand outside a contractor's shop and stolen Thursday, San Rafael police reported today.

The $450 saw was taken from the 708 Francisco Boulevard shop operated by James Cleo Muse, 33 Grove Street, after the shop had closed for the day.

Woman Hurt

Rosemary Drexler, 48, of 1714 Caracas Court, Petaluma, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for head cuts suffered in an accident at 8:10 p.m. Thursday at Ely Boulevard South at Capistrano Avenue. Petaluma Police had no details of the accident.

Innocent Plea By Killing Suspects

BERKELEY (UPI) —Larry N. Houston, 26, and Daniel J. Houston, 22, have pleaded innocent to charges of killing an armored car guard in a holdup at a Berkeley supermarket.

The two brothers entered their plea Thursday in Berkeley-Albany Municipal Court.

They were charged with the shooting last week in a holdup of the U-Save market.

Car Thief Just Wanted Trade-In

A supposed customer drove off with a used car from an auto dealer's lot Thursday, leaving a stolen car in exchange, San Rafael police reported.

Salesmen at Dexter Toyota reported a man about 23 years old arrived at their used car lot near closing time. He said he wanted to test drive a 1968 Volkswagen sedan, while leaving his 1971 Pontiac at the lot.

He never returned. Police found the larger car had been reported stolen from Oakland Sept. 24.

Student Count

MANILA (UPI)—An estimated 11.8 million students were enrolled in Philippine schools for the 1971-72 school year. The distribution was 9 million in public schools, 2 million in private schools, 200,000 in state colleges and universities, and 600,000 in private higher educational institutions.

The Rich Beggars Face Other 'Jobs'

KARACHI, Pakistan (UPI)—Karachi's "rich" beggars may have to look for other jobs. The Sind government is reported to be considering a total ban on beggary.

A survey recently revealed there are 15,000 beggars in Karachi, 75 per cent of whom are professionals. The remaining 25 per cent are the genuine "poor and destitute," including a large number of lepers,

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jack Paar has sold another of his filmed African adventures to NBC for broadcasting during the 1971-72 season. It's called "Jack Paar's African Diary," the result of a four-month jaunt through Africa.

Helen Hayes will be seen during the season in a suspense comedy, "Do Not Fold, Spindle or Mutilate," on the ABC "Movie of the Week" series. She plays one of four elderly women who create a fictional girl for a computer-dating questionnaire.

Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, former governor of California, plays a judge in one of the lawyer segments of NBC's "The Bold Ones" series during the 1971-72 season. The episode is called "The Strange Secret of Yermo Hill."

ABC will give an early 1972 air date to "The Enchanted World of Danny Kaye," an animated one-hour special in which the star will be host-narrator for a retelling of the classic Hans Christian Andersen story, "The Emperor's New Clothes."

John McGiver, fine character actor being seen this season as a chemistry professor on NBC's "The Jimmy Stewart Show," commutes from Hollywood to his home in New York's northern Catskills as often as his work schedule permits. Home is a reconverted former Baptist church that is now a 12-room dwelling. McGiver needs the space — he has 10 children.

James Stacy, Dean Stockwell and Stefanie Powers will head the cast of 20th Century-Fox's "The Paper Man" for its new "CBS Friday Night Movie."

Peter Graves will take time off from his "Mission: Impossible" series to play a guest role on Sandy Duncan's new show, "Funny Face."

James Lydon, who grew up playing "Henry Aldrich," and Johnny Crawford, the juvenile co-star of "Rifleman," will guest star in an episode of Glenn Ford's "Cade's County."

Spill Is Part Of Skating

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Olympic champion and television ice skating star Peggy Fleming is married to a fledgling doctor — and just as well.

All those hours performing and practicing on ice have resulted in a perpetual cold for the young beauty who went directly from the Olympics to instant stardom in show business.

Husband Dr. Greg Jenkins is undergoing his internship in San Francisco, still unsure of the medical specialty he may select.

IT WOULD BE presumptuous to advise the young physician. But on the face of things he could do worse than specialize in the cold virus research program or become an orthopedic suregeon.

The latter is submitted for consideration in the event Peggy breaks a limb during her arduous routines on ice.

All skaters, even Olympic champs, tumble once in a while and Peggy admits to taking a spill about once every 30 or 40 performances during her tours with the Ice Follies.

PEGGY SAID, "It's very embarrassing when you fall with a large audience looking on. But sometimes it is unavoidable.

"The reasons for most falls are pennies, popcorn and feathers. Children throw coins on the ice and sometimes spill popcorn. The feathers come from costumes of the other skaters.

"I've been hospitalized twice after running over coins. They not only cause you to fall, they ruin your skates. That's why you'll see so many skaters looking down at the ice when they're performing. Any little foreign object can cause you to stop unexpectedly and fall."

THUS FAR Peggy, a blue-eyed brunette, has escaped serious injury.

But having a doctor in the wings at home is reassuring.

Peggy was last seen Sept. 11 on television in a re-run of her video special, "Peggy Fleming At Sun Valley." In January she will travel through Europe filming still another special for Bob Banner, her producer and show business mentor.

Peggy is a refreshing conversationalist because she pops up with surprisingly honest replies to questions.

ASKED WHAT she thought of United States' chances in the Olympic ice skating competition next year in Japan, she replied, "I'm going to do the television commentary for the skating and I think we ought to win three gold medals. There are a lot of fine young skaters coming up."

How do today's skater compare with the late Sonja Henie?

"We don't run on our toes as much," Peggy replied.

WHAT'S THE most difficult thing about skating other than pennies, popcorn and feathers?

"The spotlights," Peggy said.

PEGGY FLEMING
Even the best fall

"They blind you and disorient you during a performance."

What else?

"I get dizzy when I do those fast spins," Peggy concluded. "I'm always afraid if I don't focus on one particular face or prop that I'll fall down."

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The Hollywood record label owned by Herb Alpert, A & M, does not glut the market with LP releases, but nearly all of those which they do produce show a lot of thought, planning and just plain good taste.

Here are a few new and not-so-new worthy of attention:

"JOE COCKER!" A & M SP 4224: Spastic British singer Cocker emulates Ray Charles but is plenty original in his gruff, self-involved song treatments. Many of the tunes in this album were heard in his recent film "Mad Dogs and Englishmen": Hitchcock Railway," "Delta Lady," and "Something." His unique approach to these songs marks him as one of the leading male rock singers of today.

"SOMETHING IN THE WIND" — The Winter Consort — A & M SP 4207: I've already proselytized for this unrivaled group which spans the world of music from Bach to Jerry Jeff Walker. The primary quality which this ensemble of sax, English horn, flute, cello, bass, guitar, drums, lute etc. searches out in their music seems to be beauty. Relax and bathe your harried ears in the luscious sounds of tidbits such as the theme from "Romeo and Juliet," Bach's Air on the G Stirng, a wild Ives chamber piece titled "The Indians," a Bulgarian folktune, part of Ravel's "Tomb of Couperin," and "Mr. Bojangles," among others. Four stars for Paul Winter and his group.

"BRIDGE OVER TROUBLED WATER" — Paul Desmond — A & M SP 3032: Speaking of sax players with good taste and talent, Dave Brubeck's former right-hand man has been doing some excellent work with arranger Don Sebesky (known for his award-winning work with Wes Montgomery).

This album devoted entirely to Paul Simon's words and music includes such standards as "Mrs. Robinson" and "Feelin' Groovy" as well as the title song and some others which were more unfamiliar since I'm not a rabid Simon and Garfunkel fan. Everything Sebesky is associated with glows with subtle, often classically-influenced touches and is full of variety and original ideas; this lovely LP is no exception. Too bad Charlie Parker didn't have Sebesky to work with when he did his famous sessions with strings.

"TIDE" — Antonio Carlos Jobim — A & M SP 3031: The composer of "Girl from Ipanema" plays piano and guitar with his small group and strings in another gorgeous pop album from A & M that is sure to appeal to listeners whether they are into jazz, Latin or just mood music. Iespecially liked the title tune, "Carinhoso," and "Rockanalia" —which doesn't have anything to do with rock by the way.

"CEREMONY" — an electronic mass written by Pierre Henry and Gary Wright, performed by Spooky Tooth — A & M SP 4225: Henry is one of the leading French composers of electronic/musique concrete. His collaboration with a rock group is unusual to say the least. The results will not appeal to everybody, but I found them interesting listening, especially on my pseudo-four-channel playback system with speakers in the rear of the room. The six sections vary in effect from a rather straight rock mass with vocalist Mike Harrison in the foreground and Henry's far-out sounds as strictly background, to a full-fledged electronic cataclysm worthy of the best of Jimi Hendrix.

"FAIRPORT CONVENTION" — A & M SP 4185: This is a nifty little folk-oriented group whose material ranges from medieval songs to Bob Dylan and originals by group members. The British origin of Fairport is noted in many of their tunes. Their extreme youth does not prevent a notable achievement on this LP.

"BROKEN BARRICADES" — Procol Harum — A & M SP 4294: This major British rock group has been one of my personal favorites since the days of "Whiter Shade of Pale." The creations of Gary Brooker, who writes the music and sings it, and Keith Reid, whose job is the trenchant words, are among the most worthwhile to be heard in the deluge of rock. Organist Chris Copping is also a key figure in the performing group of four. "Luskus Delph" is pure Dada in the vein of Captain Beefheart and "Playmate of the Mouth".

ROBIN HOOD is just one of the colorful characters from medieval history who have been performing feats of derring-do at the fifth annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire and Ha' Penny Market weekends in the Oak Forest at Black Point near Novato. The faire is in its final weekend this weekend and will conclude tomorrow with a final fling of revelry from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Some 150 of the West's finest craftsmen are participating in the faire, demonstrating their skills and selling their wares from rustic stalls. Marin Poets' Corner

He sat with his dog
at Candlestick gate —
his accordian lamenting
finger-tip sight —

when a tossed coin rang
a dissonant note
in a tin cup vowing
eternal night.

"Get your scorecard here!"
brought a canine sigh
and with chin on paws
and puckered brow
boredom closed his seeing eyes —
both dog and man
were sightless now.

The crack of a bat
and "That one is gone!"
the fun of seeing a
Mays' homerun —
it's one to nothing
but nothing to one
who sits with his dog
at Candlestick gate.

A Fairground Grows At Civic Center

See Page M2

The Building Of An Oasis

New Marin Fairgrounds Represent 60 Days Of Intensified Labor

"It will be a site to behold," said Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, manager of the Marin County Fair, and she was really emphasizing her play on words.

Because Mrs. McCoy was talking about the location of the Marin Fair, which will open at 10 a.m. next Friday for a four-day run on its new 80-acre site north of the Marin Civic Center. And those who have seen the sights at the site know what she is talking about.

In a 60-day period, architect Aaron Green of the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation landscape contractor A&J Shooter of San Rafael, and Mrs. McCoy's staff have been hard at work turning a barren, dusty stretch of ground into a veritable oasis.

NOW, JUST days before the opening of the first Marin County Fair at the Civic Center, the lawns, plants, shrubs and trees are in place and awaiting the crowds of adults and youngsters, from in and out of Marin, who are expected to flock to the "new look" fair.

From 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. each day from Friday through Oct. 11, the fair will be open to offer its conglomerate exhibits of gardens, flowers, fruits and vegetables, carnival and boat rides, art, sculpture and craft booths, displays by commercial and non-profit organizations.

There will also be daily entertainment which will feature ballet, folk and square dancing, comedy shows, country rock music, and the first Marin Film Fair competition, with winners in the independent and student categories plus a prize-winning film on the "Man and Nature" theme.

IN ADDITION, there will be the National Aeronautics and Space Administration exhibit with its authentic Moon Rock as an added attraction for fair visitors.

But none of these attractions would seem very appealing or exciting without the fair's lush, green environment.

And that is what Aaron Green, the Shooter firm and Mrs. McCoy and her aides have been working so hard to attain these past 60 days.

"We really started from scratch," Green admits, "and in some cases we had to use sod instead of seed so as to develop grass in three weeks and cut down on the dust. But we all felt it could be done, and we know the visitors to the fair will like it."

NEIL SHOOTER, of the contracting firm, noted that the landscaping is really in the character of Marin, although there are some unusual trees, like a couple of Austrian black pines.

"But the big trees, 25 to 30 feet tall, are cedar and pine to make Marinites feel right at home," he added.

The landscaping includes three and a half acres of planting around the Marin Veterans Memorial Auditorium with entry and interior gardens, as well as a large planting area between the auditorium's parking lot and Civic Center Drive.

Many parts of the fairgrounds are not landscaped, to provide space for the booths and the floriculture, horticulture and art displays.

BUT THE landscaped area has been covered with nearly 3,800 plants, more than 6,100 groundcover cuttings and two and a third acres of lawn.

The plants are divided into 52 varieties, including a total of 200 trees, 14 of which are the large cedars and pines.

The plants and lawns will be watered by 600 sprinkler heads which will be fed through three and a third miles of pipe. The water flow will be controlled by 37 remote control valves triggered automatically from three master controllers through four miles of electric wiring.

All of this was installed in the 60 days.

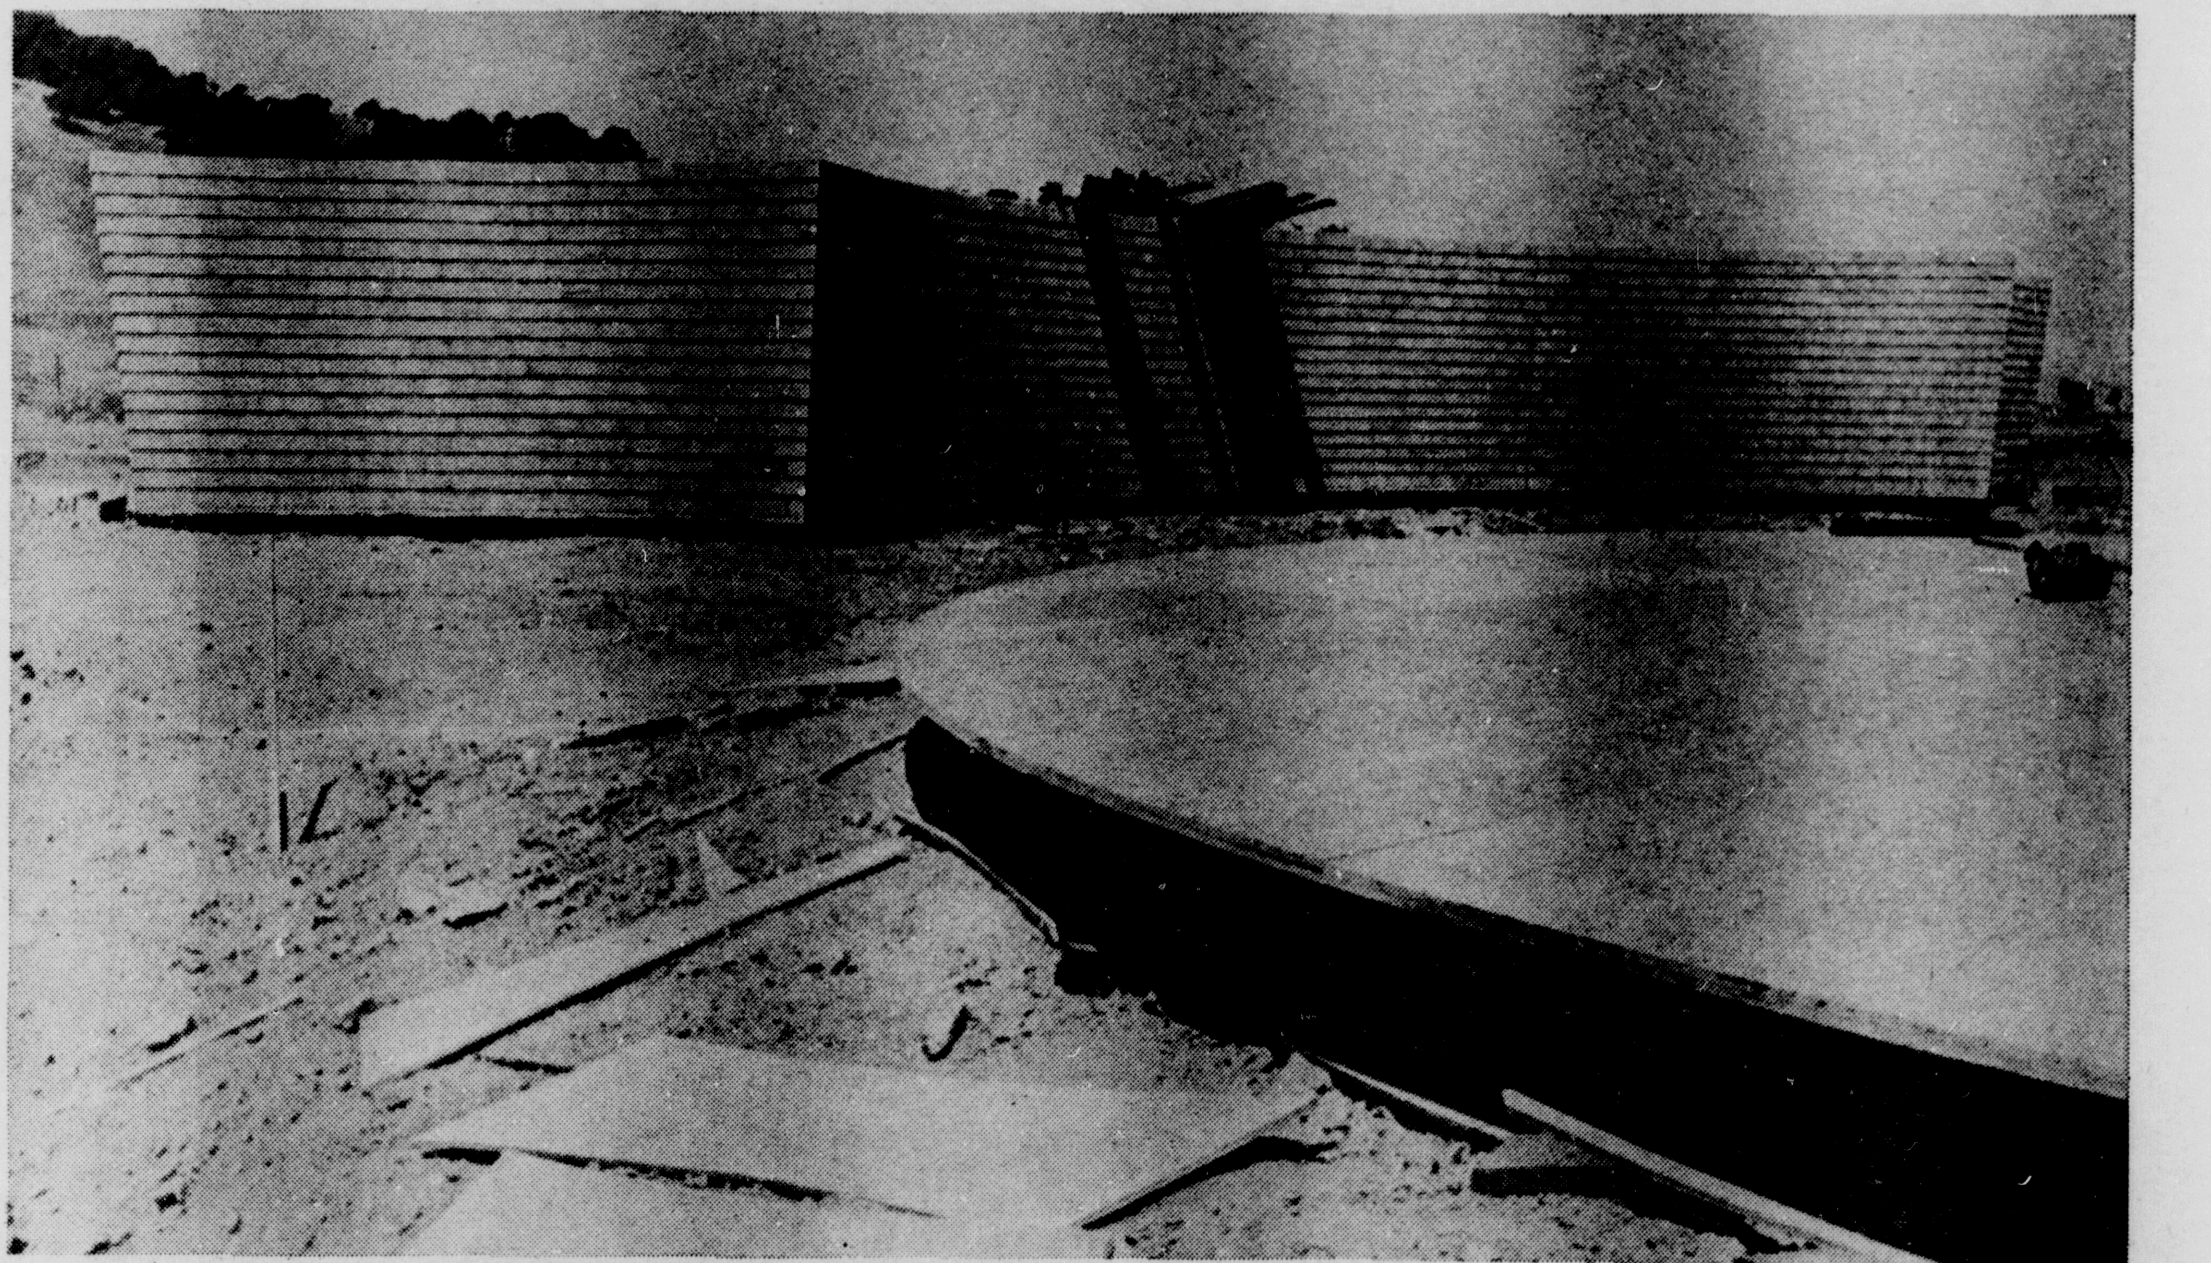
IN 60 DAYS the new fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center in San Rafael's Santa Venetia area has been transformed from a barren, dusty site, to a lush green area with trees, plants and shrubs. Here workmen were photographed at an earlier stage of their efforts. The 1971 Marin County Fair will open there on Friday and will conclude a four-day run on Oct. 11, featuring exhibits of floriculture, horticulture, art, photography and crafts, plus daily entertainment.

(Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)



AS WORKMEN began their efforts to prepare the fairgrounds for this year's Marin County Fair only 60 days ago, they started with this circular outdoor stage, where daily entertainment will be offered when the fair opens this Friday and continues through Oct. 11. The wall in the background is part of a newly constructed storage facility.

The New Site For Our Fair

Barren Land Takes On A Lush Look

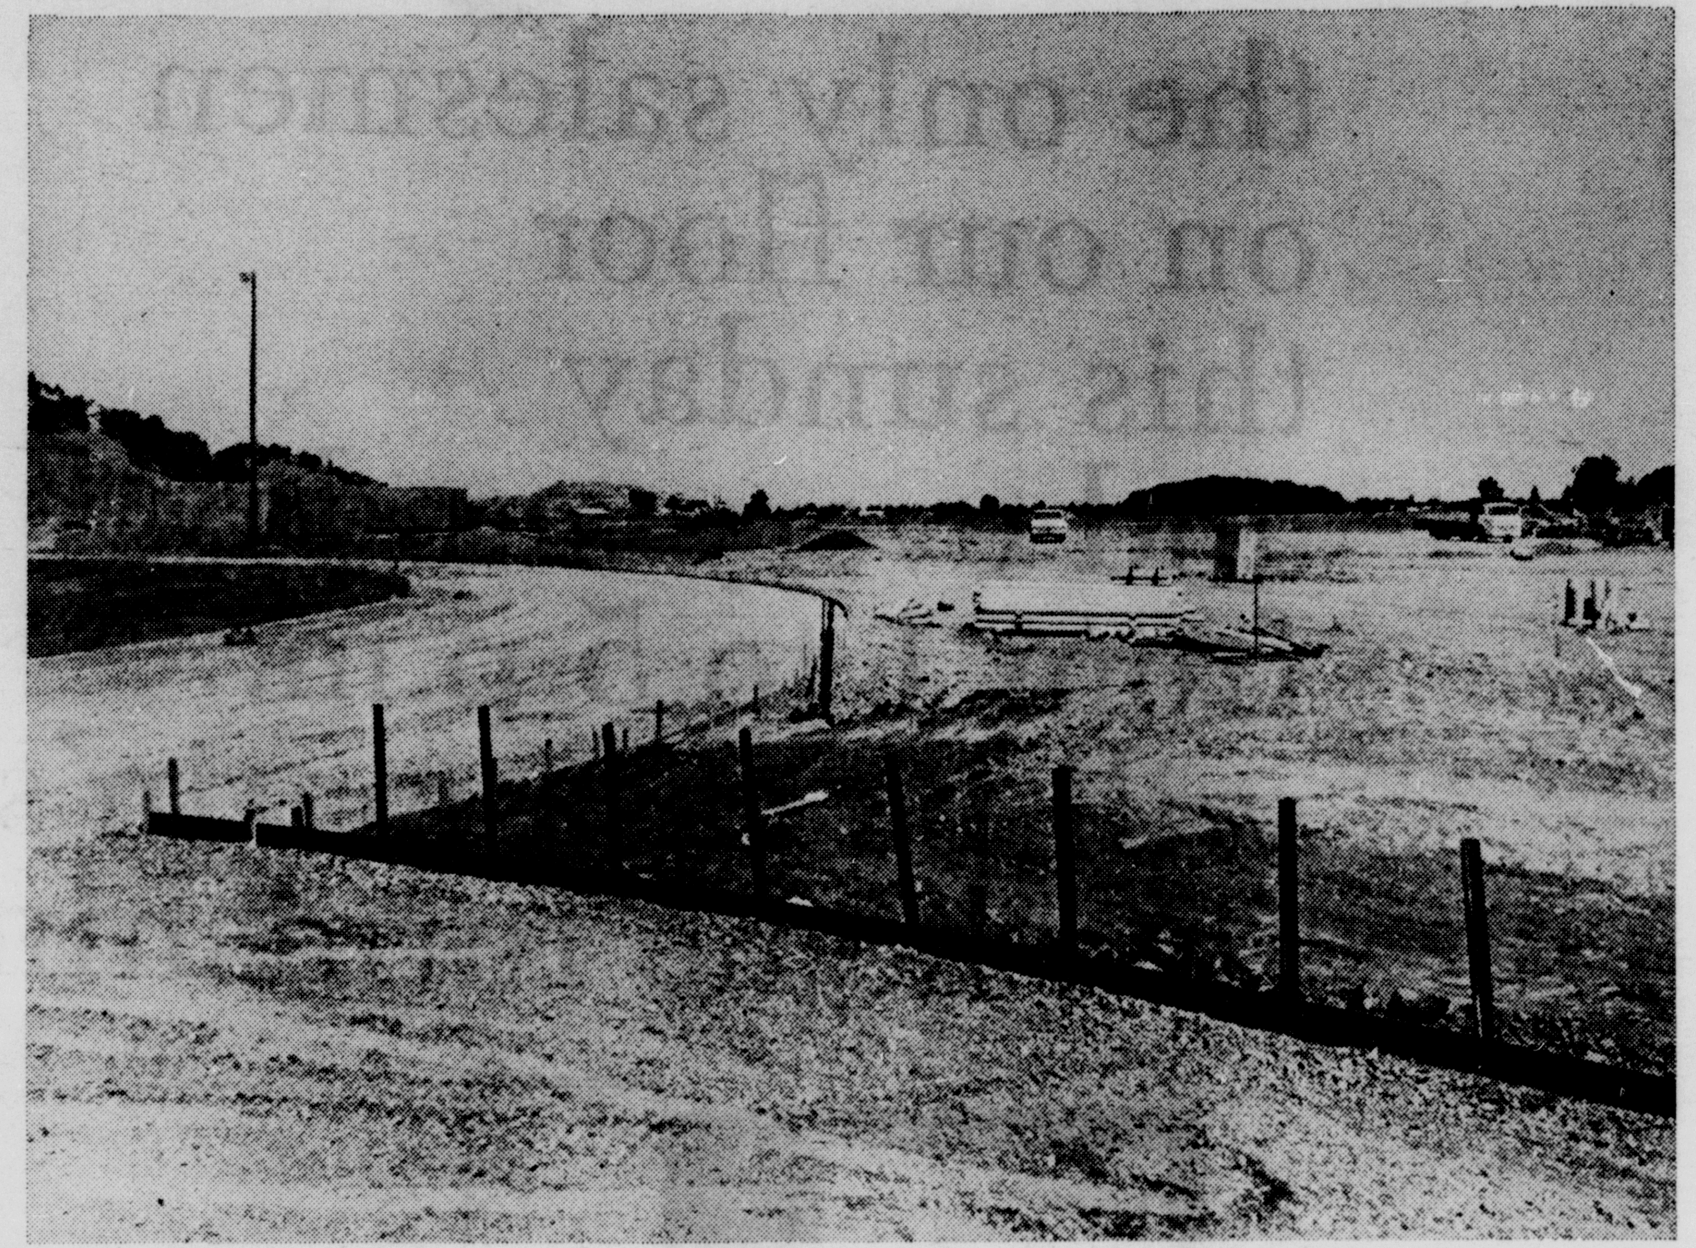
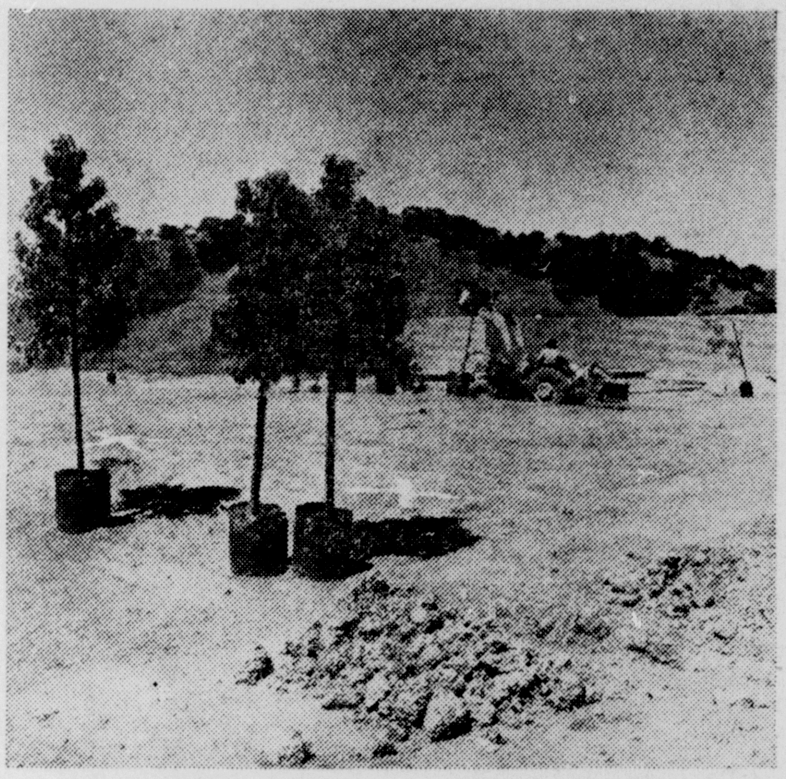
will be in gravel, to permit visitors to get around without ruining the new plantings. But half an acre of the gravel walks will be replaced with lawn, which will be installed after the fair and will be permitted to groz for a full year so that it will be hardly enough to be trod on by the 1972 fairgoers.

"This landscaping is just the first stage of the fairgrounds," Green said. "We hope to add to it year by year. But we know that right now, we have something of which Marin can be proud."

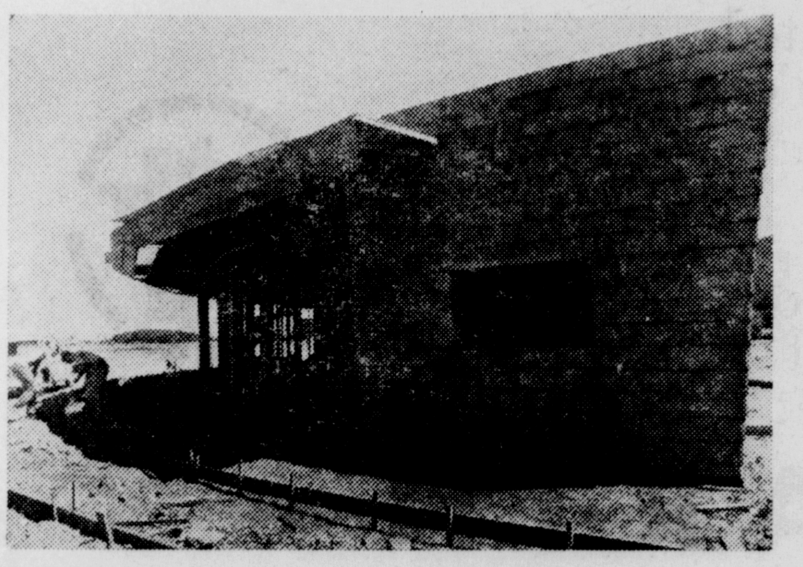
Visitors to the fair can determine for themselves if Marcelle McCoy is right — if, indeed, the site is truly a sight to behold, a "60-day wonder."



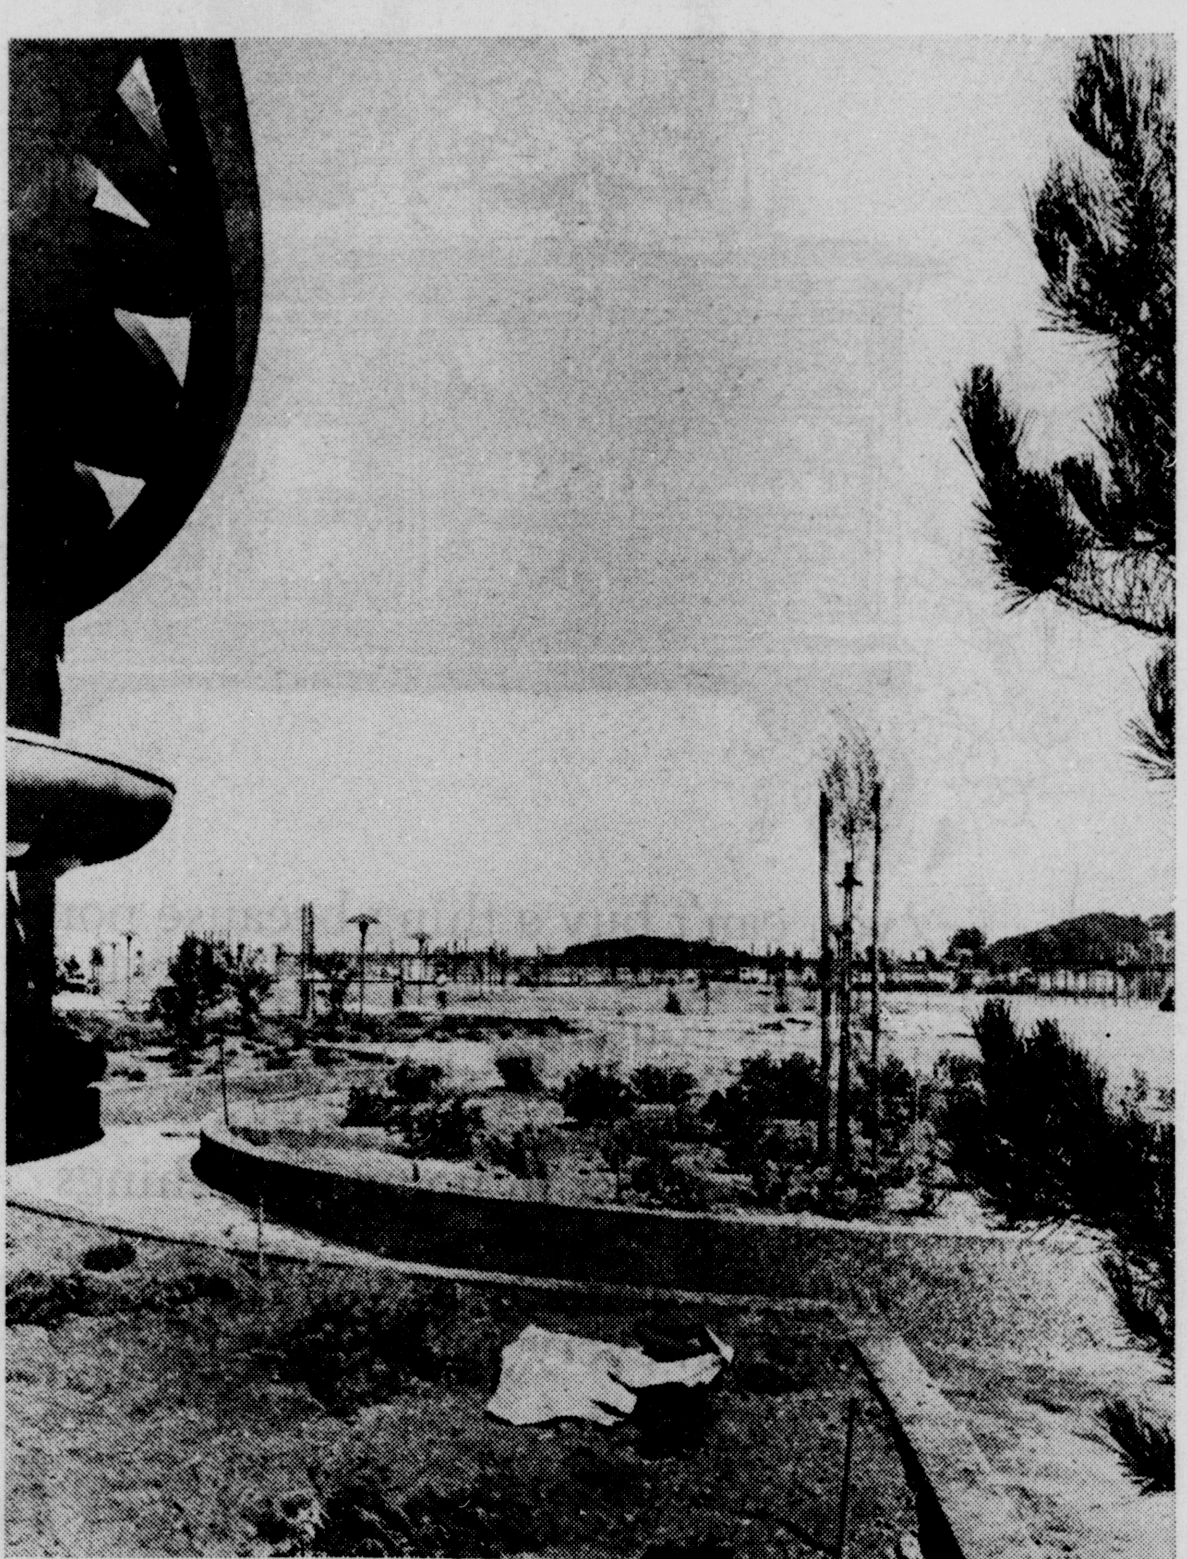
THE FAIRGROUNDS at the Marin Civic Center looked like this in mid-August just before construction and landscaping began for the 1971 Marin County Fair. Now, a bare 60 days later, the job is being completed and will be ready for the fair opening this Friday at 10 a.m.



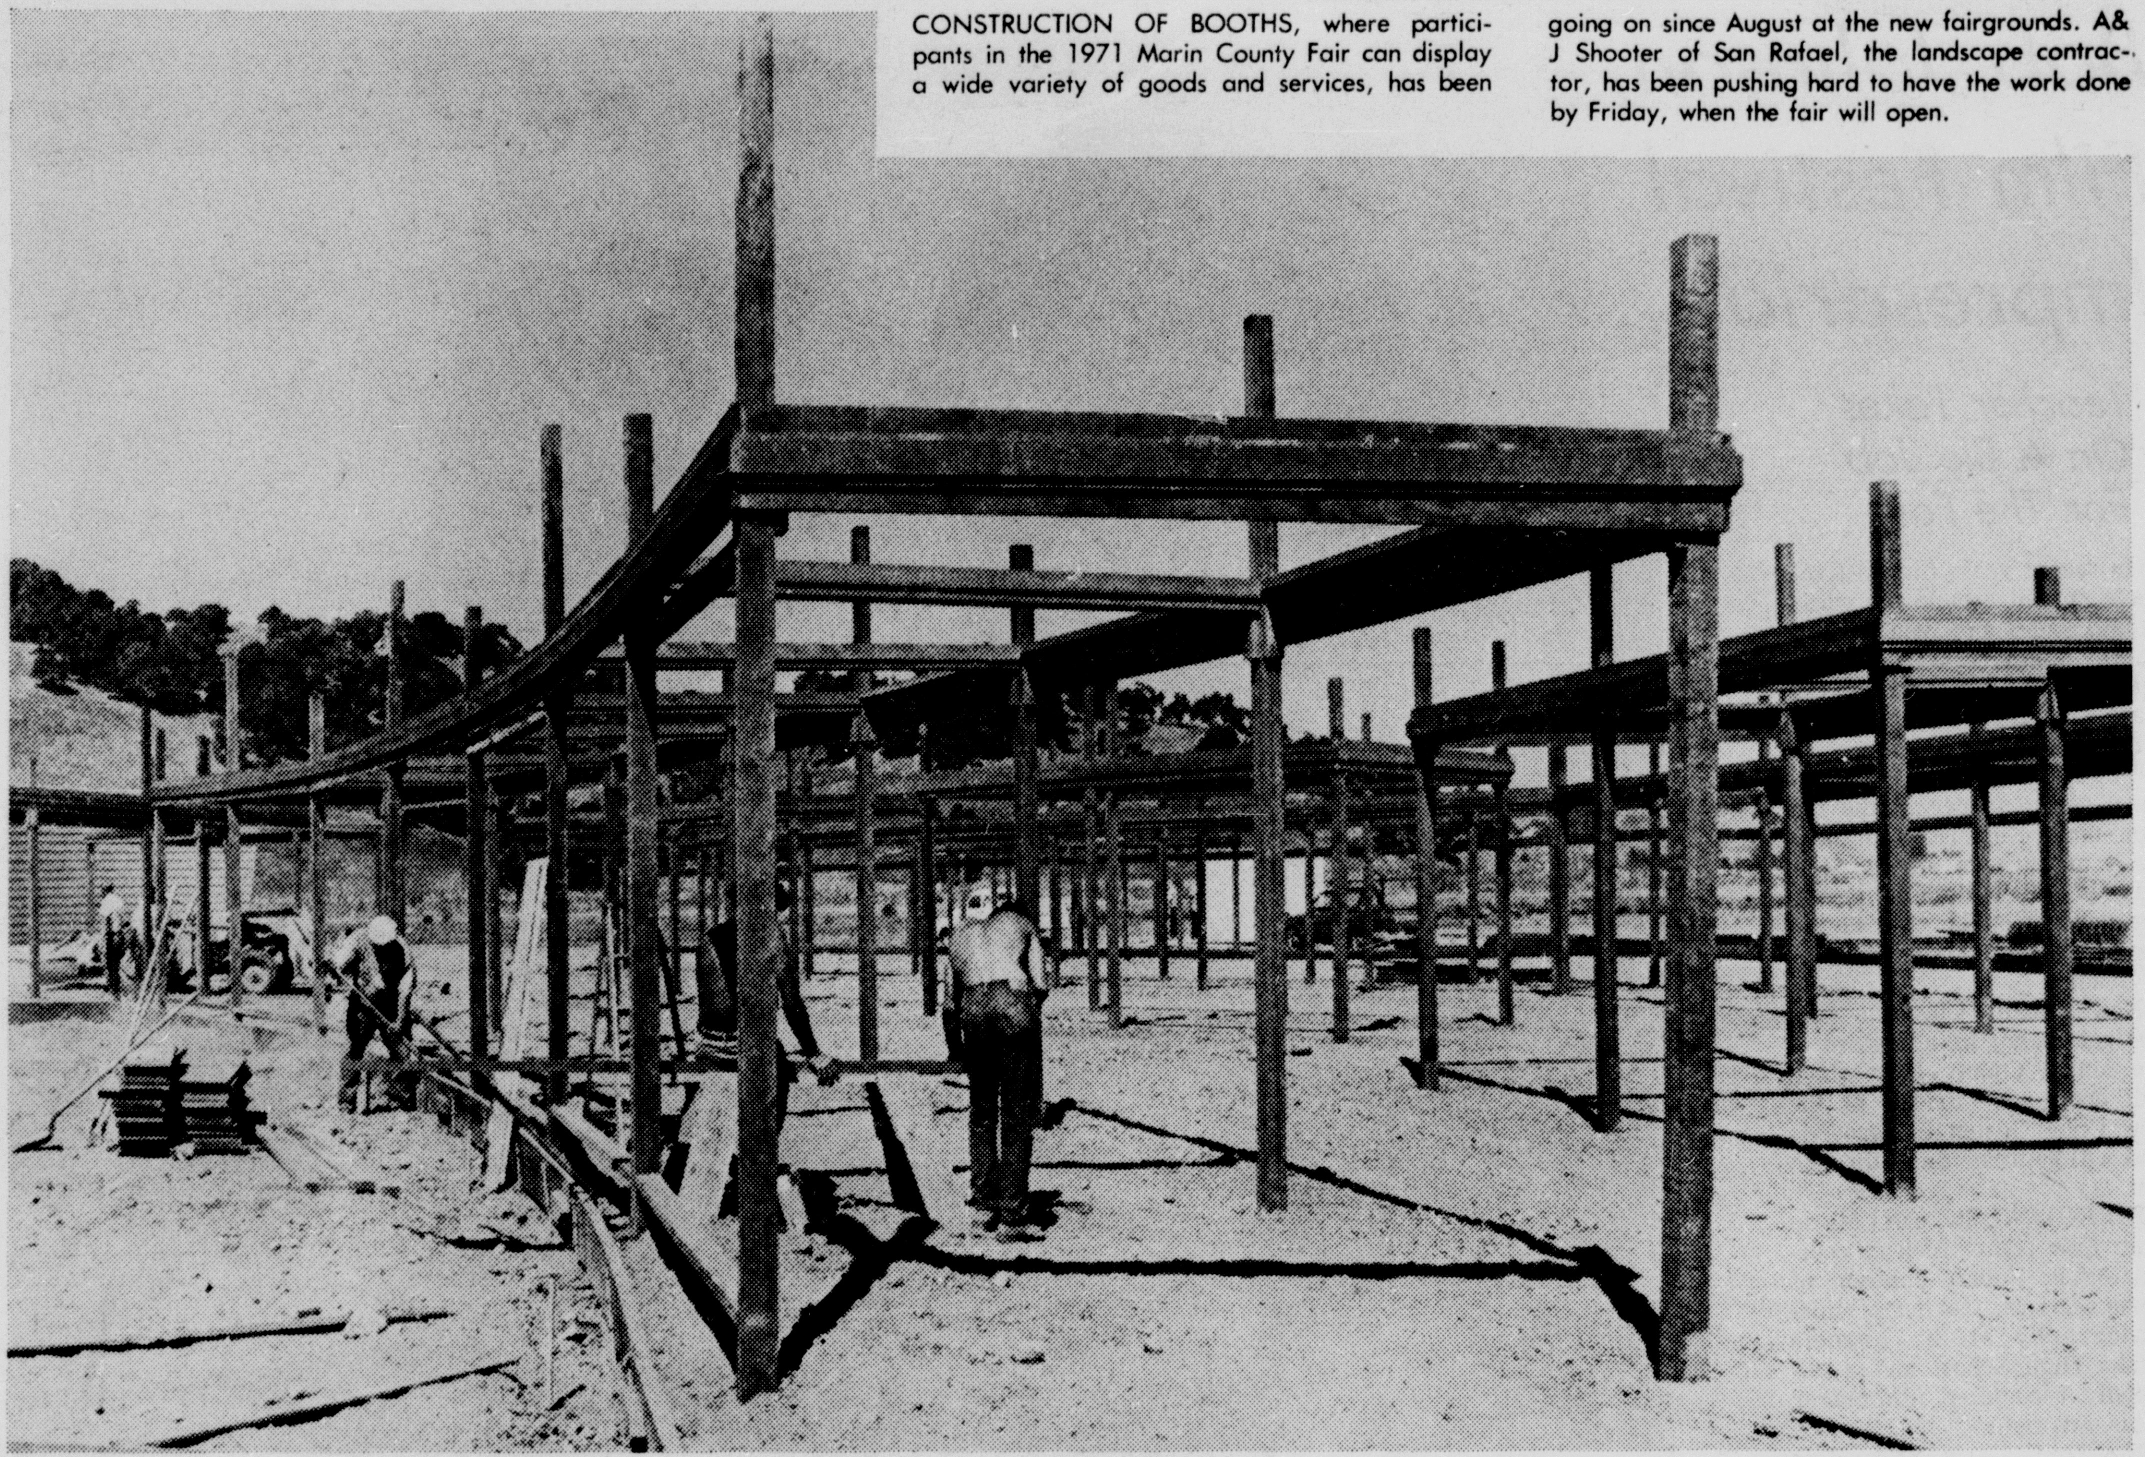
A VARIETY OF trees, some small and some 25 to 30 feet high, have been planted on the Fair site to beautify it for this Friday's opening. "X" marks the spot for each tree as the plan to provide plenty of shade nears completion.



THE STORAGE BUILDING has been under construction as part of the preparation of the site for the Marin County Fair at the fairgrounds adjacent to the Civic Center. This building will be a permanent part of the fair facilities.



THE VETERANS AUDITORIUM entrance site includes gravel walks surrounded by planted areas, all hurriedly set into place to meet the deadline of the fair opening this Friday. The 1971 Marin County Fair will be the first to be held on the 80-acre fairgrounds near the Civic Center.



CONSTRUCTION OF BOOTHS, where participants in the 1971 Marin County Fair can display a wide variety of goods and services, has been going on since August at the new fairgrounds. A& J Shooter of San Rafael, the landscape contractor, has been pushing hard to have the work done by Friday, when the fair will open.

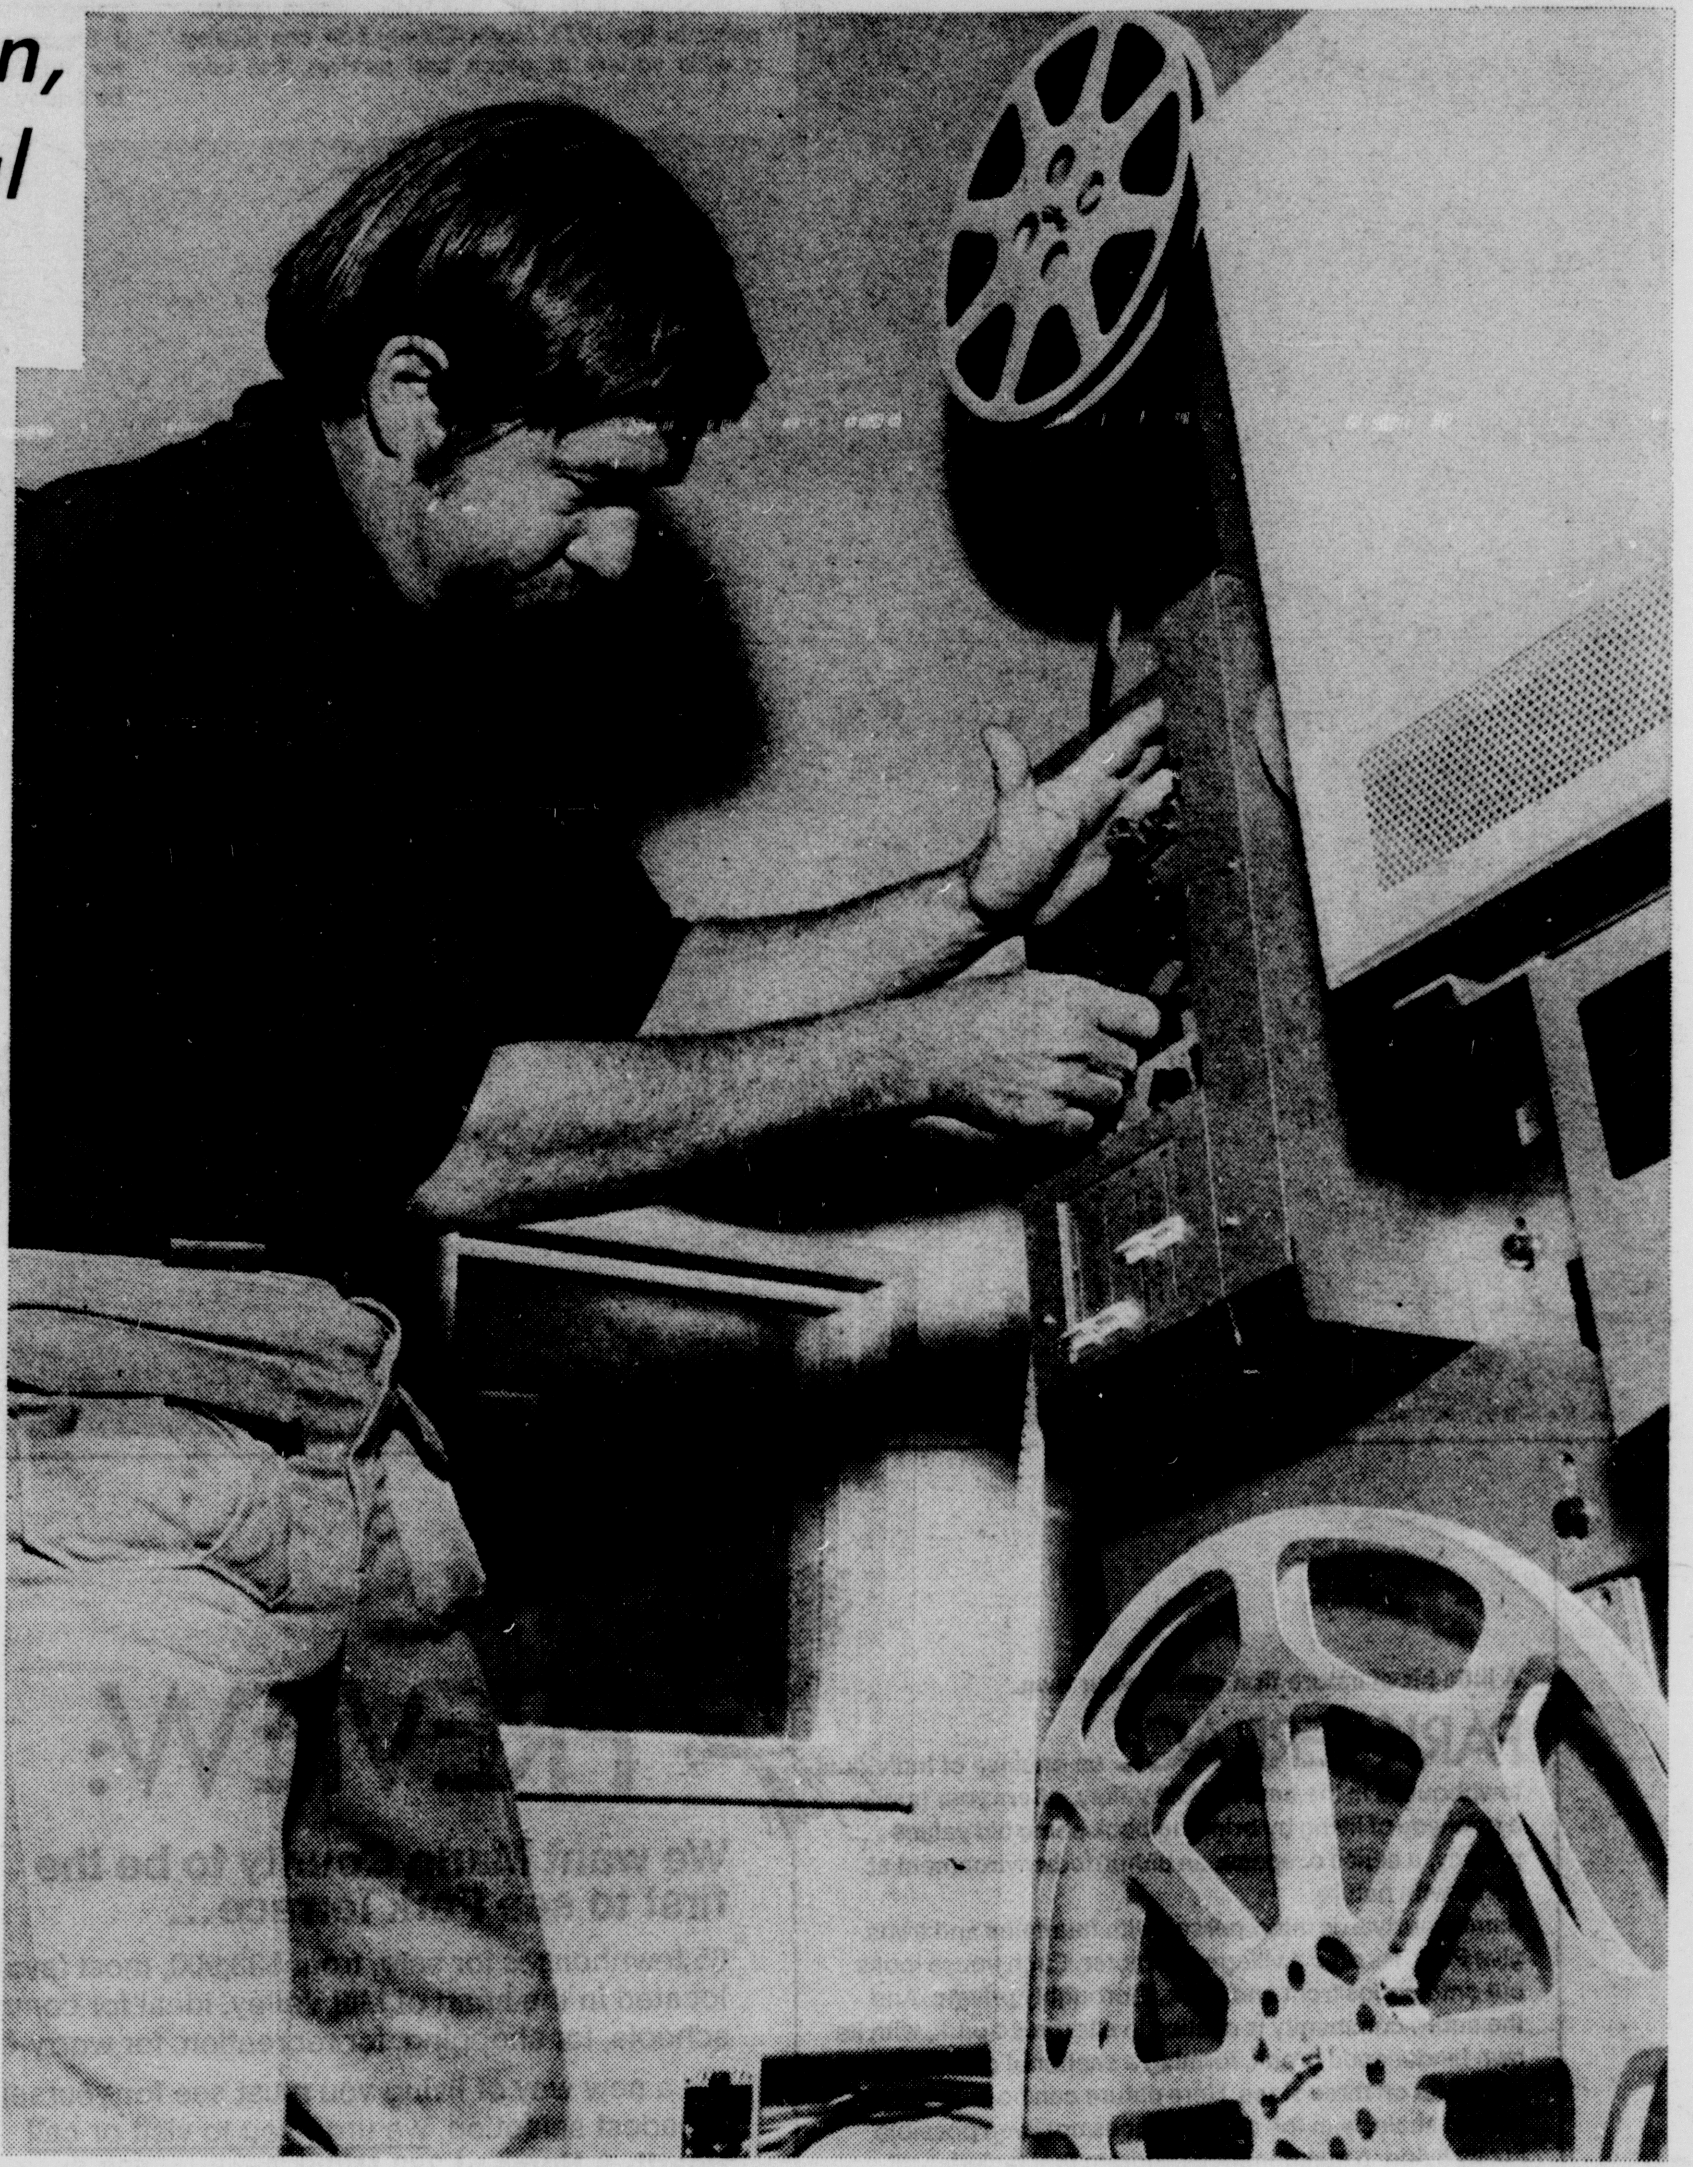
Bob Johnson, Film Festival Impresario

Teacher Takes On A Big Job For The Fair



ROBERT JOHNSON, Sir Francis Drake High School cinematography teacher and coordinator for Marin Film Fair to open next Friday in conjunction with the 1971 Marin County Fair, prepares the projector for a preview run of a film in the Marin Veterans Memorial Building Theater at Civic Center where the fair films will be shown.

In recent years film festivals have spread around the world, from Cannes and Venice on the exotic Mediterranean and Adriatic shores to New York, Chicago, Atlanta and San Francisco in this country.

They were organized and have grown to permit the motion picture industry to judge itself on its own standards of quality rather than to permit the general public to make all judgments through its purchase of tickets.

Now, Marin joins the film festival scene, as a feature of the Marin County Fair which will open next Friday at the new Civic Center Fairgrounds and will continue daily through Oct. 11.

DIRECTING THE first Marin Film Fair competition as coordinator is Robert Johnson of Corte Madera, teacher of cinematography at Sir Francis Drake High School and a nationally recognized film-maker in his own right.

The first Marin Film Fair will be unique because it is designed to assist the independent producer and the student maker of films, and it is specifically aimed at film-makers in Marin and in the eight adjacent Bay Area counties.

And Bob Johnson, who is currently on a sabatical from his teaching and who spent part of the summer in Europe, has been paying for that leisure with hours of hard work.

HE SPENT most of the past month screening the more than 100 entries to the Film Fair, getting them ready for last week's judging. He is now working out the program which will present the winning films, in each category, and the film judged with the best "Man and Nature" theme.

The films will be shown four times a day, at 11 a.m., and at 1, 3 and 5 p.m. in the Veterans Memorial Building Theater, and when the fair is finally ended, Johnson will have to maker certain that all entries are returned to their rightful owners.

"It's quite a job," he sighs, "but with the type of response we received in our first competition I look forward to seeing our Marin Film Fair growing into another of the world's major film events."

"WE HAVE received many films on the 'Man and Nature' theme, and I am elated by the response. We want this Film Festival to have its own character and to be different than any other in the Unites States, and the emphasis on ecology will do this," he said.

"The quality of some of the student entries is very high," Johnson added, "and would be worthy of any competition. I have found that students have as many ideas about making films as any other film-maker, but they usually don't have the money or the equipment to develop their ideas.

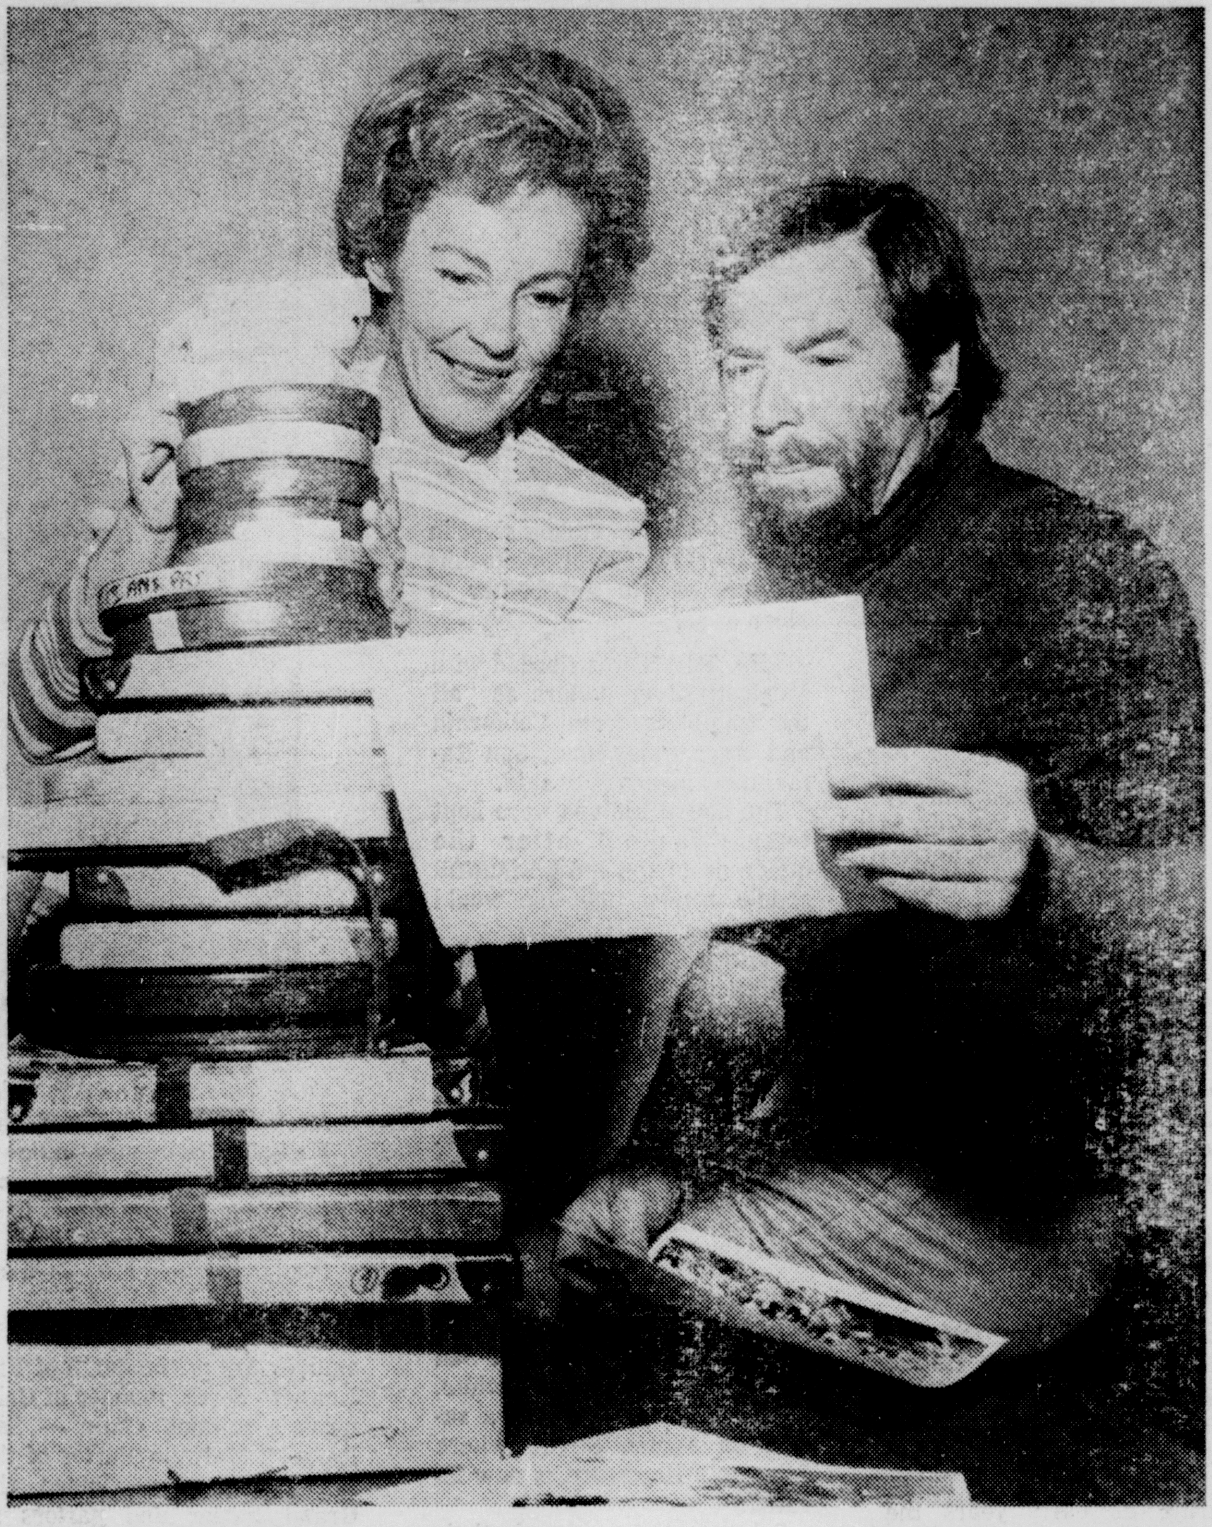
Student Film Trend Accents The 'Positive'

The New Attitude Is 'We Can Do Something'



EXAMINING STILLS from just some of the many entries in the first Marin Film Fair with approval are Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, Marin County Fair manager, and Bob Johnson, Marin Film Fair coordinator. The film festival will be one of the featured events of the 1971 fair opening on the new Civic Center grounds Friday.

"But every once in a while a student thinks of a new way to do things, and this is what we're looking for. It's like a treasure hunt, and that's the fun of it.

"EVERY STUDENT would make a film out of himself, that is, by expressing himself in this medium. The inherent character of film-making is that it is so expensive that certain things develop; doing films on nature is inexpensive because you don't have to get a release from a tree, and so our emphasis on ecology and the environment has encouraged a response among the independent producers and among the students."

Bob Johnson came to film-making in a sort of zig-zag way.

He was born in San Francisco, was raised in Sacramento, and attended San Francisco's St. Ignatius High School and the University of San Francisco.

WHILE ON duty in the Air Force he was trained as a camera repairman, and this renewed an interest in photography and filming that had flickered in his youth as he sporadically assisted his father, a still photographer who owned his own small custom color-film laboratory.

After Air Force service Johnson attended San Francisco State and received his teaching credential in English and drama. He joined the staff of the Sir Francis Drake High School English and drama department and directed more than 35 plays at the school before he became involved in film-making with the students.

He and his students produced the award-winning film, "The Idaho Test," a satire of standardized tests which was aired by the National Broadcasting Co. Television network and won an honorable mention at the Foothill International Film Festival a few years ago.

JOHNSON THEN formed Fishtail Sky Films, a distributing company for outstanding films produced by his students and for his own films.

He recently spoke on student film-making at the 1971 Midwest Film Conference in Evanston, Ill., is chairman of the National Council of Teachers of English Film-Making Committee, and is writing a book on "The Art of the Film" which is to be published this fall.

"I've noticed that there seems to be a new trend among student film-makers, at least if our entries are a criterion," Johnson said. "We formerly saw many 'running away' films, with a theme based on 'escapsim.'

"BUT THE films I have screened for our Marin Film Fair have been more hopeful, more positive, with more emphasis on the theme that 'we can do something.' "

"Another aspect of our Film Fair that is important concerns the viewer," Johnson noted. "We are allowing our audience to see certain kinds of films which were not available to the general public five years ago."

"This permits the audience to compare what independent and student film-makers are doing with the Hollywood style, and to expand its esthetic enjoyment," Johnson said. "I know that the substantial prizes we offered attracted many of the entries, but I also know that many independent and student film-makers are intrigued with the idea of a wide audience for their films.

" IN THE Independent Producer category, first prize was worth $500, second received $250, and for third we gave $100," Johnson added. "The student winners received $250, $100 and $50, and the Man and Nature winner was awarded $250."

The interest, the enthusiasm and the quality of the films which were entered indicate the Marin Film Fair competition was a success in its initial year.

The theme of the Film Fair was based on a statement by the late Frank Lloyd Wright:

"The song, the masterpiece, the edifice are a warm outpouring of the heart, of man — human delight in life triumphant: we glimpse the infinite."

With this as their guideline, Johnson and Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, fair manager, have worked diligently to produce a film program that they are confident visitors to the Marin Fair will enjoy.

Marin Has A Long History Of Fiestas, Fairs And Festivals

Its Residents Rarely Pass Up An Occasion For A Celebration

By DOROTHY GARDINER

The ancestor of all Marin fiestas, fairs, livestock shows and festivals was a raucous celebration in the old Spanish tradition started 126 years ago when San Rafael was on the threshold of becoming a Western frontier town.

Alcalde Don Timoteo Murphy decreed in 1845 that the Oct. 24 feast day of St. Raphael, patron of the Old Mission San Rafael Arcangel, be celebrated with a fiesta.

Murphy's adobe hacienda was then the lone dwelling in the old mission community. His 22,000 acre rancho extended across today's multi-million dollar fairgrounds at the Civic Center.

The annual holiday grew into San Rafael's oldest tradition, surviving — with a lapse following World War I — until two decades ago.

REVIVED BY San Rafael's Marinita Parlor of the Hative Daughters of the Golden West in the 1930s, it again became one of the county's biggest annual events.

During its early years the Spanish speaking population of California and Mexico flocked to San Rafael during the last week of October to place wagers on bull, bear and cock fights.

Vaqueros placed mustangs down the dirt main thoroughfare — today's Fourth Street.

ACCORDING TO the late Florence Donnelly, the Independent-Journal's long-time women's editor and historian, Murphy's adobe at Fourth and C streets was the scene of gala feasts attended by his many friends.

Vaqueros dressed in "brilliant colored blouses, dark pants . . . boots with spurs that came high above the ankle" jumped horses across high hurdles, lassoed cattle and galloped down the main street plucking handkerchiefs from the ground.

In 1848 when Marin and California were taken over by the United States, the old Spanish style celebration survived, grew in exuberance and took on trappings of the Old West.

WOODEN buildings, small businesses, saloons, water troughs and hitching posts began to appear in the mission community as Americans and Europeans poured into California following the discovery of gold in 1848.

According to an account of James H. Wilkins published in the San Rafael Independent on Oct. 13 and 14, 1942, San Rafael's population of "about 750 would increase each year . . . to 6,000 or 7,000" with people coming "from Mexico or San Diego for the fiesta which would last a week."

They rushed to fill hotels and boarding houses. Others slept in their serapes, built makeshift shelters or did not bother to sleep at all.

THE TOWN was flooded with Mexican silver dollars as "all the gamblers from California and other states made San Rafael their mecca," he said.

The native Indians were kept busy "looking after the hundreds of the most beautiful saddle horses that one would care to see."

Fourth Street was the Rialto and each side of the street was lined with gambling tables and roulette wheels," Wilkins wrote.

Men gathered in saloons and hotel lobbies playing faro, monte, chuck-a-luck, red and white rondo and twenty-one. In private back rooms others played high stake poker.

"MANY A ranch was lost in the turn of a card," according to Mrs. Eugenie Grady of San Rafael, whose grandfather, James Watson, operated a saloon on Fourth Street (where Johnson's Hardware is now located.)

Saloons never closed their doors and music blared across the town until dawn.

From the beginning the main attraction was the bullfight.

According to Wilkins the last legal bullfight "took place . . . on Oct. 24, 1868, on what is known today as the Dufficy property" (today's Albert Field.) A $5 fee was charged for this event.

"THERE WAS a large bull ring erected in the early '50s. It would seat about 2,500 people," Wilkins said.

"The bulls, the picadors and bull fighters were brought from Mazatlan and while the banderillos and picadors annoyed the bulls, the matadors never killed them."

Beef and sheep driven into town were slaughtered for the annual barbecue held in a large orchard near the site of the old mission at today's Lootens Place and Fifth Avenue. Women cooked tortillas and other Latin American foods.

AFTER SPECTATORS had their fill of food, whiskey and wine, gambled away their savings and became exhausted, they climbed aboard trans-bay boats and ferries for the long trek home.

San Rafael continued to grow. Homes were built by wealthy San Franciscans on the slopes surrounding the town. Eventually the townspeople succeeded in curtailing the boisterous behavior of the early fiestas but San Rafael Days, as they became called, continued to be celebrated with barbecues, smaller fiestas and parties up until World War I.

Then in 1934 — the 150th anniversary of the death of Fra Junipero Serra, founder of California's mission chain — San Rafael's Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters joined the Grand Parlor and parlors in other mission communities in observing the anniversary.

THE LOCAL Parlor held a two-day Serra Fiesta. Such a "good time was had by all," according to Mrs. Grady, the next year San Rafael Fiesta Days were brought back to life.

For 16 years the Marinita Parlor with the help of the Tamalpais Parlor of the Native Sons turned back the hands of time for two days during the weekend closest to St. Raphael's feast day.

Eight days before the start of the 1934 Serra Fiesta on Oct. 27, the San Rafael Daily Independent reported:

"CITIZENS OF San Rafael came down town this morning to find Fourth Street gay with flgas and banners of varied hues, draped across the thoroughfare from the Union Depot to E Street, giving the city a festive air in anticipation of next week's celebration . . ."

Eugenie Watson, now Mrs. Earl Grady, then leader of the local parlor's drill team, was chairman of the event. Her committee included Marie Borba, now Mrs. Harry J. Pedersen, Mrs. Robert Brusatori both of San Rafael and the late Mollye Spaelti.

On the first day the Navy's giant dirigible, Macon, called the "monarch of the air lanes,"

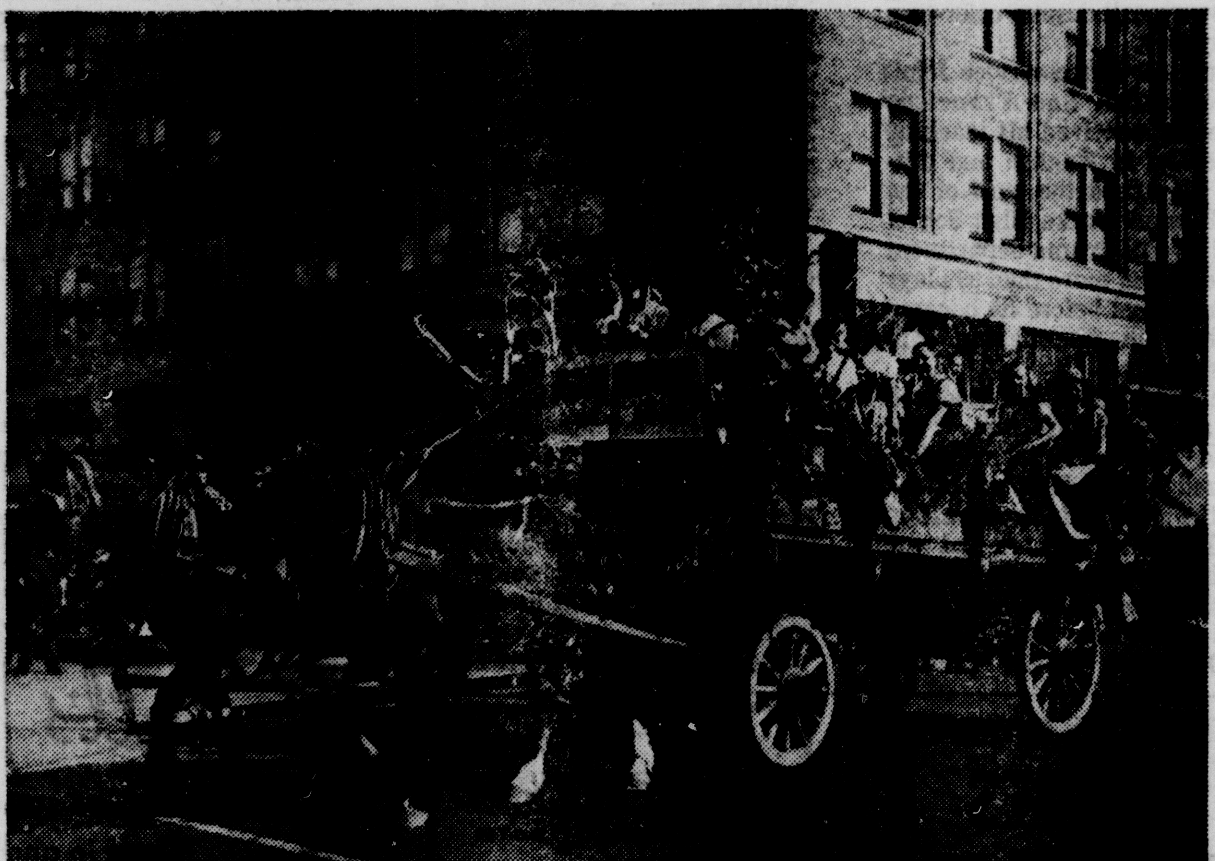
ONE OF THE MORE colorful celebrations of Marin's early days was the Feast Day of St. Raphael observance instigated by Don Timoteo Murphy in 1844. The Spanish-style celebration continued as San Rafael Days until World I, and then was revived in1934 by the Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West as part of a statewide observance of the 150th anniversary of the death of Fr. Junipero Serra. The picture above was taken at that event and shows, in the front row: Mrs. Tillie Della Bruna, NDGW president; Judge Jordan L. Martinelli; Monsignor Thomas F. Millett, St. Raphael's Church pastor; and Eugenie Watson, now Mrs. Earl Grady, who was fiesta chairman and drill team captain.



AFTER ITS REVIVAL in 1934, the San Rafael Fiesta Days became an annual community celebration. The 1935 observance on Oct. 27 included a parade of four divisions depicting Northern California and Marin County history. These peasant-clad girls riding a horsedrawn float represented the Russians. Also represented were the Indians, the Spanish, the Mexicans and the '49ers. Mrs. Earl Grady of the Marinita Parlor of the Native Daughters and Charles Soldavini Sr. of the Tamalpais Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West were the co-chairmen.

flew over the city dropping its nose in salute.

THAT NIGHT hundreds attended a bazaar at Hall Raphael where they played games of chance, watched Spanish entertainers, ate Spanish food, danced and bought cakes, cookies, stuffed toys and other items at a row of booths.

Early the next morning thousands lined the streets to watch a spectacular parade described by the Independent as "one of the most colorful street parades ever seen in San Rafael."

Marchers included the high stepping blue and white cossack-uniformed Marinita drill team, other Native Daughter and Native Son teams, drum and bugle corps led by the state champion Sea Point Parlor uniit from Sausalito.

OTHERS INCLUDED members of the Lions Club, San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, Foresters of America, Druids, Young Ladies and Young Men's institutes, Campfire Girls, American Legion, civic officias, San Rafael police and San Rafael firemen.

Old fashioned two-seated surreys, phaetons, farm wagons and Mill Valley's bicycle for-two unit were applauded as they made their way up Fourth Street.

Worshippers overflowed for over half a block in all directions in front of St. Raphael's Church during a 10:30 a.m. outdoor solemn high mass commemorating the founding of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel in 1817 and the memory of Father Serra.

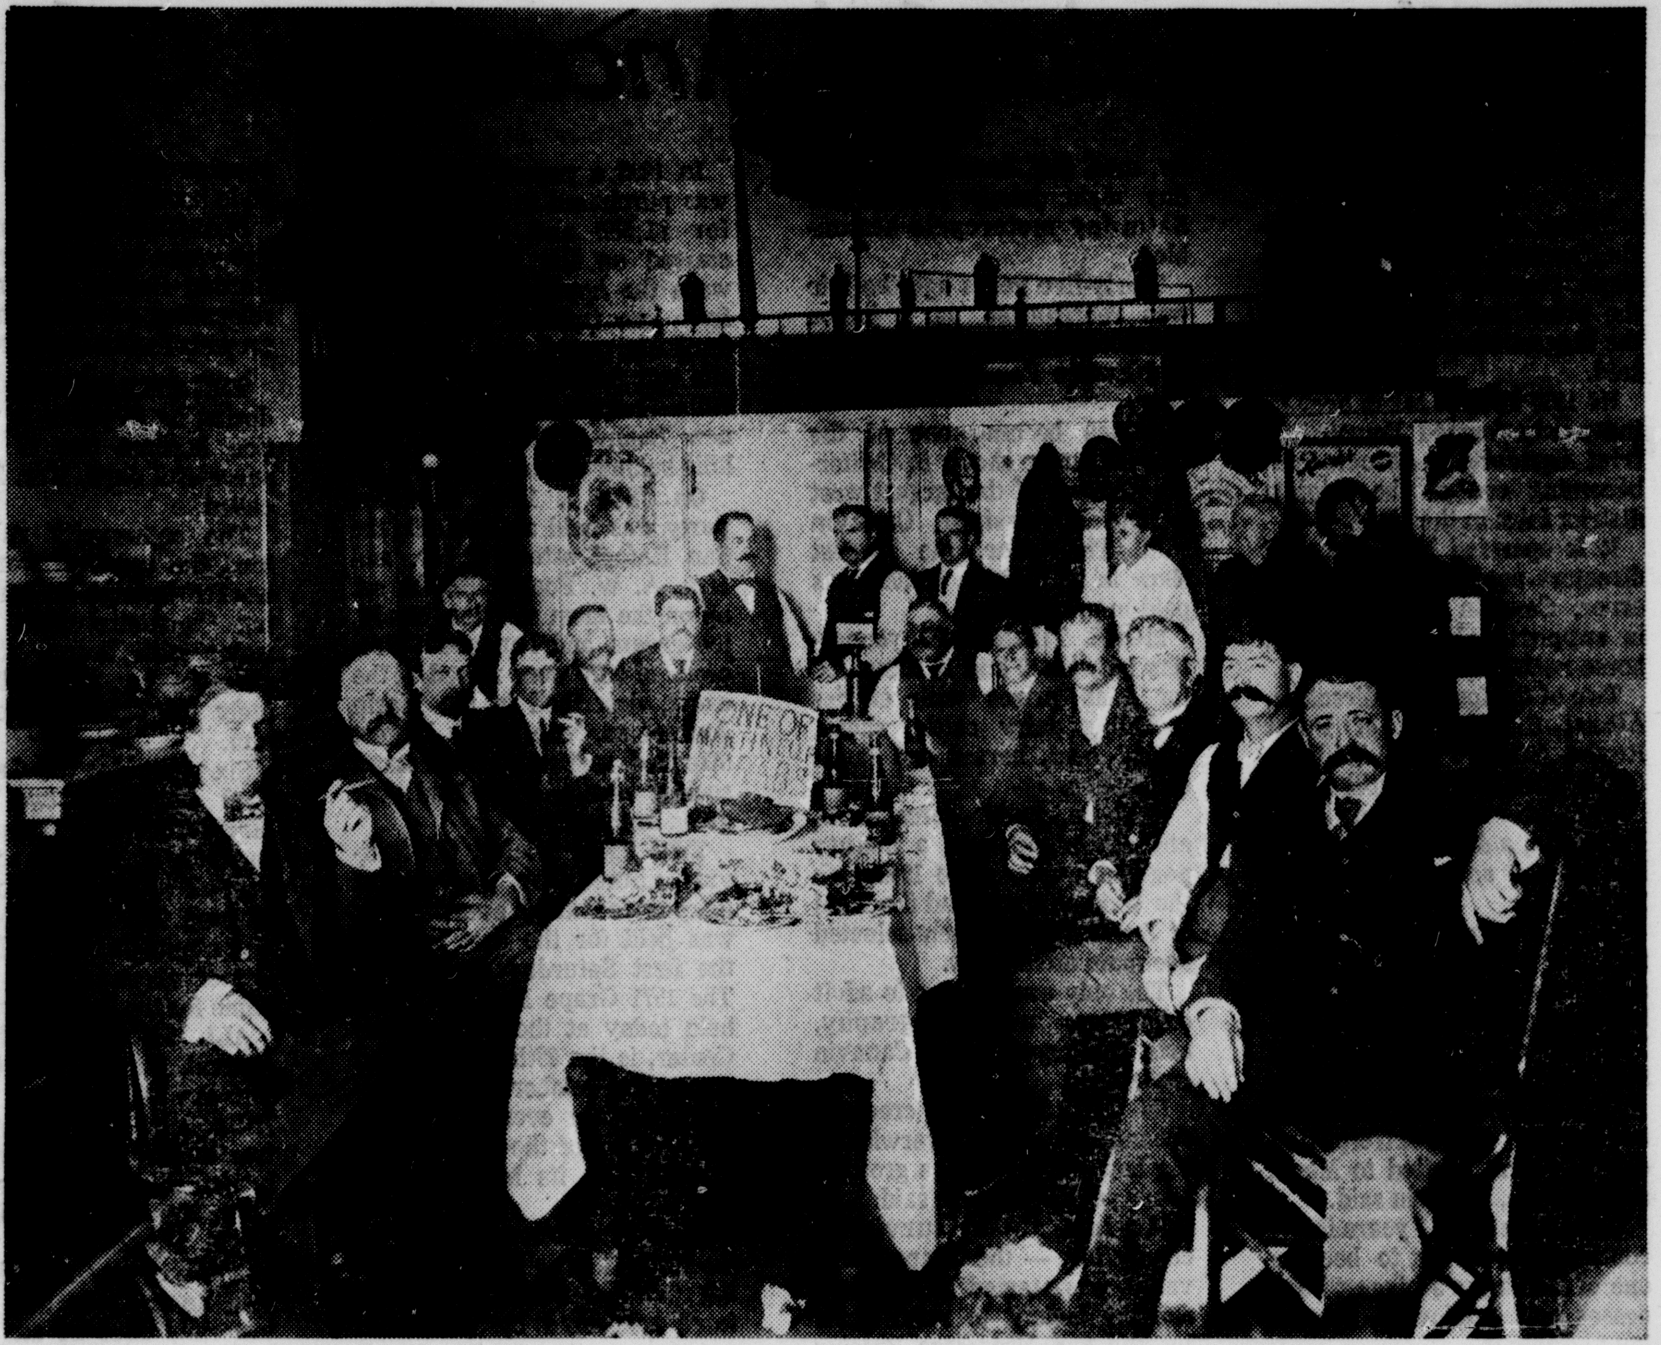
ONE HUNDRED choir boys from St. Raphael's parish and St. Vincent's School for Boys made their first appearance.

Judge Jordan L. Martinelli presented a bronze plaque for the Marinita Parlor to the church in memory of the founders of the mission. (This plaque may be seen today at the entrance to the church grounds.)

Following a luncheon, a ball game was held at Dufficy Field, the site of the old fiesta bullfights almost 100 years before.

DURING THE ensuing years San Rafael Fiesta Days grew in size and popularity due to the "hard work" of the Native Daughters, according to Mrs. Pedersen, former fiesta chairman and a past president of the parlor.

Later the bazaar was moved to Bianco's Garage at Fourth and E streets. Proceeds were used for cash prizes, trophies, and ribbons for the marching units, best costumes and other parade entires.



A GROUP OF Marin's more prominent citizens of the time gathered in James Watson's saloon for a private celebration during the San Rafael Days fiesta of Oct. 24, 1901. The saloon was located on Fourth Street where Johnson's Hardware stands today. Proprietor Watson is in cap and vest at left rear while his son Edward is in the white jacket on the right. Others identifiable in the photo include Sheriff Billy Taylor, left, and Rudy Litchenberg, Sal Pacheco, E. B. Martinelli, Tom McLean, Ed Rake and Bob Graham.

The annual parade that attracted marchers from far and wide "became one of the best in the state," according to Mrs. Pedersen.

REMAINING proceeds were donated to a homeless children's fund, the Native Daughters home for the elderly in San Francisco, a scoreboard at Albert Park, a drinking fountain for the old yacht harbor, the Native Daughters landmarks committee, and in later years to Guide Dogs for the Blind.

Other highlights still remembered were the Saturday morning children's and pet parades; a fireworks display in 1939 at Dufficy Field; Saturday night street dances in front of the old courthouse attended by early California costumed guests; a hobby show at the old E Street School and the marching soldiers, sailors and airmen who became part of the parade during the years of World WarII.

The advent of St. Raphael's Church's annual fiesta in the late 1940s gave the city a second annual celebration in the spring.

(The two annual fiestas continued until after 1952 when the Old San Rafael Fiesta Days sponsored by the Native Daughters and Native Sons disappeared.)

IN 1948 UNDER the leadership of the late Rev. George A. O'Meara, the church sponsored a three-day Fiesta Hacienda Community Celebration during the third weekend in May to raise funds for a new parish house.

Featured in the church grounds were a carnival, amateur contests, games of chance, and coronation of a queen. It climaxes with a gigantic parade through the downtown streets Sunday afternoon.

The next year the fiesta was even larger, drawing crowds from across California and other states as it commemorated the dedication of the newly constructed replica of old Mission San Rafael Arcangel that had been built with funds donated by the Hearst Foundation.

DURING THE next five years tens of thousands annually attended the Mission Fiesta, as it became called. Proceeds were used to build an addition to St. Raphael's School and for a church building fund.

The last fiesta held in San Rafael four years ago celebrated the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel.

The four-day celebration that opened Oct. 18 included: a reunion of St. Raphael's School alumni; religious observances; a jubilee luncheon sponsored by San Rafael service clubs; a concelebrated mass offered by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken and the pastors from the 21 California missions; free boat rides along the San Rafael Canal, and a regatta staged between the Richmond Bridge and the San Rafael Canal.

WORKING ON this fiesta were the priests and members of St. Raphael's parish; a citizens committee headed by Raymond H. Shone that included William P. Murray Jr.; Rex Silvernale; Judge Carlos Freitas, Irving D. Chapman and J. Warren Crane; the Dominican Sisters of San Rafael; Marist Fathers; St. Raphael's Mother's Guild; Serra Club of Marin and the parish council.

The celebration closed with a Sunday parade down Fourth Street and an old fashioned Spanish-style barbecue prepared by the Nicasio Parlor of the Native Sons at the St. Peter Chanel Seminary.

Country and county fairs became popular during the early decades of the 19th Century. These fairs, where livestock and farm products were exhibited, differed from the old medieval fairs held for bartering and selling wares and animals.

MANY EARLY American fairs featured political speakers, horse racing, automobile racing, airplane flights and balloon ascensions.

During the last century small country fairs were held throughout Marin and Southern Sonoma's vast ranching regions. Many such as the Tomales Ladies Fair, announced in the October, 1896, edition of the Marin Journal, have been long forgotten.

But one early fair — the first to be held near Petaluma — survived and grew into the annual Sonoma-Marin Fair held for five days during the last week of June.

THIS FAIR traces its beginnings back to a "butter and eggs" day held for the first time in 1867 at Straubville at today's intersection of Middle Two Rock Road and Bodega Avenue.

According to Arthur F. (Art) Canavin, fair manager for the last 11 years, ranchers from across the Redwood Empire exhibited livestock and farm products during the next 67 years at different locations in and around Petaluma. At times the fairgrounds were on Fair Street, a site now occupied by the Petaluma High School.

During the 19th Century state legislation was passed to help support the annual fair, and

The Colorful Ancestors Of Marin's New County Fair

ranchers and farmers from Marin, Sonoma, Lake, Solano and Napa counties participated in the event that became one of the biggest attractions, Canavin said.

IN 1933 IT was taken over by the newly formed Fourth District Agriculture Association, becoming one of the original district fairs in the state.

It is operated by a board of directors appointed by the governor, Canavin explained, and is supported by pari-mutual horse racing funds.

Two of the founding directors, Albert J. Bianchi of Point Reyes Station and William Gnoss of Novato, are still on the board. Albert P. Behrens Sr. of Petaluma, a director since 1938, has served as president since 1948.

In 1934 the fair moved permanently to its 65-acre fairgrounds at Kenilworth Park. In the early years exhibitors from Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Marin and Sonoma participated.

IN THE 1960s when it "got too large" the participating counties were limited to Marin and Sonoma, Canavin said.

During the last 11 years it has continued to grow to become one of Petaluma's biggest businesses and employers, according to Canavin.

In 1960 a total of 20,000 attended. This year a record breaking crowd of almost 59,000 visited the five-day fair.

Five employees — Canavin, a secretary and maintenance men — are on the payroll year round with another 200 hired for either six or eight weeks around fair time, Canavin explained.

ELEVEN YEARS ago the fairgrounds were used by 8,000 persons during the 361 days they were not used for the fair, the manager noted. Last year 100,000 rented the facilities for weddings, auctions, roller derby, mini golf, horse shows, Friday night jalopy racing and Saturday motorcycle scrambles.

Thirty-five years ago the fair was reorganized as a junior livestock show for 4-H members and Future Farmers of America.

It has become one of the largest junior shows in California and one of the largest west of the Mississippi, Canavin said. This year, the biggest show in its history, $26,000 was paid in premiums.

MORE THAN 4,600 youngsters between 9 and 19 competed for cash prizes with entries including dairy cattle, sheep, swine, beef, horses and home economics.

A rodeo, junior horse show, entertainment and a beauty pageant where since 1963 both the Maid of Marin and the Maid of Sonoma have been selected are main attractions.

The only events open to adult exhibitors are photography, arts and gardening, Canavin explained.

IN THE FACE of creeping urbanization, "it's overwhelming how the fair keeps growing every year," Canavin said.

Marin's oldest surviving county fair — the Grape Festival — was started in 1899 as a one-day benefit to raise funds for the San Francisco Presbyterian Orphanage and Farm, later renamed Sunny Hills.

The orphanage opened in 1895 in a small rented house on E Street between Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue. Its first charges were three young children left motherless the same year.

MRS. PHILO D. Browne, head of the committee that opened the home, was also the founder of the Grape Festival. Additional funds were soon needed as the original home became over crowded and it was moved to larger quarters at Fourth and E streets.

In 1898 a parcel of 20 acres was purchased in San Anselmo for $1,500 and construction started on the buildings that were the home of Sunny Hills from the turn of the century until six years ago when the site was taken over by the Red Hills Shopping Center and a new Sunny Hills built in the hills behind the center.

On June 1, 1901, a garden party was held at Fairhills, the San Rafael estate of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Foster. Booths set up on the lawn sold tea, candy, ice cream and lemonade. Proceeds of $370 were raised at the event, described in the Marin Journal as "one of the largest attended and most successful society events of the kind ever given in the city."

TWO YEARS later, the festival, named for baskets of grapes featured every year, was held for the first time on the first Saturday of October. The 1971 Grape Festival, being held today at the Marin Civic Center, is the 68th to be staged during the October weekend.

In 1903 the event moved to the grounds of the Kent Estate in Kentfield, its home for the next 43 years.

During the following decades the festival grew in size becoming "an old-fashioned country fair" sponsored by volunteers from across the county, according to Mrs. Helen Zweig of Kent Woodlands, former president of Sunny Hills Junior Auxiliary, former Sunny Hills director and a longtime festival chairman.

MEMBERS OF the Sunny Hills guilds spread across the county worked all year holding teas, luncheons and dances to raise money to buy materials to make into handmade articles to be sold at the festival, Mrs. Zweig said.

Bathroom accessories, aprons, pot holders, dried flower arrangements, miniature gardens, foods, chutneys, homemade cakes and breads became popular items at the country-style booths, she said.

In 1947 the festival moved for two years to the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross before relocating at the Sunny Hills grounds in San Anselmo.

THE ONE Saturday it rained during its 16 years at this location became one of its most successful days, Mrs. Zweig recalled.

The community rallied behind the corps of women who worked through an early morning "torrential rain pumping water with broom sticks" to save the day, she said. Fortunately the skies cleared by 10 a.m.

Six years ago the Grape Festival moved for two years to Marin Town and Country Club. In 1968 it moved again, for another two year period, to the parking lot at the Northgate Shopping Center. The Civic Center grounds have been its home for the last two years.

ALL PROCEEDS from the festival, Marin's oldest country fair are still donated to Sunny Hills, now a residence and treatment center for emotionally disturbed youngsters.

The Marin Art and Garden Show, for 20 of its 26 years Marin's county fair, has been held annually in the shade of towering trees of an old Ross estate.

The unique show, that introduced the first Art in Action booth ever seen anywhere, traces its beginnings to a one-day fiesta staged in September, 1945, to help raise the $45,000 needed to open the Marin Art and Garden Center on the old Kittle Estate.

UNDER THE leadership of the late Caroline S. Livermore of Ross, ardent conservationist and founder of the Marin Conservation League, eight Marin groups — the Ross Valley Players, Marin Society of Artists, Garden Society of Marin, Marin Conservation League, Marin Naturalists, Marin Music Chest, Marin Dance Group and Marin Garden Club — bought the seven-acre estate and transformed it into a permanent community cultural center.

It was dedicated as a "living memorial, both for those who lost their lives during World War II and other loved individuals."

The first fiesta that cleared about $1,500 was centered around the Octagon House, according to Aaron E. (Ed) Rucker of Kentfield. In a country fair setting arranged in the old gardens, volunteers sold art and plants.

IT WAS SUCH a success, the groups decided to hold a three-day show the following September.

Howard Gilkey, designer of the Oakland Spring Garden Show, a "master showman," was hired to design the first official Marin Art and Garden Show Sept. 18 to 21, 1946.

According to Rucker, who worked as business manager, it was confined to the area around the old trees near the Octagon House. Volunteers built a moongate fireplace that was decorated by the late Jose Moya del Pino.

FOR THE FIRST time, the Marin Society of Artists innovation, an art-in-action booth, was introduced, Rucker explained. Artists, sculptors, potters and weavers demonstrated their skills throughout the run of the show.

The feature was such a success that three years later Rucker's wife, sculptress Nellie Rucker, member of the Marin Society of Artists and a director of the center, was invited along with 26 other society artists, to inaugurate art-in-action at the California State Fair in Sacramento.

In the early years there were "no funds for prizes," and all the work was done by volunteers who had to "pull up 30 and 40-foot vines of poison oak," Rucker explained.

A SPANISH theme was featured in 1947 and again the volunteers rolled up their sleeves and using pick axes and shovels, dug a canal from the area of the old Barn down to the old trees near the Octagon House. During the show the canal held floating flower boats.

That year the show grew and for the first time commercial booths advertised wares, Rucker said.

The early shows were "beautiful and aesthetic," Rucker noted, recalling Gilkey's comment, "You've made something artistic out of a country fair . . . you've made it genteel.

In 1948 the late Herman E. Hein became manager and director. Sponsors donating $6,000 established the first premium fund and cash prizes were offered for the first time.

TWO YEARS later the show became the Marin Art and Garden Fair, the official county fair, sponsored by the Marin County Board of Supervisors and supported by state pari-mutuel horseracing funds.

The next year it was held on the Fourth of July weekend for the first time. It continued to grow and expand over the years drawing crowds in the tens of thousands.

"It became more of a county fair with dust, dirt and honky tonk," Rucker said.

THOUSANDS OF trophies and premium blue ribbons were awarded; hundreds of gardens designed and thousands of art and photographic exhibits displayed.

Dinner dances, light opera, musicales, puppet shows, magic performances, children's games and carnival rides, snack booths, chicken dinners prepared by the Ross Valley Players became some of the highlights during the ensuing years.

In 1958 Mrs. Marcelle McCoy, who started working on the show in the early years as an assistant to Ed Rucker, became manager, a position she has held ever since. (Mrs. McCoy is in charge of the first Marin County Fair to be held at the Civic Center next week.)

LAST FOURTH of July, 11 of the 13 Marin Art and Garden Center groups put on a two-day show with a Parisian theme at the center that drew between 8,500 and 9,000 persons earning proceeds of about $10,000, according to Richard F. Tyler, center president.

Proceeds from the new school will be used to replace the $17,500 rental the center received during the last years it was the site of the county fair, Tyler said.

The new show is a return to the non-commercial early shows, Tyler said. This year there were no outsiders or concessions and the work was done by volunteers.

THIS YEAR'S show, "Weekend in Paris," "was a great success," Tyler noted. The show will be extended to three days next July.

For 22 years one of the most popular annual events in West Marin has been the West Marin Junior Livestock Show sponsored by the West Marin Lions Club every June at Point Reyes Station.

Young members of the 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America compete for prizes with exhibits of projects, beef, sheep, dairy cattle and poultry.

LIVESTOCK judging, the crowning of a queen, a Saturday night ball, exhibits, a horsemanship demonstration and a colorful Sunday parade and barbecue have become traditions that every year draw thousands of spectators to the western regions of Marin.

The show has retained its grass roots, country fair atmosphere, with horsemen dressing in Indian, Spanish and cowboy costumes.

This year 15 marching bands, floats, antique cars, 145 majorettes and drill teams participated in the show.

WHILE THE first official West Marin Junior Livestock Show was held in 1949, according to newspaper records, Mrs. Grady says she can recall marching in a parade for a West Marin celebration in Point Reyes Station in 1934.

From Marin's beginning fiestas, fairs, festivals and livestock shows have been an important part of the county's heritage. They are a very special part of its history and the ones that have vanished are still missed by those who remember the great community spirit and the fun that was had by all.

Now a new era in fairs begins with the Marin County Fair due to open Friday for a four-day run at the new 80-acre site at the Marin Civic Center. A new era, true. But also a continuation of a longtime Marin tradition.

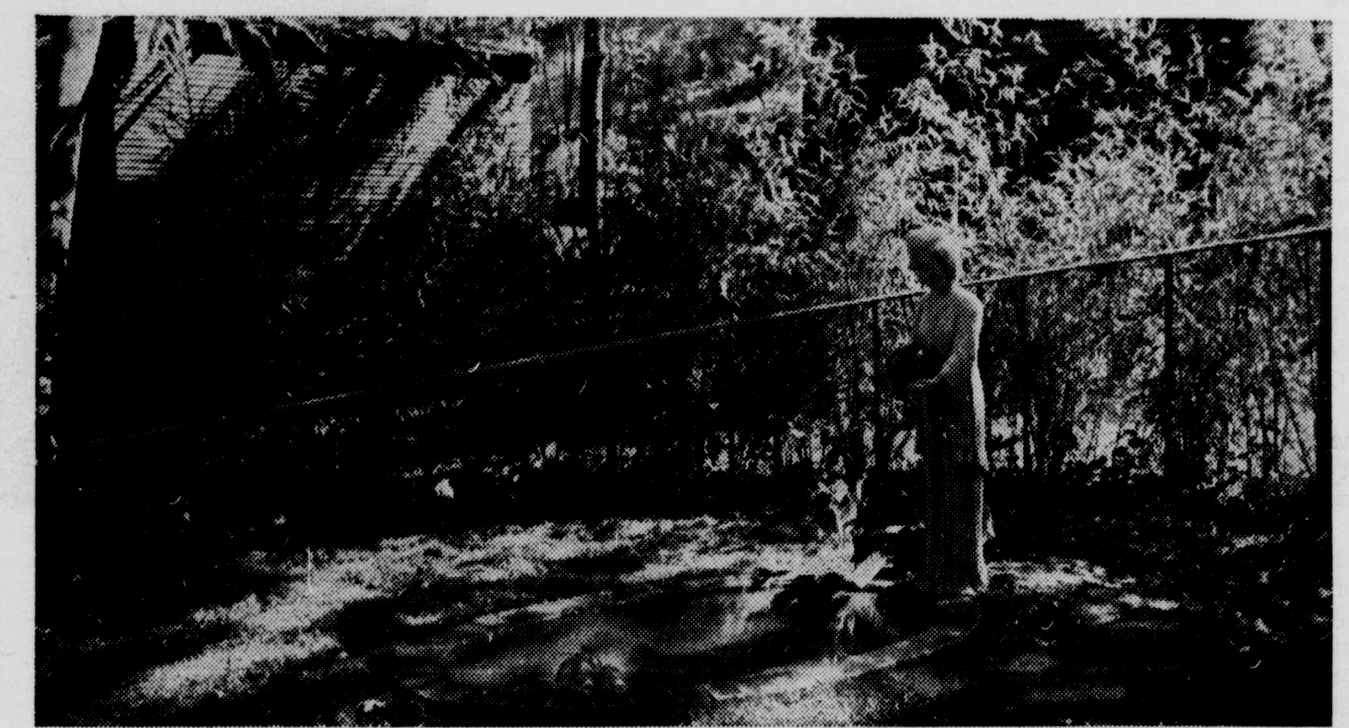
GARDEN SCULPTURE

THE SUCCESS OF a one-day festival in 1945 to raise the funds needed to open the Marin Art and Garden Center on the Kittle Estate grounds at Ross caused sponsoring groups to organize the first official Marin Art and Garden Fair as a three-day event in 1946 with Howard Gilkey as designer. Mrs. A. E. Rucker, right, shared the garden sculpture booth with another artist.



GARDEN SETTINGS by professional landscape designers and nurseries and by community organizations were annually the top attraction for the Marin Art and Garden Fair. A sculpture piece by Nellie Rucker was featured in this 1949 plot, and was purchased by a San Francisco woman who used it as the focal point in her Chinese garden.

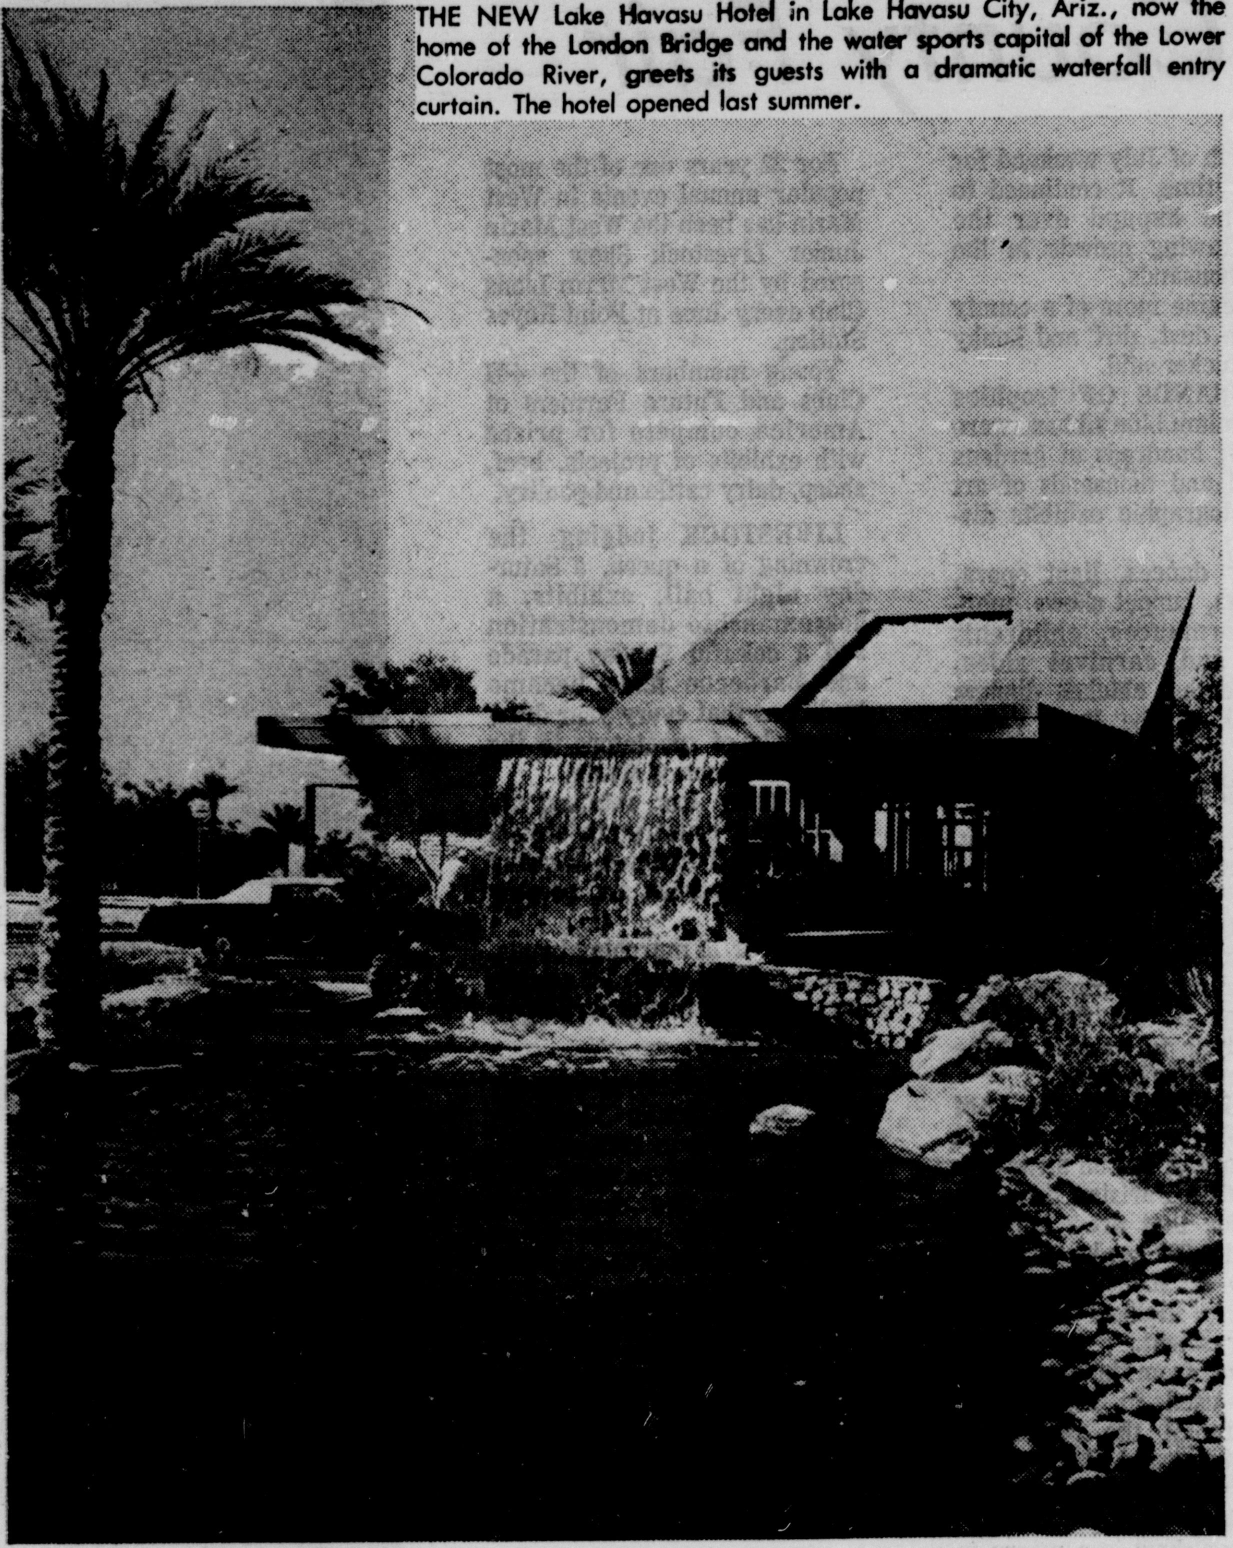
THE THEME OF the 1958 Marin Art and Garden Fair at Ross was "Pride of Heritage" and it was the year that Marcelle McCoy took over as manager. She now holds that same position with the Marin County Fair, to open next Friday on the new fairgrounds at the Marin Civic Center.

That Famous Bridge Has A New Home



THE NEW Lake Havasu Hotel in Lake Havasu City, Ariz., now the home of the London Bridge and the water sports capital of the Lower Colorado River, greets its guests with a dramatic waterfall entry curtain. The hotel opened last summer.

By DAMIEN KAVINE

LAKE HAVASU CITY, Ariz. — A new nursery rhyme may not have been written yet, but London Bridge is "up" — in Arizona!

The bridge in London that was always "falling down" has found an attractive new home in Lake Havasu City, a growing resort community along the lower Colorado River on the Arizona-California border.

Perhaps afraid the famous bridge would be lonely in its new setting, the city has built a few old friends alongside, like a British Village with pubs where you can get your fish and chips and pint of ale just as in London.

THEY'VE EVEN gone so far as to put in cobblestoned walkways to go with the wooden dock. The only thing missing is horse-driven coaches and we wouldn't be surprised if some enterprising soul didn't start a carriage tour of the bridge and its environs which will eventually include a complex of hotels, stores and cafes.

Of course, you're more likely to get into a game of darts at one of these pubs with an Arizona Indian or cowboy than a Cockney cab driver or Piccadilly merchant, but then that's part of this once-in-a-lifetime cultural changeover.

Actually, there once was a British settlement called New London a few miles north of Lake Havasu City. Only ruins are left now of the colony begun by four Cornishmen who mined silver in the nearby Mohave Mountains.

FOR THOSE who have been to London, it may seem a little strange at first to cross London Bridge and see wide-rimmed Stetsons instead of formal-looking Homburgs, and riding sticks rather than canes. But it doesn't take long before the bridge blends in even more scenically with the Chemehuevi Mountains and Colorado River than it did with the Big Ben Clock Tower and the Thames River.

The Travel Pages

It's interesting to compare the ages of the bridge and its new host.

Lake Havasu City is a mere seven years old while there has been a London Bridge, though not the same one, for about 2,000 years. The first primitive wooden spans were destroyed by Viking raids, with the current 1,000-foot long bridge dating back to 1825.

THE ONLY Vikings the bridge will see now are tourists. Instead of demon-headed warcraft, a procession of pleasure boats sail under the majestic arches of the venerable bridge.

Far from just a tourist attraction, the bridge will be a passageway for cars, trucks and recreational vehicles to and from the mainland and a manmade island created by dredging a mile-long waterway for emplacement of the bridge.

Founded in 1964 by a pair of American industrialists, Robert P. McCulloch Sr. and C.V. Wood jr., Lake Havasu City has light industry and a population of around 9,000.

PUT UP FOR sale by the City of London to make way for a wider structure, London Bridge set its owners back nearly two and a half million dollars with another five million dollars thrown in for transportation and reconstruction.

After the purchase in April 1968, each granite stone was lovingly dismantled, given a code number for the rebuilding process, and shipped off to its new home in Arizona. The stones range in weight from a half to eight-and-a-half tons and some 22 million pounds overall, which gives you an idea of how monumental an accomplishment this U.S. version of London Bridge was.

Along with the appropriate Anglo-American hoopla, the bridge will officially open on Oct. 10 with Lord Mayor of London Sir Peter Studd and Gov. Jack Williams of Arizona mingling with Indian tribal leaders and Hollywood personalities.

The opening ceremonies will only be part of a 10-week pageant of arts and crafts, theater and other spectacles that started Sept. 16 and will run through the end of November. Egg-and-spoon, dart-throwing and Elizabethan-to-Victorian costume contest will give a British flavor to the celebrations.

FINAL EVENT of the period will be the world's richest boat race, the $60,000 Eighth Annual Outboard World Championship, Nov. 28 and 29. Write the Lake Havasu Chamber of Commerce, Post Office Box 707, Lake Havasu City, Ariz., 86403, for a schedule of events.

But there's plenty to do right now. The city has golf, tennis, equestrian facilities, and all sorts of nautical sports equipment. Fishing for bass is good, and the beaches at Lake Havasu City and around the 45-mile-long lake are clean, secluded and, so far, uncrowded.

There isn't the greatest selection of hotels to choose from, and this should be the area where the city will probably receive the greatest growth now that London Bridge is up. The Nautical Inn is comfortable if not luxurious. Rates for a single room without meals start at $14. Lake Havasu Hotel is another popular stopping place.

BY CAR, Lake Havasu City is about four hours from Los Angeles, two and a half hours from Las Vegas and three hours from Phoenix.

When you get there, we recommend that you get out and walk across the bridge at least once, preferably at twilight when the shimmering desert light is most beautiful. You won't feel suddenly transported to London or the continent, though there are such momentos of its past as shrapnel scars from Nazi bombs, but there is a magic and tranquility to the bridge.

With only the Arizona sun to contend with, the "American" London Bridge is going to stand for a long time to come and receive somewhat different traffic than it did in Merrie England. In fact, we'd expect Hollywood to zero in soon.

After all, where else can you find one location to shot both a western and World War II movie at the same time?

Will Rogers' Home Attracts Thousands

A leading tourist attraction in Southern California is Will Rogers State Historic Park, near Santa Monica. The California Office of Tourism reports that more than 250,000 persons a year tour the rooms where for years "the cowboy philosopher" made his home on a 345-acre ranch.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Pan American World Airways, Inter-Continental Hotels and Avis have teamed up for a "Double Bonus Escape" plan by which Pan Am passengers flying to Europe with their wives between Nov. 1 and March 31 can rent an Inter-Continental suite or double room for the single room rate and receive a fifth night free after staying four week nights, and can rent an Avis car for four days with the fifth day thrown in as a bonus . . . Icelandic Airlines has initiated a "one-to-16-day" excursion fare of $265 for its jet service between New York and Luxembourg.

American Airlines has added a new individual excursion fare for individual passengers between San Francisco and East Coast cities with such prices as $226.85 round trip to New York, but for which tickets must be purchased within 72 hours after the confirmation of the reservations . . . The South Pacific Can Be Paradise To Bargain Hunter

Anyone who thinks the dollar doesn't go far these days — monetarily, as well as geographically — need only turn to Hawaii and the South Pacific, where island shopping is becoming as much of a vacation pastime as island hopping.

Hawaii is an ideal place to start, or even finish, a Pacific shopping expedition. Honolulu, for example, is fine for picking up aloha shirts and muumuus, which will come in handy on some of the other South Seas islands. The selections in Hawaii generally are wider and the prices cheaper.

AMERICAN SAMOA and her neighbor, Western Samoa, carry out the Polynesian theme in real island fashion and in somewhat purer forms than in Hawaii.

Woven pandanus (screw pine) often in colorfully dyed designs, is a Samoan favorite for floor or place mats, shipping baskets, satchels, serving trays and even bedroom slippers. And excellent tapa cloth, hammered from tree bark, may be plain, although it more than likely will be decorated with traditional brown and black designs.

Among the carved wood items that rate highly with visitors are ceremonial kava bowls (kava is a shrubby pepper from whose crushed root a popular island drink is made), tikis (images of a Polynesian supernatural power), facsimile ceremonial clubs and staffs and model canoes.

SHELL LEIS or necklaces and other shell jewelry, as well as dancing and hula skirts made of various fibers, also vie for one's dollar.

French Polynesia, an easy flight from Samoa, offers much the same in "buys" but with some regional differences.

The shopper browsing in Tahiti, Bora Bora or Moorea will find modern versions — some slick, some good, some not so good — of tikis, ceremonial adzes and drums, all carved from wood, while volcanic stone is sometimes fashioned into representations of old gods.

The foremost buys, perhaps, are mother-of-pearl articles, bedspreads in gay patterns and hand-painted, silk-screened or hand-painted fabrics.

THE FIJI Islands, the "crossroads of the mid-Pacific," are full of bargain possibilities, both native and foreign. The many duty-free shops in Nadi and Suva, both on Viti Leva, the principal island in the Fiji group, mean excellent buys in cultured pearls, sari silks, cameras, watches, binoculars, silver filigree jewelry and numerous other "overseas" merchandise that costs only about half as much as in the States.

The Fijis also offer a fine assortment of local handicrafts. Tapa cloth and woven fans, mats, baskets and other items, many bearing distinctive Fijian motifs, are common. So are shell leis, mother-of-pearl jewelry and tortoise shells fashioned into accessories for both men and women.

For the daring man wants to try something different, it's an easy matter to pick up a sulu, that traditional and snappy sawtooth-fringed "skirt" that Fiji men, including soldiers and policemen, wear.

NEW ZEALAND, too, has much to whet the shopper's appetite these days, for it has experienced a revival of Maori (Polynesian) arts and crafts, along with increased production of other "take home" products.

Among Maori creations — the tourist-busy Rotorua thermal area is best for shopping — are war clubs, tattooed facial masks, tikis and a batch of "souvenir" gimmicks carved from wood and featuring ancient decorative designs.

Tikis also are made from greenstone, the local jade; the hand-carved ones are especially eye-catching. Jewelry and other products also incorporate this extraordinarily hard gemstone.

Other possibilities: flax-reed skirts, scatter or travel rugs of sheepskin or lamb wool, artickes inlaid with rare woods and canned cheeses. New Zealand produces some of the world's best and most varied kinds of cheese.

IN AUSTRALIA, sheep play an important part — as they do in New Zealand — in what the shopper will find on store shelves. Wool products, among them blankets, sweaters, skirts and yardage, are all excellent buys, as are sheepskin rugs and vests.

Opals, especially black ones, rank among the world's best and sell at bargain prices.

Still another bargain are the superb Australian wines.

The native crafts, from boomerangs to bark paintings, can be unusual; a bit of careful shopping will uncover fine examples of native work. Still other favorites are stuffed, cuddly-soft koala bears — toy bears, that is — canned kangaroo tail soup, out-back hats, china, pottery and ceramics, hand beaten jewelry of silver or copper and paintings from a new and respected breed of artists.

THE PACIFIC-bound holidayer should bear in mind that virtually all international airports west of Hawaii have duty-free shops. All are ideal for last-minute shopping for liquor, perfumes, watches and cameras, among other goodies, usually at prices 40 to 50 per cent below those you'll find in your local Main Street store.

WESTERN VISITORS find the native marketplace at Suva, Fiji, a fascinating spot for browsing and shopping. Here an American tourist examines just some of the handcrafted goods offered for sale there.

It's The Britain Nobody Knows

There's a part of Britain so little known by Americans that it might almost be on the dark side of the moon.

It's almost tax-free.

It's a cow paradise.

It's nearer to France than Britain.

The queen rules it not as Queen of England but as the Duke of Normandy!

It's the Channel Islands.

Take Jersey, for instance, 10 miles by six, rolling and prosperous.

THE JERSEY tax system is as mild as the climate, and not even millionaires pay more than four shillings in the pound. Consequently Britain's overtaxed rich have settled on the island like flies on a jam bun.

Its population already stands at 70,000, and citizenship is increasingly difficult to attain. Visions of living in a second Monaco haunt the natives: recent proposals to convert St. Helier's Castle into a casino were indignantly quashed.

For visitors to the island a good spot is Longueville Manor, an ivied Norman hall, prudently updated century by century, and an excellent hotel, with double rooms at about $15. Through an open window you may hear the tinkle of Pimm's No. 1 being served by the swimming pool . . .

You may hire a limousine with chauffeur and drive completely across the island for under two dollars, but the best way to explore Jersey is to climb into a rented car, follow your nose, and stop when you arrive somewhere in particular, use Alice's technique in looking-Glass Land: head in the opposite direction. Works like a charm.

If the road beneath your tires plunges suddenly away, do not be alarmed. You have merely left Jersey's central plateau, and are descending towards one of its innumerable sandy bays. The most beautiful of these are St. Brelade's, and the Royal Bay of Grouville, which is dominated by Mount Orgeuil Castle. This harmless-looking fortress was built in 1109 to defend Jersey from France.

It's a good place to laze, sandwich in hand, and admire the sight of miles of sunlit seawater.

The west coast of Jersey is one enormous beach, where the rollers are perfect and lifeguards patrol the sands. Lovers of long windy walks will not be able to resist its four-mile concrete ramp, built during the German occupation of 1941-45.

St. Helier, capital of Jersey, boasts an elegant 19th Century square.

VISIT THE Lily Langtry showcase in the city museum. Edward VII's exquisite mistress was Jersey-born. Her mother-of-pearl vanity case, displayed here, is surely the zenith of High Victorian camp. There are bushes, tweezers, hooks, combs, spoons, palettes, stencils, razors, pins, puffs, and curling-rods, all intricately worked in silver, even a tiny barometer for Mrs. Langtry to plot her make-up meteorologically.

In the nearby oil portrait by Sir John Everett, she seems no more than a bosomy brunette with a large nose and liquid eyes: for all that, she is Jersey's most famous daughter.

An hour and a quarter north of Jersey by hydrofoil lies Guernsey, Victor Hugo's "ile severe et douce". The capital, St. Peter Port, stacked up against the harbor like palings round a pond, markets as many duty-free good things as St. Helier, within a smaller area. Scotch at $1.50 a quart, La Corona cigars at $8 a 5-lb. box, and beer at a dime a pint are typical examples.

THE COBBLED city square is dominated by Les Halles Market, a delicate Victorian structure full of fresh fruit and seafood. Here 90 cents will buy a vast pink crab, with seawater still wet on its back. Invest six further cents in a lemon, return to your hotel, and bribe the kitchen to boil the crab for you. When it is served, crown it with sweet butter and ply your lemon literally.

You can't eat better anywhere.

At St. Peter Port is the world's smallest church. It is called Le Vauxbelets Chapel, and it holds, at a pinch, one priest and a congregation of two. It is the life's work of a Roman Catholic monk, who inlaid it throughout with translucent shells, broken china, and colored glass.

When the sun slants through the trees and lights up its walls, the effect is like something out of Revelations: "The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald; the fifth . . ."

(The Channel Islands can be reached by daily flights from London. These serve both Jersey and Guernsey. Continental flights also come in from Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam. A fast hydrofoil service links St. Malo, Jersey, Guernsey, and Sark. There are frequent ferry services between all the islands).

Picking America's Prettiest

THERE SHE IS: THE LIFE AND TIMES OF MISS AMERICA by Frank Deford; Viking, 351 pages, $10. Reviewed by Eugene Block.

A delightful, authoritatively written study of what intellectuals might term triviata Americana is Frank Deford's analysis of all that has gone on on the steel pier of the boardwalk of Atlantic City on the evening of the second Saturday of almost every September since 1921.

In great and interesting depth, Deford relates every conceivable aspect of the pageant which attracted on television, this year, almost 40 million viewers.

"There She Is" gives myriad hints to attractive, talented girls who might want to spend a Labor Day holiday in New Jersey and a year touring the United States and other parts of the world as America's most publicized female. The reader gets to know well every beautiful girl who was Miss America and equally well the many important people behind the scenes of the non-profit organization which produces the show for which NBC extracted close to seven and a half million dollars this year.

In the sense that there are no bad people, no corruption, no avarice, but only beautiful girls with attractive figures, quick minds and wit and abundant talent, "There She Is" is a nice book, a well-written book, a humorous and an interesting one. Deford likes all the people who are the subjects of his book, and they emerge as likable people.

If there is a protagonist, and there are many, it is the Pageant, itself. The author is impressed by it and its integrity:

"If the Pageant had ever sold out to television, by now it surely would have been moved to Burbank, videotaped in a studio, included a lot of male dancers in the opening number, and have slick routines by a comedian named Joey interspersed throughout. All the judges would be Nanette Fabray and Jan Murray, and their vote totals would be lit up on big electronic boards. Second-rate male celebrities would be employed to escort contestants, 'There She Is' would be sung by this year's hot new male lead that the network is pushing . . . and Miss America would be crowned by a leering Joe Nameth.

"If you think this is far-fetched, you have never seen what many other beauty pageants are coming to on TV."

Since Deford is a senior editor for Sports Illustrated, he is used to statistics. "There She Is" includes many. He is also used to making decisions and moral judgments. After careful study of all past Miss Americas, he cites his top 10. He deems Evelyn Ay, Miss America in 1954, the best of all: She measured 37-24-36.

Along with being a statistical study, "There She Is" is a historical, economical, sociological, political examination of the times of the Miss Americas. Trends are studied and discussed:

" . . . As a matter of fact, the last 16 straight Miss Americas have come from precisely those states which political theorist Kevin Phillips includes as part of the 'emerging majority' of conservative thought. Specifically, six TV Miss Americas have come from the states of the Confederacy, six from the plains-mountains, and four from the Midwest."

If Deford writes a sequel to "There She Is" next year, he can maintain his thesis with this year's Miss America, an Ohioan who told reporters:

"I'm conservative and I'm very proud of it. I'm not a typical coed, but I feel the majority of my peers feel the way I do. I faced a lot of pressure from my peers, but I feel that I'm a secure enough individual. Idon't need any escape . . . "

Deford does not ignore the fact that all of Miss Americas have been white and that Bess Myerson, Jewish, was the only non-Christian Miss America. But he foresees the time when a black, an Oriental or a Chicana might be sung to by Bert Parks, with a bouquet of American beauty roses in her arms and a crown on her head.

It is doubtful that Frank Deford would argue too strongly that the Miss America Contest is not a slice of triviata Americana. But as he points out:

" . . . The critics who attack Miss America for being irresponsible and escapist miss the whole point. Of course it is. Miss America is escapist, and so are Disneyland and the Baltimore Colts, so is a skinny dip and so is Johnny Carson, so is a ski lodge, and so is visiting the koala bears in the San Diego Zoo, and so are the Indianapolis 500 and a dirty movie from Sweden, and so is Don Ho, and so is a brook that runs through a park in Denton, Tex., with shade trees and flowers and small dogs barking at a clear blue sky. So, too, was the Saturday Evening Post before it became topical and tough and unpopular."

PATRICIA Donnelly, the Miss Michigan and Miss America of 1939, a year when American patriotism was at high tide, is just one of the many beautiful young women pictured and discussed in Frank Deford's "There She Is: The Life and Times of Miss America."

Southeast Asia War From Which We Didn't Learn

WALKOUT WITH STILWELL IN BURMA by Frank Dorn; Crowell, 248 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by James Klett.

At the end of World War II American Army historians interrogated dozens of German generals to learn how to fight on the Russian plains.

It was thought, presumedly, that we would fight there. But there were few if any studies of our experiences in Southeast Asia and China. A recent bibliography of the wars there lists no book in English earlier than 1950.

Reading "Walkout" then, the effect is striking when these World War II experiences are compared with those we have so recently experienced and, in fact, are now experiencing. We should have spent our time studying that earlier war. Europe is almost in its third generation of leaders but the principals Chaing Kai-shek and Chou En-lai are still there. Frank Dorn knew both well.

But even more depressing while reading a book like this is the realization that all the stage props and background characters are also still there. There were at that time, too, those warlords more out to settle petty hatred scores than to fight a war, those "allies" of ours who will line their own pockets at their own troop's expense. The desultory and infectious cruelty continues. And the American is forced to stand by and watch.

Frank Dorn's book is no scholarly analysis. The story is personal, but because Frank Dorn was General Dorn when the decisions were made during our first real jungle war, he was privy to a lot that scholars could only surmise. General Dorn, on the other hand, avoids those egotistical innuendos that usually characterize these accounts.

The first third of the book sets the background for the rest of the book and it is here that we learn what we missed before Vietnam. The rest of the book is a dramatic description of how General Joe Stilwell valiantly fought to put together a beaten Army in Burma and how the Japanese outfought the Allies and chased them out of Burma. This is an exciting tale. But the book shines in the first 100 pages when it describes the Southeast Asian scene we have come to know so well.

General Dorn was attache in China from 1934 to 1938 and knows and loves the Chinese people. How lucky we would have been to learn from him. When we went into Vietnam 20 years after the events of this book our problem was not that we did not know anything about Southeast Asia, it was that we did not know we knew nothing about it.

The book's 250 pages are too few. The maps are good and there are photographs.

Redwood High Graduate Authors A First Novel

THE PAPER CHASE by John Jay Osborn, Jr.; Houghton Mifflin, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

JOHN JAY OSBORN JR.
Life at Harvard Law

To be young is to suffer — even though you're an ex-Boy Scout, intelligent, and a first-year student at Harvard Law School.

That's the message in this first novel by an author who should know — John Jay Osborn, product of Larkspur's Redwood High, Harvard College and, in 1970, Harvard Law School.

He tells it like it is, and any former grad student (young or old) will recognize and sympathize with his characters.

The hero is Hart, a first-year Harvard Law student who suffers all the pangs of uncertainty, but who survives and even conquers the system.

His fellow-suffers include Brooks, the nice guy who can't make it academically' Ford, the organized operator sure to make Law Review; Anderson, who worries about "maximum grade point"; and Bell, who falls in love with his own outline of the Property course.

Hart's girl, Susan, is a late 20th Century wench who would have been equally at home in Elizabethan England.

Professor Kingsfield, Hart's demanding teacher and unwitting antagonist, is, conincidentally and completely unbelievably, Susan's father. Complications ensue.

John Osborn writes crisp dialogue — though one is reminded of the slim vocabularies and repetitious curses common to students.

Also, his descriptions of Harvard, Cambridge and environs are excellent — old grads will revel in nostalgia.

This is a better-than-average "college" novel sure to be popular with students.

Janet Flanner Back Again With Letters From France

PARIS JOURNAL 1965-1971, Volume Two, by Janet Flanner (Genet); Atheneum, 438 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Mary Lou Jacobson.

"Paris Journal" is an absolutely fantastic combination of facts, oddements, trivia and comment.

Miss Flanner, as Genet, has been writing her letters from Paris for the New Yorker magazine since 1925. This is a compilation of some of those letters for the years 1965-71 — the DeGaulle years. This could almost be a part of a biography of Charles de Gaulle and his effects on the times, the people and the monetary system of Europe and America.

But there is so much more.

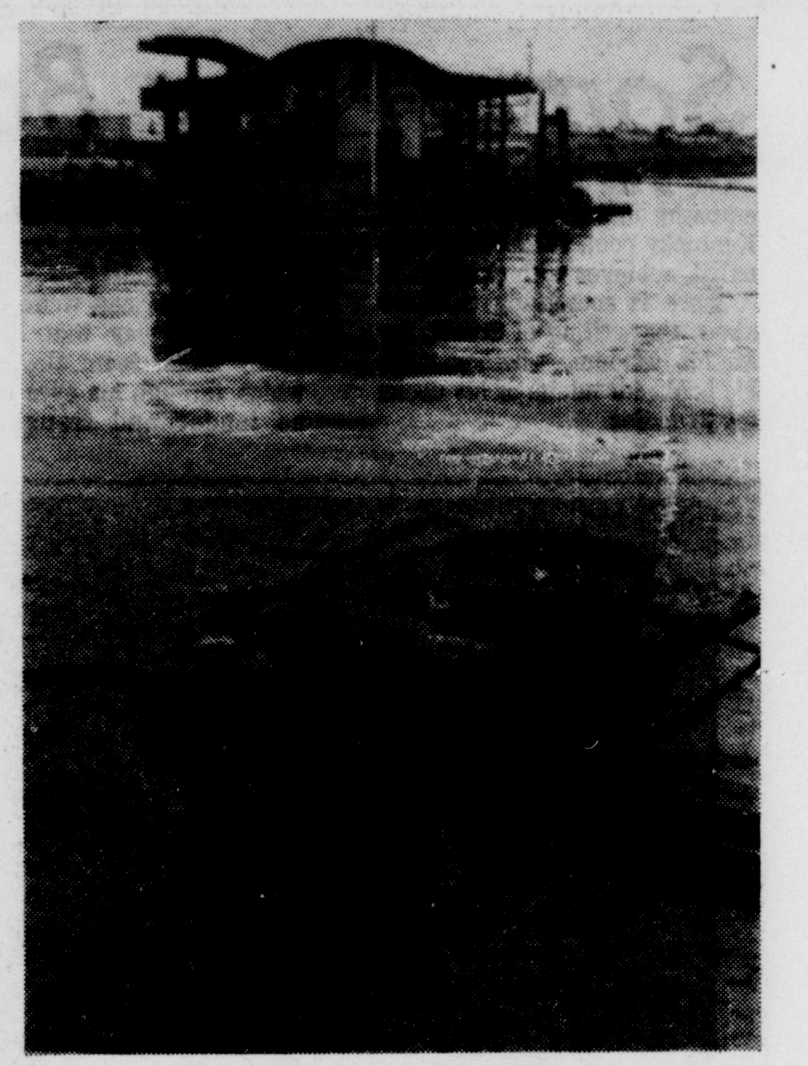
The fine portraits of Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas, the feeling of the French toward the American tourist, and the French views on art and music, life, love and clothes, all seen through the eyes of an American and expressed so that we can really understand the inner workings of a people with ways so often very different from our own.

She writes with a soft, tender hand, yet she pulls no punches. She writes equally well of Martin Luther King, the restoration of Versaille, and the French dislike of our entry into the Vietnam war. She explains impressions, newspapers, the stock market, clothes and the people of Paris, just like your great Aunt Susie might if it were her first trip there. For, though Miss Flanner has lived in Paris since 1921, she has lost none of her American viewpoint.

This is not a book to be read in one sitting, but to be savored, a few sections at a time. There is a complete index at the back, which adds immeasurably to the value of the book as a research source, for one could easily find anything needed to document a report.

Surely, the first volume of "Paris Journal," which won the National Book Award, could have been no better than this truly fine work.

Crisis At Santa Barbara — And What Led Up To Spill



THERE WAS NO fishing while a thick scum of heavy crude oil covered the waters of Santa Barbara's harbor when this United Press International photograph was taken in 1969. The story of the huge oil leak from an offshore Union Oil Co. drilling site is told by Los Angeles Time reporter Lee Dye, who covered the assignment for his newspaper, in his book "Blowout at Platform A."

By DON KEOWN

BLOWOUT AT PLATFORM A by Lee Dye: Doubleday, 231 pages, $5.95.

We still remember our first visit to Santa Barbara and the lasting impression made upon us by the beauty of its Riviera-like waterfront and harbor with its sparkling water and clean sands.

We recall, too, our disbelief and dismay when we first learned that huge, unsightly platforms had been erected off Santa Barbara's shores from which a number of major petroleum companies were proceeding to probe for oil.

We remember an uneasiness, even though friends in the petroleum industry assured us there was no danger of pollution to Santa Barbara's gem-like environment — other, of course, than the "sight pollution" already inflicted upon the view by the mere presence of the platforms. They were there, eyesores to be plainly seen, and could hardly be denied. But Americans have shown repeatedly an almost limitless ability to accept and adjust to ugliness, providing it is presented to them in the name of progress.

Then, on Jan. 28, 1969, it occurred. Something went wrong at Union Oil Co.'s Platform A, and millions of gallons of odorous, poisonous crude oil came boiling up from the ocean's floor. Neither industry nor government, it developed, was prepared to deal effectively with such a crisis. And so the release of the gooey mess was to continue for an unconscionably long period of time, at first as a continuous spill and then as periodic spurts.

It was an ecological disaster that was to mark the birth of a new awareness of how badly mankind has abused his environment, and a new movement to reverse that catastrophic trend.

The movement was born not just in the usually conservative community of Santa Barbara, but across the country, and even around the world. No longer was a small and lonely band of conservationists left to fight the battle alone while suffering the ridicule of their less sensitive and less farsighted fellow citizens.

This movement, given more lip-service than active support by government and more advertising ballyhoo than actual participation by much of big industry, has been limited in its successes. But there have been gains. And the impact of losses has been reduced.

It is this story that Lee Dye, a young Los Angeles Times reporter, previously with the San Jose Mercury and the San Diego Evening Tribune, tells in his book "Blowout at Platform A: The Crisis That Awakened a Nation."

The book is more than a recapitulation of the calamity at Santa Barbara. It is also an uncompromising capsule history of the petroleum industry from John D. Rockefeller and his wheeler-dealer tactics with his monolithic Standard Oil Co. down to the present day when a handful of major concerns and their millionaire principal stockholders and officers wield enormous political and economic influence and bask in the special privileges awarded them by their confederates and toadies in government and the Pentagon.

From these roots, Dye tells us, grew the philosophy that led ultimately to Santa Barbara's misfortune and to other mishaps elsewhere.

Then Secretary of Interior Walter Hickel was speaking for the petroleum industry when he said: "We must always go forward . . . to take care of the thirst of the population."

Dye suggests that it might be more than a wee bit stupid to press blindly forward, if one is standing on the edge of a precipice and facing the abyss.

He suggests, too, that before one does venture forward into untested territories, it might be wise to map some plans for unexpected eventualities and emergencies.

After the blowout at Platform A, he notes, the public discovered too late that "the industry was almost totally incapable of doing anything about the oil once it had been released into the channel." This, despite, the fact that "the industry knew there was a substantial chance of leakage."

Thanks to men like Lyndon B. Johnson, Russell Long, Robert Kerr, Everett Dirksen and Sam Rayburn, the petroleum giants not only were granted such special bonanzas as the notorious depletion allowances and import quotas, at taxpayers and consumers expense, but also were permitted to operate in hazardous circumstances without taking what seems now to be the most elemental of safety precautions.

Hickel, later to become somewhat of a hero with conservationists, acted with something less than courage and dispatch in the face of the Santa Barbara emergency, Dye also demonstrates.

After reviewing the buccaneering past of the petroleum industry, Dye asserts: "The industry is what it is today largely because of its past. Its game is to make money. Its tool is power. It has an abundance of each, and it uses both freely."

Yet, due in a large measure to the shock engendered by the Santa Barbara spill, there has been some erosion of that power, and big petroleum, at least to a degree, is on the defensive today. More and more voices, even in the U.S. Senate and in state legislatures, speak out critically. And Johnson, Rayburn, Dirksen, et al, are no longer present to defend the industry, or to close off debate.

This is not to say that the oil industry has been suddenly emasculated. It still commands fabulous wealth. And it does not hesitate to spend those monies on its own behalf, as it demonstrated in California in 1970 when it made huge contributions to help defeat Proposition 18 which would have permitted the expenditure of some state gasoline tax monies for mass transit and air pollution study purposes.

Thanks to such resources, foes outspent the friends of Proposition 18 by a 20 to 1 margin, thus defeating or distorting the democratic process.

The basic question, in Dye's mind, is not whether offshore oil exploration and drilling should be subjected to tighter controls and conducted with a greater sense of responsibility, but whether such should be undertaken at all.

His conclusion is that it should not. "No more leases should be sold," he writes. "The ocean should be preserved for those who will come this way long after we have passed from the picture." To those who think it impossible to poison an entire ocean, he answers that the same was once said of the Mississippi River, now referred to as "the colon of mid-America."

He rejects the contention of the oil industry and its political puppets that offshore production is essential to the national welfare and the national defense, citing such alternative fuel sources as geothermal steam, shale deposits, solar and atomic-energies, recycled wastes, etc. And, of course, there are the vast foreign oil fields now largely denied to us because of the import quotas that create a captive market for domestic oil.

"The nation's energy problems are not impossible to solve," Dye writes, "but this nation is not presently inclined to solve them."

Dye's book is a hard-hitting attack against a legitimate target — an industry with ample means to defend itself and with no hesitation about so doing. The Santa Barbara episode alone is testimony to the need for a closer watch upon these petroleum colossi and upon the politicians who too meekly do their bidding.

A PRAISEWORTHY project of Seattle's Superior Publishing Co. is the republication in facsimile of issues of Fly, the National Aeronautic Magazine, from November, 1908, through August, 1909.

The magazines reproduced are from the collection of Jerry M. Straub, are are presented exactly as they were except for a very slight reduction in size.

They constitute a tremendous bonanza for students of aviation and of the history of the early 20th Century, and are quite likely to attract an audience well beyond those confines with their "camp" appeal.

From those earliest years of aviation one can read how to build a gliding machine, all about the aero clubs, why ladies should be interested in ballooning, the story of the dirigibles, the data on man-lifting kites, the details of the Green aero motor, a description of the Curtiss Biplane, Hudson Maxim's forecasts of the role of the flying machine in war, biographies of pioneers of aeronautics, all complete with pictures. Plus advertisements of such products as the Steam Motor Journal, advertising balloons, the Gillette safety razor, the Howard watch, Wilbur's chocolates, the novel "Born Again" and the Fisk automobile.

It is an altogether fascinating trip back into another era. No price is quoted on the book, but you can bet it is more than the $1 a year's subscription to the magazine cost in 1908.

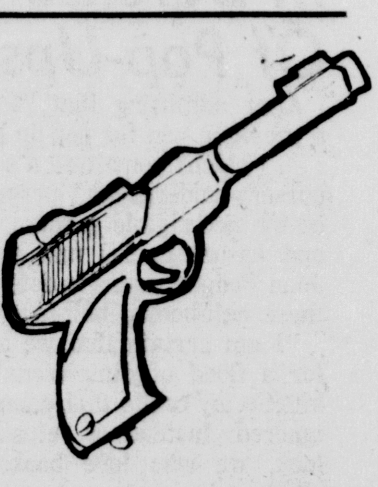
THE NEWEST cooperative effort of Ballantine Books and the Sierra Club is a softcover edition of Patricia Caulfield's "The Everglades," making that attractive book and urgent plea for conservation, complete with all the color photographs, available now for $3.95. It's a beautiful book, expousing a worthy cause.

NEW FROM Writer's Digest: "Cartoonist's Market," listing some 600 markets that purchase cartoons and detailing their terms and needs.

A GRIM reminder of the past is "Nazi Regalia" (Ballantine, $2.95) by Jack Pia, a softcover catalog with color illustrations of "souvenirs" from the terrible years when Adolf Hitler was inflicting his horrors upon mankind. It was also an era when much stock was put in uniforms and symbols. The book is for collectors and students of the period.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE EXLUSIVE MRS. POLLIFAX by Dorothy Gilman; Doubleday, 240 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.



Emily Pollifax is, of course, the well intentioned but naive amateur spy introduced by Dorothy Gilman in two earlier novels and portrayed upon the motion picture screen by Rosalind Russell.

This time the indominitable Mrs. Pollifax, through her highly implausible connection with the CIA, undertakes a mission behind the Iron Curtain and into the Balkans to deliver passports to the underground.

The to-be-expected and anticipated complications are not long in developing.

It is good fun reading and another juicy screen role for comedienne Miss Russell.

Some New Books For The Juniors

One is not surprised by the empathy that Jesse Stuart, the Kentucky poet, author and journalist, achieves with children.

There is something childlike about the writing of Stuart, for all his wisdom, whether it be his books for adults or his books for juveniles.

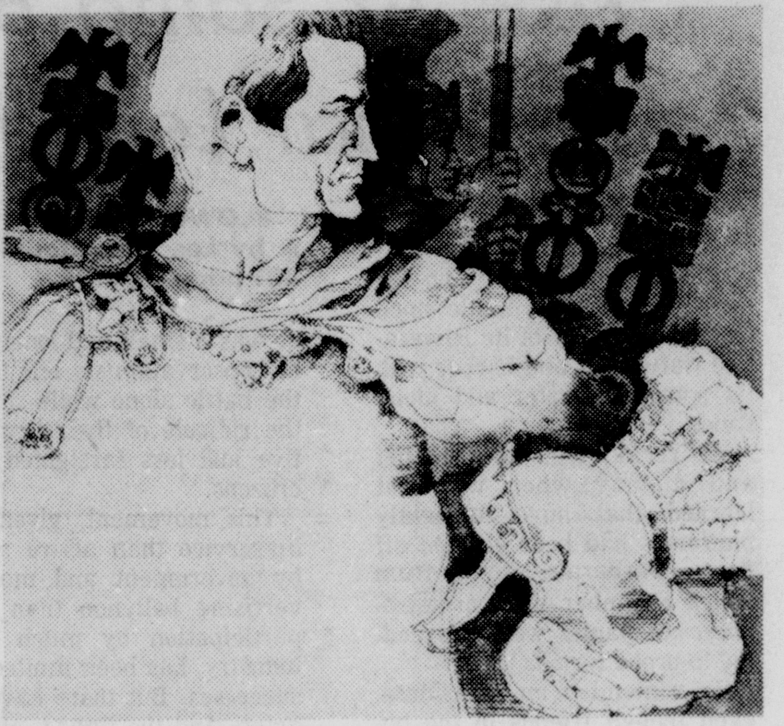
We speak of a certain sensitivity that most of us lose when we leave childhood, but which, somehow, Stuart has managed to retain. He can write of subjects in a way that in other hands might seem cloying, but which through his eyes emerge as tender and fraught with meaning.

The quality is present in full measure in his "Come to My Tomorrowland" (Aurora, $4.95), a simple little story about a young girl afflicted with polio who finds an albino fawn, also lame, and nurses him back to health. From the animal the child, too draws inspiration and courage. Then comes the time when the game warden demands that Snowball be returned to the wilds. Joy is faced with yet another crisis.

It is a quite frankly sentimental story, but one suspects today's children can well use a little sentimentality. And no writer is more attune to nature and its wild things than Jesse Stuart.

SOME OTHER new books for juniors:

Sophia Harvati Fenton attempts to lure the 9 to 11-year-olds (Holt, Rinehart, $3.50) into the world of ancient history with her "Ancient Rome" detailing how a small village grew into a city state and eventually an empire that ruled the western world. The author of earlier books in this "A Book to Begin On" series on Greece and Egypt, Miss Fenton tells her story of Rome simply and straightforwardly. But one suspects her strongest weapons are the illustrations by Richard Cuffari that have a strong, majestic quality that might well command the attention of otherwise dubious youngsters.



THERE IS A HEROIC quality to the artwork of illustrator Richard Cuffari that fits perfectly with the subject matter of Sophia Harvati Fenton's book, "Ancient Rome: A Book to Begin With."

Another book about a fascinating foreign land, but this one dealing with more contemporary times and on the day-to-day living level is "My Village in Thailand" (Pantheon, $4.50). The two have been doing a series of "my village" books revealing the customs and living patterns of other peoples. Young Chavalit Khantasiri and his family of Bangkok are the subjects this time, and American children should find their very different way-of-life enchanting. Excellent, well printed photographs illustrate the book.

For youngsters with a leaning toward physiology "Controls in Your Body" (Lippincott, $3.95) offers an interesting explanation of the nervous system without seeming in any way "school bookish." Navin Sullivan, an English technical journalist with a degree in medicine, is the author and Anthony Ravielli the illustrator. To add zest for the young reader, Sullivan provides some simple experiments for the home or school. Well done.

For consistent high quality Harper & Row leads the pack among the publishers of suspense fiction for adults. Apparently it lavishes the same pride and care in its choice of thrillers for juveniles. "The House on the Brink" ($4.50) by the Englishman John Gordon is an outstanding example. A boy and a girl in the marshlands hunting King John's lost treasures and involving themselves in the secrets of a strange small town that place them in the gravest danger — what youngster could fail to respond to that kind of excitement? Gordon provides splendid atmosphere and a well-paced plot with meaningful characters.

"MYSTERY OF the Maya Jade" (Lippincott, $4.95) by Elizabeth Honness parlays an exotic setting — Guatemala — with such mysterious goings-on as the theft of a museum piece and some adventures in an underground burial site. The proponents of the lively action in this tale are a young girl, Pam, traveling with her aunt, and a young boy, Toby, whose father is a working archaeologist. Miss Honness, a veteran writer of suspense novels for juniors, keeps it all deliciously thrilling while avoiding gore and mayhem.

On the other hand, "Me and Jim Luke" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Robbie Branscum may be a bit too realistic for impressionable youngsters. Two Southern lads find a body in the woods that involves them with the Klan and other dangers. Along with the taut suspense a romance between a doctor and a woman writer, friends of the boys, make this a book best appreciated by older boys and girls, say about 12 or 13. But realism, there is. And young Sammy John makes a spellbinding narrator.

C. Everard Palmer writes once again of Jamaica in his third novel, "The Sun Salutes You" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.95). Mike returns to Kendal with his new truck, determined to set up a haulage business. But Matt Southern wants no competition. The result is a battle of wits and wills. But Palmer, Jamaica-born and reared, keeps his tone light and his dialogue crisp, so that his story moves along at a fast and pleasing pace. This, too, is for the 12-year level, give or take a year or two.

"The Story of Sergei Prokofiev" (Lippincott, $4.50) by the musician and writer Helen K. Laufmann is a demonstration that biographies of the greats of the arts written for children can be made as palatable as the more popular stories of men of action and adventure. Mrs. Kaufmann tells the colorful story of the Russian composer in a lively, sprightly fashion. Photographs are sprinkled through the book as illustrations. Unfortunately, the publisher has given the book an unjacketed and rather forbidding cover that might turn off all prospective young readers except dedicated students of fine music.

"Iron-Tail" by George X. Sand (Scribner's, $4.95) is a conservation-slanted animal adventure story set in the Florida Everglades, with a young alligator as its central character. As Sand details the day-to-day existence of Iron-Tail, made hazardous by man and his many encroachments upon nature, he also provides a good picture of swamp ecology, its delicate balance, and the damage that can be done by unwarranted intrusions. For the 11 and 12-year-old level, it is one of the better juvenile novels catering to the new interest in the environment.

"Sir Addlepate and the Unicorn" (Doubleday, $3.95) by artist-illustrator Dahlov Ipcar is a fantasy picture story bright with color. Sir Addlepate sets out to find the unicorn desired by his fair maiden above all other things. But before the mission is accomplished he has been involved in a wild assortment of adventures with a varied cast of weird creatures. Imaginative children will enjoy the romp away from realism.

In Defense Of Pop-Ups

After admitting that "I have a sneaking yen for pop-up books . . . (which) constitute a sort of nursery underground perpetuated by incorrigible grandmothers and casual uncles and aunts," Joan Bodger writes in defense of these half-books, half-toys:

"I am certain that we are in for a flood of dimensional and kinetic toy-books that cannot be ignored. Instead of refusing to look, we who love books and children had better start taking these new developments seriously. We must set standards as rigorously as we have for conventional books, records and film tapes."

Chef Gilly's Cookbook— A French Cuisine Classic

FEAST OF FRANCE by Antoine Gilly; Crowell, 433 pages, $13.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

It may come as a surprise to some television viewers to learn that Julia Childs does not "own" the American market for books on French cooking. The latest challenger to her two prolific-selling works is this splendid volume by one of the most famous of all restaurateurs to practice French gastronomy for American palates, Antoine Gilly.

With the help of author and gourmet Jack Denton Scott, Chef Gilly has assembled what is probably the premiere cookbook of 1971.

It contains more than 300 recipes from hors d'oeuvres to desserts, the classics of his home land and the dishes he featured at his tremendously successful New York restaurants before retiring to Nice. While there is less of a tendency on his part to Americanize techniques and ingredients than exists in the innovative Mrs. Childs, Gilly's long career in America did cause him to make use of distinctively American staples and to apply French cooking methods to these.

This big, illustrated book, certain to enjoy a brisk Christmas trade, contains not only Gilly's most valued recipes, but also considerable insight into the theories and philosophies of French cooking.

On Nov. 6, at Stonehenge Inn in Ridgefield, Conn., Gilly will be presented the coveted Paulee de Meursault literary prize for this book. The occasion will be the annual American version of the traditional Paulee gathering at Meursault, France, celebrating the grape harvest and honoring the growers.

It is deserved recognition for not only one of the world's most famous chefs, but also the tutor of a very large proportion of the most talented men practicing French cuisine in America today. And now the author of a handsome and expertly-done cookbook whose delectable contents are likely to convert many to the long-held French belief that food deserves that little special flair and attention that the Gallic chefs accord it.

"Feast of France" is especially noteworthy for the attention it pays to that country's justly-famed peasant or country dishes along with haute cuisine from Paris and the other cities — and, of course, Chef Gilly's own inventions.

For Color In Winter Rely On The Annuals

Garden Page

In most sections of this country the winter landscape is either a drab brown or a snowy white.

Californians, however, by showing a little foresight in their planting, can enjoy spring-like color in their gardens in December, January and February.

Many shrubs and trees unfold their floral beauty during the cool weather months in Marin. But the best source of such "off-season" color is the annual flower that will reward you with bouquets at the time when gardeners in the East are huddling around their firesides and all outside is cold and dead.

AMONG THE most popular color bearers are Iceland Poppies, Caldendulas and Fairy Primroses, whose consistent performances account for their high ranking throughout the state.

Iceland Poppies produce exquisite flowers — the petals have a crepe-like texture and the blooms come in a wide range of cheery colors — to brighten any area of the garden. Use them in border situations or massed plantings. They must have good drainage, hence growing them in planter boxes is an excellent method to showcase the beauty of Iceland Poppies.

How much growing time the plants get in fall dictates the flowering period; so don't delay in setting-out the plants.

THIS IS TRUE, too, of Calendulas — often called the brightest of all winter-blooming flowers. Plant them immediately if you would enjoy the Calendulas' bright blooms before spring.

The colors of the large Calendula flowers are intense — especially in the hybrids. The traditional orange and yellow flowers have been enhanced to include shades of cream and gold, and vivid persimmon.

A flower bed of Calendulas is a neighborhood sensation; borders come alive with brightness, and random plantings are sparkling accents. Pots of blooming Calendulas displayed on the proch make unusual and colorful decorations.

FAIRY PRIMROSES introduce a different and pleasing dimension to the winter garden. What their blooms lack in brightness is made up for in charm and warmth. White, lavender and pink heads of color, borne above attractive mounds of crisp green foliage are a delightful addition to the late winter garden.

Plant them as an edging for a walk, as a border for a garden bed, or as fillers in-between existing shrubbery, and you'll discover the Fairy Primrose can hold its own in any company.

Some other annuals that can be planted now for winter cheer are the Snapdragons — dwarf, middle-size and tall —, Stocks, Pansies and Violas.

All will do a job for you. And do it when you need it most in your garden.

Don't Overlook American Bulbs

When you mention spring-blooming flower bulbs most people immediately start thinking of Tulips and Hyacinths "imported from Holland."

So you might be surprised to learn that there are many more American-grown bulbs planted in our home gardens in this area than there are imported bulbs.

The truth of the matter is that here in the United States we produce some of the finest bulbs in the world and, believe it or not, many millions of these bulbs are exported to Holland each year!

In all fairness it should be stated that the best Tulips, Hyacinths, Crocus, and other miscellaneous bulbs still are imported. A complete fall-planting bulb garden should contain both American and imported bulbs for the most outstanding results.

MOST OF THE bulbs produced in the United States come from our fertile soils here on the West Coast. From Southern California comes the world famous "Tecolote" Giant Ranunculus, Anemones, Freesias, Sparaxis, and many other miscellaneous bulb items. Further north in the states of Washington and Oregon, you'll find millions of Daffodils, Dutch Iris and Lily bulbs harvested each fall.

Let's review these "MADE IN U.S.A." Fall bulbs and see how they will fit into your gardening plans.

From Southern California:

RANUNCULUS ARE the most popular of all fall-planted bulbs, both domestic and imported, in areas with mild winters such as Marin. There is no other bulb that will give you more for your money, as just one bulb can reward you with up to 70 huge double blooms.

It is interesting to note that several million "Tecolote" Ranunculus are exported to Holland and other foreign countries each year, which is proof of how truly outstanding they are.

Anemones are the perfect companions to Ranunculus and require the exact same care and conditions. They are an excellent cut flower and will bloom continously in the garden for over a six to eight week period.

Freesias and Sparaxis naturalize very easily in our gardens and get better and better year after year. Both provide glorious garden color and the fragrant Freesia is an outstanding cut-flower for the home.

Grown in the Northwest:

DAFFODILS ARE a favorite with almost every gardener because they are so easy to grow. Besides the popular all Yellow variety, King Alfred, there are several new and different types you should try. Four of the best new introductions are Better Times (yellow petals with a flame cup), Califlora GIANT (huge all-yellow trumpet variety with flowers up to twice the size of King Alfred), Binkie (a new "reverse bicolor" with yellow petals and a white cup), and Riotous (a full double all-yellow variety.)

Dutch Iris are the mainstay of the Northwest bulb crops.

In spite of the name, American grown Dutch Iris are far superior to those produced in Holland. In fact, many many millions are exported to Holland each year.

ONE OF THE reasons that Dutch Iris are so popular with the home gardener is that there are several varieties that produce various shades of blue flowers, and blue is a hard to find color in most plants. You can have continous show of blue "orchid-type" blooms in your garden all spring by planting these three varieties of Dutch Iris — Wedgewood (early-flowering sky blue), Ideal (mid-season blooming bright blue), and Blue Ribbon (late-flowering dark blue).

We've mentioned just a few of the many different types of spectacular bulbs items produced in the United States. So the next time you select bulbs for your garden, don't just purchase those with the "imported label." Look a little further and buy some American-grown bulbs.

You'll be glad you did.

THE SNAPDRAGON is but one of the many annual flowers that can be planted to brighten the winter garden in Marin. But it is one of the best. The famous tall-growing Snapdragons have now been joined by dwarf types and a newer generation of intermediate-growers, so that these popular bloomers can be used in a wide variety of planting situations. Pictured is an intermediate-size Snapdragon, 18 to 24 inches tall, that has been used with other annuals to highlight a seasonal flower bed. Marin nurseries have "Snaps" for planting now.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Plant Sparaxis, Ixias, Dutch Iris and Freesias now. This foursome likes to go into the ground earlier than other spring-blooming bulbs.

✓Set-out Violas, Pansies, Calendulas and Iceland Poppies for bloom in fall and winter.

✓Dwarf Citrus can be put into tubs now, and used to decorate the sunny porch or entryway. Or you plant them in the garden where they will provide four-season enjoyment. Our local nurseries have the citrus varieties best for the area.

✓Choose potted Chrysanthemums, in festive fall colors, for displays indoors as well as accenting the garden.

✓Commerical soil conditioners are ideal for putting soil in a workable condition. They should be applied and worked-in before the rains start.

An Ideal Time To Plant Privacy

In planning and planting the garden for privacy, an effect of neatness and pleasing line of design can be achieved even while an effective screen is formed by plants.

The answer is to use those shrubs which excel as hedges and screens. Happily, for Marinites, there is no lack of such plant materials.

There are numerous shrubs to compliment any garden setting—and provide the desired degree of privacy. And, right now is an excellent time to set-out the plants.

There are many benefits to be derived by planting now.

THE CHIEF benefit, of course, is that you can enjoy the desired results much sooner than if you wait until spring to set-out the plants to create privacy in the garden. This is made possible because the plants become established before cold weather arrives. Even then, roots of the fall-planted specimens continue to develop and are mature enough to take advantage of the full growing season, next spring. This can mean added feet of branches on trees and with fall-planted shrubs can mean extra growth—when compared to spring-planted specimens, over a full growing season.

About the only plants which shouldn't be set-out now are the frost-tender ones. The evergreen shrubs for creating screens and privacy are basically a hardy lot, and should be planted now.

Boxwood and English Laurel are two traditional favorites for hedges and screens. For formal gardens they are outstanding; they can be clipped into any shape or form.

FASTER-GROWING choices include Carolina Cherry, Pittosporum and Xylosma. The latter is a spreading shrub, and its apple green foliage arches in attractive fashion. Carolina Cherry grows upright and semi-columnar, or oval.

For A Kitchen Just Like Mother Has

Daddy Can Build The Appliances

Handyman's Pages

By STEVE ELLINGSON

Children are great imitators.

Many a boy has developed a handiness with carpentry and woodworking tools in the workshop of his father.

And for small girls, mother's kitchen often holds the same fascination.

It is an opportunity to encourage the future homemaker in the development of good housekeeping habits and wise kitchen routines that should not be passed up.

AND THERE IS no surer way of teaching such accomplishments than making fun out of the learning.

Dad can contribute to wholesome trend by providing his little one with kitchen appliances that are almost exact duplicates of the models used by mother.

For instance, the refrigerator can have two doors, a freezer compartment, three shelves at the bottom and more shelves inside the doors — just like mother's indispensable appliance.

A DUTCH CABINET can have open-grooved shelves for display of dishes, along with drawers and doors for dinnerware and silver.

The sink can be equipped with plastic dishpan and simulated hot and cold water taps.

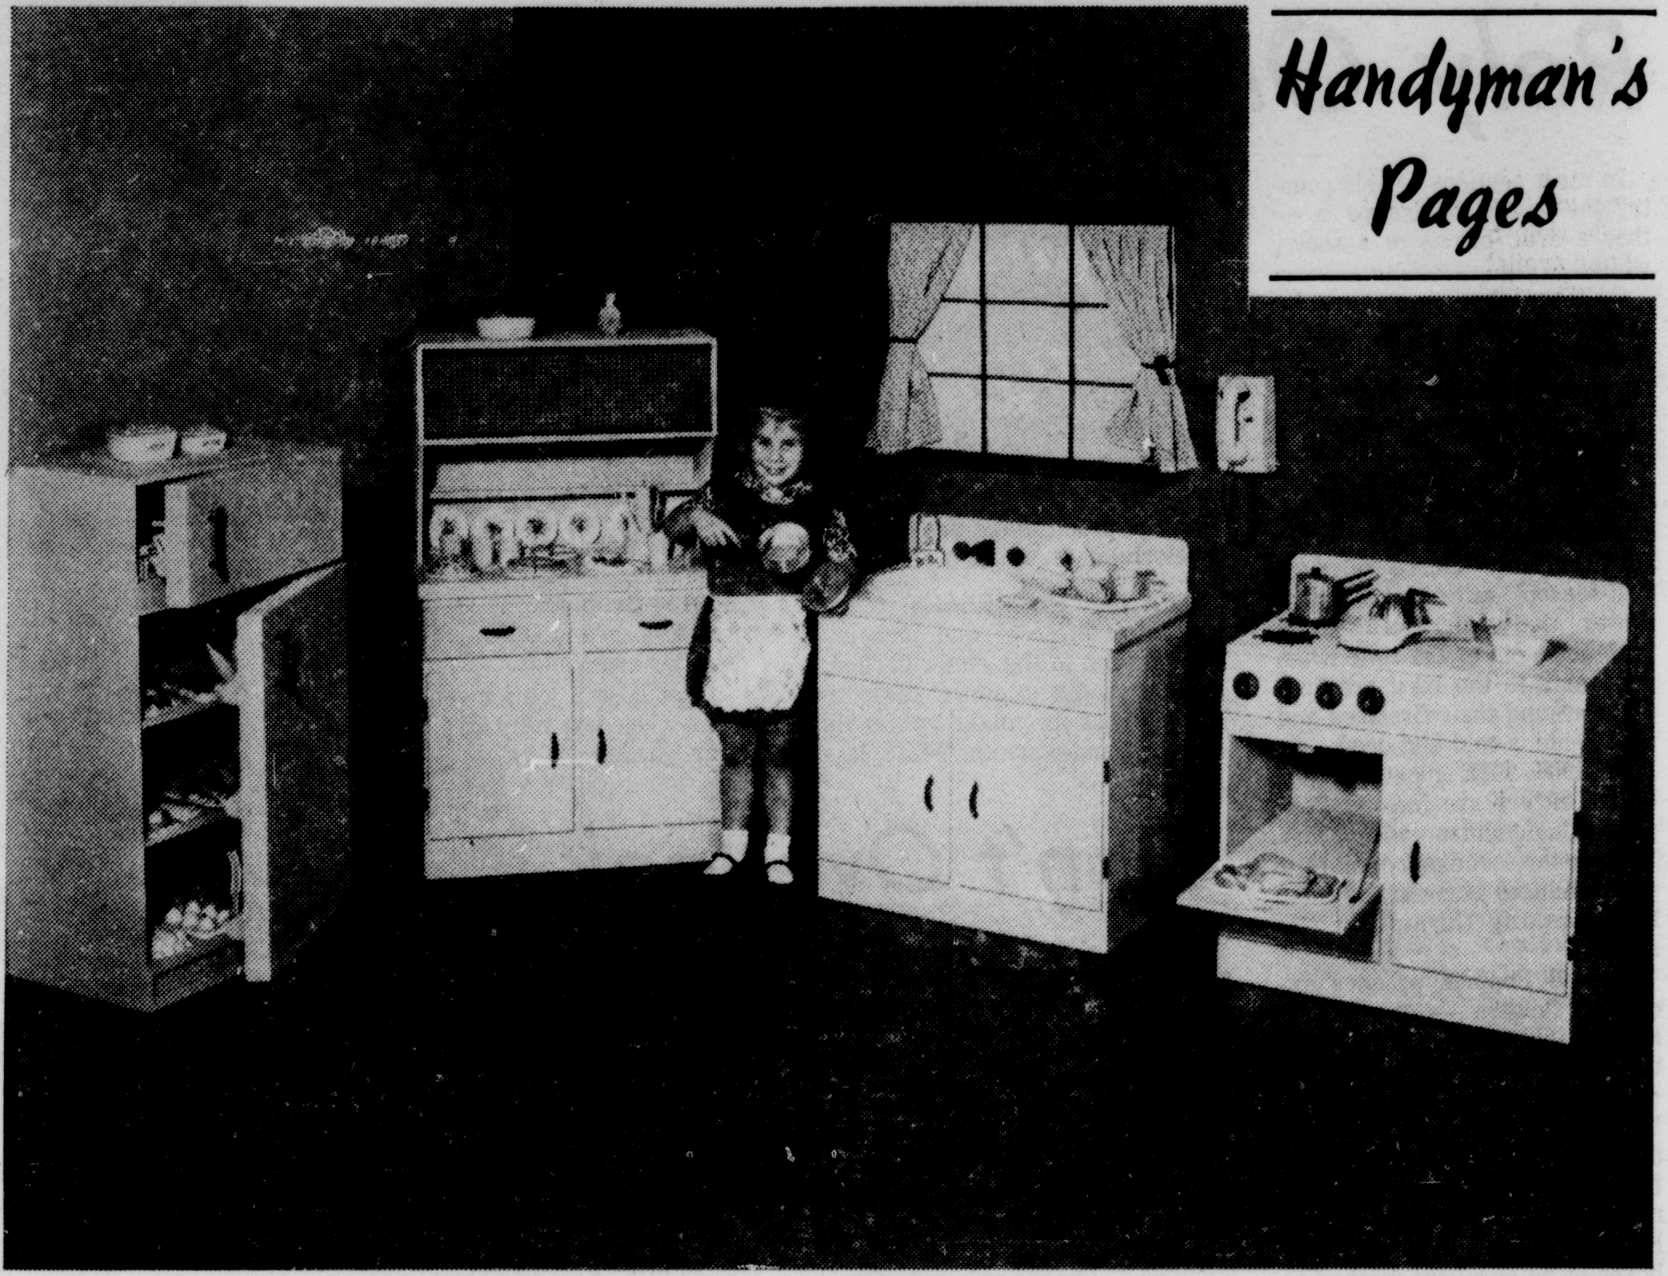
And a range can complete the kitchen equipment with its four burners and oven (complete with window) and storage for cookware.

All these, the home handyman can build. And his task will be greatly simplified if he has our patterns for these four child-sized appliances.

Just send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., and ask for Patterns No. 363.

You will receive detailed directions for the construction of all four pieces that can be built economically, using scrap pieces of wood for the most part.

The oven controls? They are made from surplus radio knobs.



DADDY CAN BRING a special sparkle to the eyes of his little darling this Christmas with the gift for her room of a set of kitchen appliances just like mother's. Refrigerator, cabinet, sink and range can all be built by the home handyman with the aid of Steve Ellingson's patterns. And, incidentally, it is one good way to keep little girls out from underfoot while mother is busy in her own kitchen.

YOUR HOME: Indoor-Outdoor Carpet Acceptance

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Two or three years ago it was mighty controversial to suggest a carpet in the garden, on the front steps or back porch. But after months and years of tramping over hotel and motel entry carpeting, supermarket flooring and sports palaces, the great bulk of the public no longer gets stirred up at the thought.

And although I personally haven't had an excuse to install carpet in the kitchen at home, I have always used a handsome, decorative area rug on the floor in front of the kitchen sink.

SO MY MIND and body are ready, even though my pocketbook isn't.

One of the latest developments in materials that make indoor-outdoor carpet practical is a backing product called Omalon. It's a patented carpet foundation made by Olin Corp., and because of its heat, moisture and mildew resistance it should hold up in most situations in or out of the house.

The manufacturers say it will work efficiently, even below grade level where moisture sometimes erodes fibers.

Olin does not make carpet, but the backing is used on famous brands such as Lee's Topside pattern shown at right. The upper surface of this carpet is a polypropylene loop, sheared to create a nice pile texture. The combination of the surface texture and the Omalon foundation, which is a high-density polymeric foam, give the floor covering that extra bit of cushion.

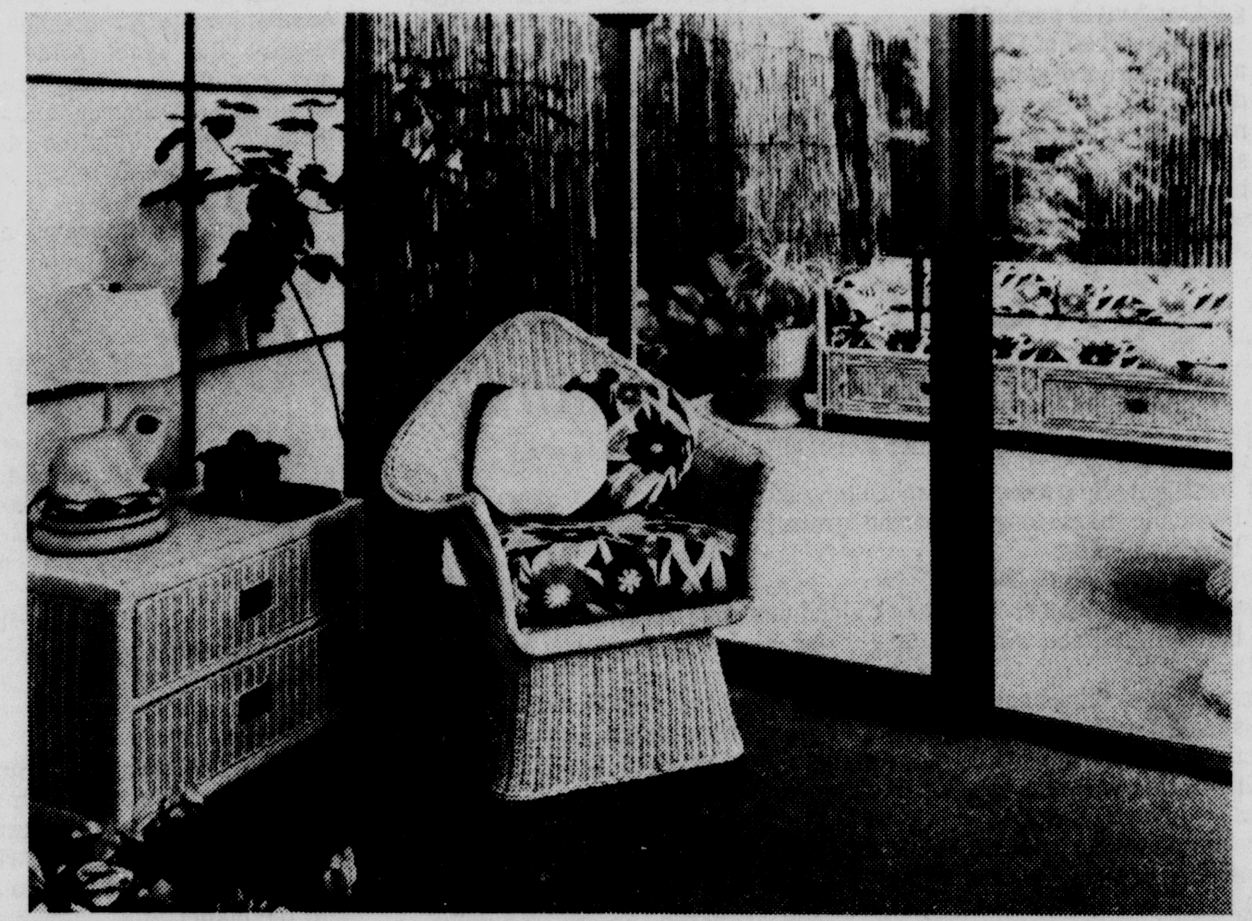
The springiness, according to Olin staffers, helps you to walk softer and allows you to get longer wear from the product.

THEY ALSO CLAIM that there will be no shrinking, even under moist atmospheric conditions.

When designers use indoor-outdoor carpeting they usually want to visually extend a space beyond the existing structural barrier. That works beautifully when floor-to-ceiling windows exist, or when a semienclosed porch or terrace is closely related to an interior room in the house.

But basement rooms, garage floors, the steps up to an elderly parent's apartment or house, the slippery area around a swimming pool — these are other possible locations for that heavy-duty carpeting.

Children's rooms offer the designing mother a challenge. Mother and son or daughter can carpet a wall as well as the floor and let the youngster tack things to it, nail steps and stairs to it, hang storage cubes, toys, tennis rackets — kick it — you name it. The carpeting will take the beating and absorb a good bit of the noise pollution, too.



YOU CAN "SOFT-SHOE" out of the house into the garden without a misstep, if you are traipsing on Lee's Topside indoor-outdoor floor covering. A new foundation called Omalon makes the carpeting both soft and durable.

Building And Enjoying A Home Greenhouse Needn't Be Costly

You Can Erect A Lean-To Version To Fit Your House Style And Space

Building and enjoying a greenhouse isn't a luxury for the idle rich, but an adventure in living available to home owners, with only slight budget stretching.

A well-built wood greenhouse, properly cared for, will serve a lifetime.

There are several styles and variations, including even-span attached or free-standing, breezeway, and lean-to. Some greenhouses are combined with lath houses or pavilions for outdoor living areas.

A CONNECTED greenhouse often becomes the most popular room in a house. Adjoining a family or living room through sliding glass doors, it can be a favorite spot to enjoy flowers and plants as well as an unusual place for entertaining or just relaxing while soaking up the sun.

A connected greenhouse with even spans of glass on both sides of the center beam offers the best growing conditions, but frequently a lean-to fits better because of limited space or house style.

The lean-to, located on a wall of the house or garage so that south, east and west rays of the sun are not cut off, is built of four-by-four and two-by-four-inch western wood framing lumber — cedar, fir or pine — treated with a preservative because of constant humid conditions.

LOWER PORTIONS of the walls are of tongue and groove wood siding stained or painted to complement the house exterior.

For greenhouse glazing, glass is always good, but plastic panels give light diffusion for plant growth, are easy to work with and hard to break.

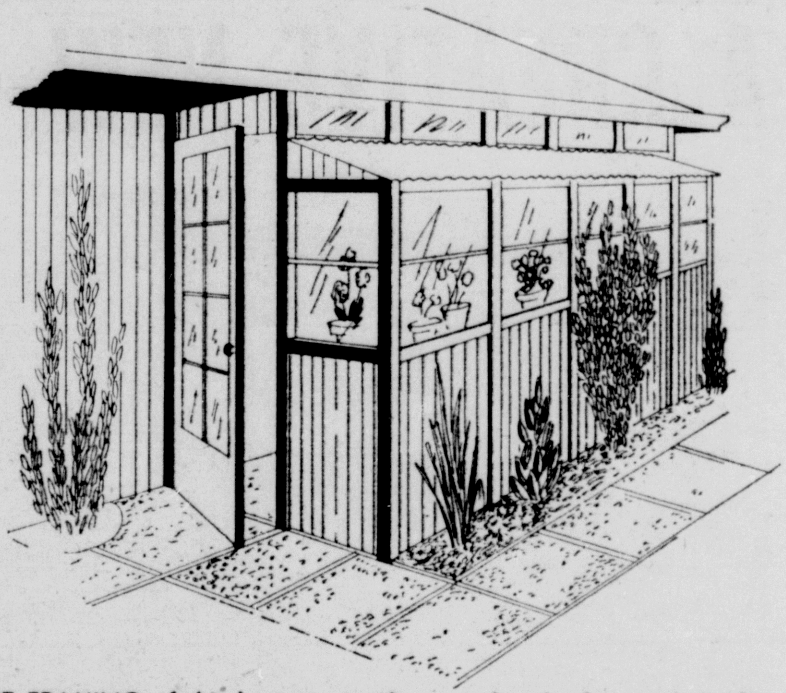
Hinged basement window sash can be used at the ends to assure good ventilation, important along with a heating unit and water supply. An outside door must be provided to move materials in and out.

PLANT BENCHES should be from 24 to 30 inches high, depending on height of plants grown and of the person tending them. They're built of one-by-six-inch western wood boards, with slight spacing for drainage, and two-by-four-inch legs and cross braces.

Benches ordinarily should be limited to three feet wide.

Space under benches can be used for storage of potting-soil blends.

When cabinets or work benches must be added to a greenhouse, they should be placed in the northwest corner to avoid shading any areas from the sun.



THE FRAMING of this lean-to greenhouse is four-by-four and two-by-four western wood treated with preservative because of constant humidity. Siding is tongue and groove cedar or fir. Hinged end windows give ventilation.
